Dr. Cloyd:

So that we are able to conduct the business of this meeting in an orderly fashion, I would ask that ringers on all cell phones be either turned off or put on vibration, and I would also ask the members of the audience to observe rules of the decorum proper to conduct of the business at hand.

At this time I would like to welcome Jason Marion, our new graduate professional student trustee appointed by Governor Strickland on June 4, of this year. Jason is a two-time graduate of Morehead State University, where he received a bachelor of science in environmental science, and a master's degree in biology. He is currently pursuing a Ph.D. in public health here at Ohio State with a focus on environmental health sciences and epidemiology. We are pleased to have you join the Board of Trustees, Jason, and we look forward to your input and help dealing with the matters of the University, so welcome.

I would also like to welcome a new faculty member here, Dr. Steve Gabbe, who has now joined us as the Senior Vice President of Health Sciences. This is Dr. Gabbe's second tour of duty here at Ohio State, and we are extraordinarily pleased to have him return to Ohio State from Vanderbilt, which is becoming a good recruiting pool for us here at Ohio State. It is an exciting time for the Medical Center. We will hear some about that in today's meeting as we deal with the business at hand, but Dr. Gabbe, welcome. It is great to have you here.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Dr. Steven G. Gabbe:

Thank you, great to be here.

Dr. Cloyd:

I would like to now call on President Gee for his report.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

President Gee:

Thank you very much ladies and gentlemen. Welcome! It's a beautiful day today and happy anniversary to me. A year ago today I announced my decision to return to Ohio State, the whole purpose of course was to attract Steve Gabbe. The year that followed has been amongst the most satisfying and exciting of my life, I can assure you. Thankfully my task at the moment though is not to sum up 365 days, but only the 35 days since my last report. I think it is safe to say that those of us who participated in commencement on June 8, are now fully rehydrated. It was, as many of you know, a wonderful occasion despite a blazing sun and oppressive heat. We celebrated the graduation of 8,000 students, and lost a little weight at the same time, add in Brian Williams' humor and wisdom, and it really was a great day.

The morning after commencement I began an odyssey of astounding proportions, making good on my commitment to re-visit each of Ohio's 88 counties before the end of August. As of this moment I have crossed 43 counties off my list, from Youngstown to Toledo, to Portsmouth, I have had the pleasure of talking with scores of alumni and friends of the University. The experience has been both humbling and educational. Humbling because I have been reminded every step of the way just how much this University means to the people of Ohio; and educational, obviously in several ways. I learned for example that each manufacturing plant could use the help of our faculty in finding ways to make their tractor trailers less wind resistant, and at Welch Brothers Dairy farm in Newcomerstown, my education took a more personal turn. I learned that when a cow twitches her tail in a certain sort of way, you have fractions of a second to get the hell out of the way. That was a first I might add. At the Highway Patrol office in Georgetown I experienced another first. There our extension office coordinates the CARTEENS program, re-education boot camp for young drivers with traffic violations of all sorts. Part of their program involves wearing large goggles that distort vision and equilibrium. The idea is to mimic the effects of alcohol, so while I remain a Mormon in good standing, I now have felt what it is like to be intoxicated. It is exhilarating; no it was miserable, I assure you. I was discombobulated and queasy and very glad to take off those goggles, but all in all my visits to farms, factories, museums and extension offices have underscored my belief in the transformative power of Ohio State. No doubt about it - we are Ohio's University.

This has been a busy month for news about our faculty research. The work of Dr. Yousef Mohammad, a neurologist at the Medical Center, recently hit the papers from Boston Herald to The Times of India. Dr. Mohammad is the lead investigator in a study of new portable devices that safely and painlessly stop certain migraine headaches. The device delivers magnetic pulses that interrupt the electrical overactivity which causes migraines. FDA approval is expected in the coming months. You also might have heard about the University's work in collaboration with others to develop dandelions as a domestic source for natural rubber. The work just received $3 million in funding from the Ohio Third Frontier Program. It has important implications of course for Ohio's tire manufactures, as well as several other industries. Finally Nationwide Insurance and the Fisher College of Business have created the Center for Advanced Consumer Insights. Through this new partnership graduate students and faculty will help elevate consumer behavior. This is a great opportunity to provide helpful expertise to industry and to give students a valuable hands-on marketing experience.

How about an athletic report? Those whose minds have turned to football likely know that Terrelle Pryor is now on campus, being measured and gauged every way imaginable. Pre-season rankings have buckeye fans everywhere ready for the season to begin, and two weeks ago Ohio State's national champion fencing squad was honored at the White House. The team presented President Bush with a framed photograph of Ohio Stadium. The three members of the Buckeye fencing team will be competing in the Beijing Olympics next month. In fact, so many Ohio State students and alumni are competing in the games that they might as well have chartered their own scarlet and gray airplane. A total of 16 Buckeyes will compete in Beijing. Gymnastics head coach, Miles Avery, is once again assisting the U.S. Team and bringing with him Olympic veterans Morgan and Paul Hamm; other Ohio State Olympians include swimmers, synchronized swimmers, rowers, basketball, tennis, and softball players.

Of course there is other news. On July 1, we began implementing the University's new recycled paper policy. I admit it, it sounds small. It is not, think about this, the move is estimated to divert nearly 400 thousand pounds of solid waste from landfills. The policy is an important part of our comprehensive strategy to reduce waste and be good stewards of our natural resources.

As you know we hired Jonathan Hook, our new vice president and chief investment officer. He is one of the countries best performing money managers. Jonathan's efforts will be critical to our commitment to grow donors' investments and to underwrite the excellent work of faculty and students. He will join several new senior leaders who are beginning their work with us this summer. Kathy Starkoff, of course Dr. Gabbe, Caroline Whitacre, and with us today are two new campus leaders. Professor of political sciences, Richard (Dick) Gunther, Dick please raise your hand, who is the new chair of our faculty council, a very important member of our faculty and one of our key research and teaching leaders; and Katie Hall, Katie if you will raise your hand, who works as a consultant in the office of human resources and is the new chair of the University Staff Advisory Council.

So, all in all the past 35 days have been what one would say a full month. As you know I do not care much for the rearview mirror, I prefer to look forward, but today's anniversary is a deeply meaningful one for me. It compels me to make this observation, Clark Kerr, the late president of the University of California and a very dear friend of mine once cautioned me not to fall in love with any university I led. He said it would "never love you back." Now Clark Kerr was a very smart man, but he was absolutely wrong, he did not know Ohio State. This incredible University and the people who are part of it in each of Ohio's 88 counties and around the world have shown me an avalanche of love this past year. So I work each day to be worthy of that affection, so one year after my decision to return, I am more grateful than ever to be back home, so I thank you Mr. Chairman.

Dr. Cloyd:

Wonderful report, and Gordon, speaking for the entire Board we are very happy to have you here and the love you have described is reciprocated very much by this Board. We could not be happier with your leadership.

We will now move to committee reports.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

I would ask Board members as we are talking try to lean forward into the microphones because otherwise the people in the back of the room really cannot hear us.

We will begin with the Medical Affairs Committee.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Mr. Brass:

Thank you Mr. Chairman and good afternoon everyone. Very exciting times for the Medical Center. Today's meeting will culminate multiple years of planning as it relates to moving forward with the Master Facilities Plan, and I just want to thank everybody publically that had any part in this whatsoever, bringing it to the point we are today. We started our meeting by also welcoming our new senior vice president, and we extend that to his better half Pat as well. They are going to be delightful to interact with as the years go on here. Welcome back Steve, welcome back.

I am going to recap where we are right now so that we in fact for the record have a really good understanding as to what this Medical Center Master Facility Plan will be meaning to us and where we are with the planning process. It is the largest project to date that The Ohio State University will have ever undertaken. It is broken into two phases, phase one starts in 2009 and takes us to 2014 and phase two is 2014 through 2016.

I want to make sure that everybody understands that we have a strategic plan that has been developed both short-term and long-term, and that is consistent with the University's plan at this point. It is important to understand that the bonds and the debt that will be issued are with the understanding and the forecasted model to maintain our bond rating not only at the Medical Center but more importantly at the University. It is important to know that the leadership of the Medical Center is 100% in agreement with the plan and united as we are going forward. A project management structure has now been put in place to manage this project and we expect in the next 30, maybe 60 days to be naming an executive director of that project. Because of its size and complexity that will be a very important office that has been developed.

It is important to know that the circuit breakers, in the event that the forecasted model do not hit, are put in place so that we have them prioritized in the event that we have to execute some of those circuit breakers. We have finalized the financial plan including three different scenarios that we have worked our way through, that were very important. One very positive, one very negative, and one most likely, which is the one we are building the plan on.

There are three very key financial ratios that will be monitored on an ongoing basis that will in fact help us guide this project. One of those is our EBIDA ratios, one is our day's cash on hand, and the third one is our debt service ratios. We have to maintain those ratios in order for the forecast not to get off balance. The plan calls for $75 million to be raised for phase one, and our policy and practice has been that 75% of that needs to be raised before construction would start.

I mentioned debt, and I am sure we will be covering that in the Fiscal Affairs Committee as well. One of the important things we have spent time on, and Dr. Souba and others have spent time on, is the retention of clinical faculty. We are blessed here with some very, very strong superstars - medically and surgically. It is important that they in fact buy in on this plan. It is important that we retain those individuals and we continue to recruit that type and caliber of physicians to our organization.

It is very important for the Board to know that this plan calls for major efficiencies to be maintained and things to be improved as it relates to the overall efficiency of the organization. The reason I bring that on the table is we have to come out of the gate now in picking up some of those efficiencies. We cannot maintain these forecasted models without the efficiency ratios being achieved. We have brought in two outside organizations, two consultants, to give us a second opinion on the entire planning process, the financial forecasting process and the construction. That being Deloitte, and that being Hammes, and I am happy to tell you that their reports are complete now, it is consistent with what our plan is all about. They had three vulnerable areas that we in fact have taken into consideration. One is to watch the volumes very carefully as we go forward, two is to make sure that we in fact stay close to the plan as it relates to those efficiencies, and the third is to make sure that the managed care rate structures that we have built into the forecast are achieved. In the event that they are not then we will in fact adjust the plan accordingly.

We know that we have to spend special attention on the west Cannon plan with that being the newest part of the Master Facilities Plan, and that was echoed again by Hammes. The good news is that the budget seems to be secure for the construction of this program, as large as it is. Today we have a resolution that will ask for an additional $57 million of planning and design money. That would bring the total to $107 million for this $1 billion project that is about to move forward.

I want to publically thank Bill Shkurti, who took the lead on this; Chip Souba, Pete Geier and Jay Kasey. Jay Kasey currently has been our project officer in charge of this project. He will be moving back to the operations spot, which is very important to have that continuity between the operations of the Medical Center, and the project office as we move forward with this very large construction project. Steve Gabbe, welcome aboard again, and our finance person, John Stone.

So Mr. Chairman I believe we are at the point, and later we will vote on it, but the Medical Center is now ready for its expansion project and the Committee unanimously voted to move it forward.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Brass, a very comprehensive report. I think before I open it up with questions, since this was also reviewed with our Fiscal Affairs Committee, Ms. Davidson I would like to know, do you have any additional bills or adds that you would like to provide?

Ms. Davidson:

No, I think that a couple of the members of the Fiscal Affairs Committee also serve on Medical Affairs, but we did take the time to be sure that everybody was comfortable at our meeting, Mr. Chairman, with all the information that our group had brought forward, and it was also a unanimous vote before the Fiscal Affairs Committee to approve the resolution.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you. We will open it up now for questions from Board members.

I have one, Mr. Brass. As we think about this in a full Board context, what would be the next key milestone that we should engage in? You mentioned you have a variety of things that you have put in place for the risk management, but for the full Board what should we be thinking about and what will be the next key milestone?

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Mr. Brass:

I think there will be three actually Mr. Chairman. First will be that at the next Medical Affairs Committee meeting, we will be taking a hard look at a benchmark scorecard that will track this project from beginning to end and I think at the appropriate time we should share that with the full Board.

The second part is the president of the University is going to be taking a look along with our HOK architects to make sure the Master Facility Plan is appropriate for the University as a whole and I think that should be shared with the Board.

Then the third part is construction will start in 2010, with the two large towers, and as we get closer to that construction document and planning process being complete, we should be sharing that with the Board as well.

Dr. Cloyd:

Other questions or comments?

Mr. McFerson:

Alan, I always appreciated hearing those thorough reports, is there a fourth as well. You said that 75% of the fundraising objective must be met before construction begins, and I am wondering if you might share with us where we are in that objective.

Mr. Brass:

Where is my good friend Peter?

Peter, being brand new we have gone over the goals set and Peter, I will turn it over to you.

Mr. Peter B. Weiler:

Are you looking for a dollar figure? I can tell you that we have begun to solicit the larger gifts for that. We have had some success. I feel fairly confident in that number. I should not quote you a number that I am not absolutely sure on, but we have begun soliciting the larger gifts for that and David Schuller if you have anything to add, but I feel pretty good with the momentum so far with a project that we do not have a lot to show by the way.

Mr. Brass:

We have the two years, and I do believe that the project now being defined the way it is will allow us to go out with specifics as it relates to the ask, Dimon, and in addition to that a very important side bar to that is, if we are more than successful, lets say we raise greater than $75 million, we have agreed then to apply the additional contributions, the additional philanthropic monies, to reduce the debt to the project, which I think is a very important principle. I think we are early on in the campaign, it is just coming out of the gate. The asks are starting, and the needs are now finite as it relates to what we are building, and what time frame they will be built in. Peter is just coming out of the gate, but we will be watching that, and you are correct that is a fourth.

Dr. Cloyd:

Anything else?

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Thank you Mr. Brass. We will next go to Audit and Compliance, and Mr. McFerson I believe you are going to provide that report.

Mr. McFerson:

I am, Chairman Schottenstein had to leave, but before I begin I would like to ask Dr. Gee as a practicing Mormon, where do I find some of those goggles?

President Gee:

For you in a bottle.

Mr. McFerson:

The Audit and Compliance Committee met yesterday and we had a good meeting. We began the meeting in Executive Session and then we heard from our Director of Internal Audit, Kevin Patton, on the FY09 internal audit work plan. This is pretty much a second reading if you will and everyone felt comfortable proceeding with that.

Then we had a terrific report from Renne Komula and Michael St. Clair talking about the facilities compliance and an overview of that area of environmental health and safety. It is good to have Jason with us, this is his area of specialty and he can help us in this area for sure. There is a whole host of compliance areas at this University, there are 36 FTE in this area. You might think that is maybe too many, but when you see all that they are responsible for, my goodness it is pretty extensive. Just in the last 16 months, they have had 27 visits from federal, state or local regulatory agencies, and received generally one or no comments from their visits, so we are doing a very, very fine job of staying in compliance in all dozens and dozens of environmental and health and safety regulatory areas.

We next heard a report on enterprise risk management from Gaibrelle Reissland and essentially this is a report on the property and casualty insurance program for the University to cover not only the property areas and the casualty areas but also fine arts. This was a very good insurance report and we continue to have good coverages in the soft market, we are getting better pricing. There appear to be no gaps in coverages, our retention levels are about the same, even though our exposures have continued to increase as this campus continues to grow.

Then we concluded with a brief report from our general counsel on the creation of a new LLC that has not yet been formed, but to make a recommendation and we will have this come forth also from the Committee on Trusteeship, that Trustee Bob Schottenstein be appointed on this new LLC, which I am sure will get some attention when it is officially formed. I think it will be by the next meeting. And that concludes the Audit and Compliance Committee report.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. McFerson. Any questions or comments?

We will now have the Academic Affairs and Student Life Committee report.

Ambassador Ong:

Being at the end of the academic year, Provost Alutto gave the committee a very interesting report on his view of the progress made on strategic priorities for the year 2007-08 and also a first impression as to what these priorities would be and what action would take place in the ensuing academic year. The top priority last year was an investigation of the University's budget processes. A committee was appointed for this purpose and the primary finding of that committee of faculty and administrative personnel is that the budget system is sound. The expressions of concern about the soundness of the system had been heard from various quarters, but the overall finding is that while we may have problems and concerns; the system itself works and is appropriate to the activities of the University.

A few comments on that under this budget system is that most of the University's general funds budget is allocated to the college. In FY08, $563 million was earmarked for the colleges with $212 million being reserved for central administration, basically administered by the academic affairs office. In FY08 the provost had just under $5 million for strategic initiatives. This is very interesting because there was wide spread concern according to the provost within the faculty that in fact insufficient funds were flowing from the center to the colleges, and the committee's findings definitely indicated that the common wisdom in this case was wrong.

Over the last five college budgets, actually the last five years, college budgets have increased by a little more than 25%, and in that same general time period, in addition to those budget increases, more than $100 million in cash and continuing funds have been invested in the colleges by the Office of Academic Affairs and the Office of Research. The budget study committee did make some recommendations. They indicated that a greater effort should be made to align resources with strategic priorities at the University level and the college level and that we should give even greater importance to the idea of investing in distinctive advantages, increasing our investment in areas of excellence that already exist in order to enhance the reputation and the usefulness of the University. Also a recommendation that we needed to be certain that there was transparency throughout the system for accountability and trust, and that we educate people involved in the budgeting system to increase their effectiveness. A key observation of the committee was that while we have problems in budgeting, those problems relate not to the adequacy of the system, but rather to poor decision making by people who have an inadequate understanding of the budgeting system, so the future education of all those involved, and there are many involved in the budgeting process, is an important consideration. And finally, a recommendation that increased efforts be made to leverage our resources across the University.

Outstanding budget systems issues identified by the committee that will be looked at in the future include the problem of start-up costs for new programs and new hires, funds for significant central investment, funding doctoral program quality based upon the rank ordering of doctoral programs that has just been completed and issues about what effect the University System of Ohio may have on our budgeting process. This is a general cautionary observation because of course we do not really know enough about that to be able to have a precise concern, and plant operation and maintenance costs, something that we have all been aware of requires added attention.

Highlights of the progress on last year's other priorities, in addition to the budgeting study include the following: the development of strategic plans for all the colleges with final iterations due at the beginning of September; the development of the academic core north project, with the first multi-college building proposal now on the table; the administrative restructuring of the arts and sciences federation, which was recently accomplished; the further internationalizing of the University with the establishment of a president's and provost's council on strategic internationalization; and the launching of a search for a vice provost for global strategies and international affairs. The provost was frank in saying that this was a particular area where perhaps not as much was accomplished this year as he had hoped but it is very high on the agenda at this point; administrative changes to ensure better coordination between the James Cancer Hospital and the Medical Center, something that Mr. Brass has touched on; the enhancement of information security campus wide after several incidents where there were security breaches; efforts to ensure that the chancellor's master plan for higher education in Ohio continues to recognize this University's unique status; continuing development of outreach and engagement strategies as it fits a global University, here again an area where execution is in a fairly early phase; the completion of the first phase of an ongoing review of all our doctoral programs and the implementation of recommendations by the review committee on undergraduate education which resulted in some important changes in the structure for undergraduates; the formation of a talent acquisition retention and engagement strategy committee to recommend methods to attract and retain key faculty and staff; the resolution of problems concerning student financial aid difficulties and ongoing assessments of how best to provide support for low income families; and successful competition for stem funding through the choose Ohio First scholarship and the Ohio Research Scholars program. We had a very interesting discussion at that point in the provost's presentation which really converged upon what strategic priorities should be assigned to restructuring the University. The president who was with us shared some of his broad thinking about the need for some very fundamental restructuring down the road, but we also talked quite a bit about transinstitutional programs, something that the president has made a particular priority and interest of his. The provost pointed out that the James Cancer Hospital, which we all know is an important part of the University, is as well probably one of the finest examples of transinstitutional activity with faculty involvement across many colleges and departments well beyond the medical side of the University, and he pointed out, when asked, did this come about as a result of an initiative or did it just happen. His view was that this happened because the people at the James were viewing a problem, the problem of cancer cures, and that they automatically, and focusing on problem solution found the need to consult with and collaborate with people from all across the University. We had quite an interesting discussion. Perhaps we need to find more problems like that and use those as the initiators for more transinstitutional activity.

The provost then turned to priorities for the coming academic year in the Office of Academic Affairs, and he even mentioned in particular infrastructure issues such as student housing and enhancing learning technology across the University; resource issues such as faculty and staff recruitment and the development of the University System of Ohio, which we need to monitor carefully; programmatic issues such as the coordination of life sciences, something that is being looked at right now; the environmental and earth sciences across the whole University.; the further development of the arts and sciences federation; and the expansion of Ohio State's international presence.

Following the provost's presentation the committee next heard some clarifications from Vice President and General Counsel Chris Culley, concerning records retention and finally Provost Alutto presented a number of routine personnel actions, two new degree programs and a new tenure track program in the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, all of which are part of the consent agenda.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Ambassador, there is certainly a lot of activities outlined in the report you have and that reflected what Provost Alutto provided against the priorities.

Do you have an overall conclusion on the progress we are making towards one Ohio State University, because it seems so much of what you have covered is directed toward that and so if you take all of the items that you have listed, how are you feeling verses the overall progress we are making toward that goal?

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Ambassador Ong:

I think that all the other members of the committee would agree with me and I suspect all the members of the Board would agree with me in saying that I could not imagine a year ago that we would have made as much progress toward that goal as we have in fact made. There have been some advances in unification, if I can use that word, or purpose and execution that I frankly thought if they ever occurred would take much longer than 12 months. So my overall view is that we are making excellent progress at a very fast rate. Does more need to be done? Obviously, we have a long way to go, but the purpose and the focus and the determination are there, so long as those are sustained then I think it won't be very long until everybody will be talking about the one Ohio State University.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much, other questions or comments for the Ambassador?

Let me add just my compliments Provost. Really remarkable progress over this last year, I know it has taken a lot of hard work from you and all the deans and the others to get us this far but it is terrific and it is absolutely what we need to do.

We will next go to Fiscal Affairs Committee.

Ms. Davidson:

Thank you very much Mr. Chairman. We started out our meeting yesterday with the quarterly project status report which gives us the ability to watch the major projects that are going on across the campus to see where we are as far as being on time and on budget. There are nine major projects in process, lots more projects, but the major ones that actually total over $400 million and very pleased to have the report that each one of those projects are on time and on budget. I want to thank Melissa Bellini and her staff because they are the ones that watch over that all the time. I think this is the first time that we have seen a report that every one of the projects is doing very well.

The other items discussed are on the consent agenda today. Items 14 through 19, starting with the operating budget, the fiscal year 2009 operating budget, Ambassador, I was pleased to hear your comments that you decided process was a good process because we are going to ask you to adopt this budget today. Let me just highlight some of the things that are in this budget; we will come back with some more details for you in September but as you know right now we are operating on an interim budget period of time, so we have the authority to continue to spend until we adopt the permanent budget now.

There is a compensation package in the budget which will be a merit pool of at least 3.5% for adjustments in compensation for faculty and staff. There is certainly a huge important thing, which is called access, because this is the second year and a first time certainly in the history of the University that we have gone two years with a tuition freeze, and this is in return for the commitment that the state made to us in funding, but that will be a $15 million savings for Ohio families in freezing this tuition. The budget strengthens the quality of our graduate programs by obviously giving some incentives for the quality graduate programs. It has a $10 million stability fund in it. With the uncertainty of the economy right now and how that affects the state and effects all of our other fees and other things that we earn; we felt that it was important to have that kind of stability protection as we go through this, and if it aligned with President Gee's six objectives. The total revenue increase from FY08 to FY09 is 4.6%, but I would mention that helping us to keep it at 4.6% was the state share of the 9.6% increase funding in return for the tuition freeze that the University agreed to. Our total expenditure increase was 4.5%. We have talked a lot about having some flexibility in funds to address many of the things that we want to do across the campus. There is a central discretionary fund of about $45.5 million in which we will give you more details on the recommendations for that expenditure in September, but it will help us to fund University wide initiatives to strengthen our core support services in cross college boundaries. We have full expectation to meet the state's requirement on efficiency because one of the other requirements is not that you just freeze your tuition but that you have to show a report that you have had certain efficiencies to save certain money in each year. Last year our goal on the efficiency was $4.7 million, we filed a report to show that we had an efficiency of $68.9 million. The goal for the second year is $14.2 million in efficiency savings, and we are confident that we will be able to meet that goal. And, the budget meets all of OSU financial goals on margin, liquidity and debt coverage. We recommended that we support this FY09 budget and again we will be providing you with additional details in September.

We had three resolutions that relate to keeping all of our construction projects going out on campus. One of them was for the issuance of $227 million in commercial paper and the other two were for issuing both fixed and variable bonds in the amount of $363 million for a 20 year maturity. And I would point out because we have talked about needs for student housing and other things improving of our student housing, of the bond issue at the $363 million, $108 million will go to student life projects and $120 million will go to the Medical Center space expansion program that we are working on.

The Board had previously given approval, which we try to do to give our senior vice president of finance here some goals to work by, a $400 million limit on the bond proposal, but we are only coming in at $363 million so we are well under that limit. If we approve them today, all three of these issues then need to go to the Board of Regents for their approval, and if they are approved on the bond issuance, we would expect to issue those bonds in the month of August.

We have already talked about the resolution that jointly came out of Medical Affairs and the Fiscal Affairs Committee which would authorize $57 million in design work for six projects that are related to the Medical Center expansion. Lastly on our agenda was the design construction manager in commission contracts for renovation of bathrooms and installing air conditioning for some of our student housing and for one project at OARDC.

Mr. Chairman, all of these are recommended for approval by the Board.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much Ms. Davidson. I apologize for asking the question again about energy reserves, but every time we get into budgets it comes to mind. Are we confident in the budget that is being proposed that we have properly reserved the impacts on who knows where energy costs are going to go over the coming year.

Ms. Davidson:

I am going to ask Mr. Shkurti if he would like to express his confidence on that issue.

Mr. Shkurti:

Mr. Chairman, anyone who says they are confident in predicting exactly where energy prices will go, other than up is probably a bit misguided, but we have projected we carry over and reserve about a $10 million energy reserve in addition to the increases we have already built in. As you may be aware, the last couple of months have seen a spike particularly in natural gas prices and we use natural gas.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

We are confident we will be able to get through the year but it is going to be a tough fight.

The other thing that I should point out is we have also built into the budget some additional funds to continue to do energy conservation and monitoring to improve our capability there.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Bill. Other questions?

Mr. McFerson:

Not being a member of your committee, the 3.5% salary pool, where does that place us with regard to our benchmark institutions on compensation?

Ms. Davidson:

You may remember that we had a compensation review from Larry Lewellen, and I think you might not have been there Dimon for that Board meeting. As you know we made a major attempt to do a catch-up and we did a pretty good job in doing that. Where we are right now - we have slipped down a little bit below that, and I will get a copy of that report so you can take a look at it, but the 3.5% pool that we have out there obviously is distributed, or the decisions are made on those by the deans in each one of those colleges. But we have tried to come up, and keep ourselves level with our benchmark institutions and we were doing a good job for a few years. It is hard to track it because we are never quite sure where they are going either, and their decisions have not been made so we will give you an update on that as soon as we have a better picture.

Mr. Marion:

Thank you Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Shkurti, if it would be alright, regarding the graduate financial aid decrease, how much of that is attributable to the changes in the three hour candidacy rule and the savings for the graduate students regarding tuition.

Mr. Shkurti:

Mr. Marion, all of it is attainable to the changes in tuition, so we are not really reducing the net amount of aid graduate students will receive. And what we are doing on the tuition side is for Ph.D. students who have finished their course work and who are writing their Ph.D. thesis, we are reducing the fees because the amount of faculty time and so forth required is substantially less and puts us more in line with the practice of other major research institutions, so we think that is a real plus for both the students and for our graduate and Ph.D. programs.

Mr. Marion:

Mr. Chairman, do you mind if I follow up? How will that impact our 260 credit hour subsidy we receive from the Board of Regents? Do you think this will enhance our ability to maintain more students on state subsidy?

Mr. Shkurti:

Mr. Marion, it will have no impact on our state share of instruction because the state, a number of years ago, although they still have the 260 credit hour rule, really changed the way we receive our state share of instruction. It is based on a share of the total formula and as long as our enrollment does not drop below 85% of what it was when they set the target, and it will not, we will get the same amount of state money.

Dr. Cloyd:

Other questions or comments?

Next we will have the report from the Committee on Trusteeship.

Mr. McFerson:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. We began our meeting with two consent agenda items that are before you today. Item number two and item number four. The first would be amendments to the Bylaws of the Board of Trustees and Rules of the University Faculty. We might consider this a second reading. There were virtually no changes from the first reading. This document does get changed from time to time to reflect the organization of the University and there still is the Medical Center portion of this to be addressed. The item I mentioned in the audit report, the approval for a trustee to serve on the Board of the new entity that will be formed, that would be Mr. Schottenstein.

We spent the bulk of our time talking about the fact that Professor Richard Chait is coming to our next Board meeting. We all remember, he has been with us a couple of times and helps us consider and recognize and discuss best practices, has helped us put together the expectations paper. I'm sure he will be looking to see if we are responding to that document that we so enthusiastically supported and how we are working and functioning as a Board, so we will spend some time between now and the September Board meeting getting ready for his visit and I will be working with Secretary Frantz and the chair on that.

We also spent a little bit of time talking about the issue of Board recognition events and we will spend some time working to have a more complete discussion on that at a subsequent meeting. We spent about an hour in our meeting.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. McFerson, are there any questions or comments?

We will next have the report from the Development and Investment Committee.

Mr. O'Dell:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. The Development and Investment Committee met yesterday afternoon. The first report was from Mr. Tom Johnson who presented the return on our investments for the year ending June 30. They were negative 8.1% and you know it has been a very, very difficult year in the market. That was followed by a report by Mr. Kerry Kirk of Cambridge Associates, who is one of our consultants, and he reported on the outlook for global financial markets, and in his opinion and in his firm's opinion it is going to remain a very difficult period of time for as far ahead as they can see. Next Mr. Bill Shkurti reported on the disposal of certain directly-owned real estate. Then Mr. Peter Weiler gave the development report and while development had a very good year overall, the month of June was not particularly good. We finished at 92% of goal, approximately $223 million. We think we are seeing the effects of the slowing economy and the bad stock market among other things.

We also reviewed the preliminary master campaign calendar. A great deal of work has been done on this matter. We are going to start the silent phase of the campaign January 1, 2009 and the campaign should run through June 30, 2016.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

And finally we reviewed and approved the appointment of investment managers and reallocation of funds that continue to move more in line with our recommended portfolio so that rebalancing continues, and we all look forward to the start of our new chief investment officer on August 1. That concludes my report Mr. Chairman.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. O'Dell. Did you discuss at all the time periods of when we would have what I would call interim kinds of milestones in the silent phase of the campaign so that we can start to understand the level of optimism or concern we should have regarding our goal as it relates to the comment of the economy and coming back to what the Cambridge folks said that they do not see the outlook improving in the near term.

Mr. O'Dell:

Well we certainly reviewed the plan, the meetings, the case that would be presented in terms of testing the case. We did not spend any time talking about how the economy or the stock market could effect the overall results or the overall goal, and Peter if you would like to add something.

Mr. Weiler:

Gil, we are just now beginning to meet with all the deans and looking at their individual goals, as those begin to wrap up we will then begin to get into the more direct solicitation strategies for our top prospects over the next 12 to 18 months. That is probably going to begin to tell us where we think we may or may not be in terms of what they are going to do. That will be the telling tale frankly and that is why when you begin a silent phase you do not specifically say we are going to start the campaign on this particular day. That is our version or a circuit breaker, we need to see how we track on the biggest gifts, and that will give us a sense I think, in the first 18 months how we are going to track on the numbers.

Dr. Cloyd:

Good, and that is exactly in the context that I asked the question Peter. I was just wondering once you get started, not trying to pin for a specific day, a month in 2009, but when would you think would be a range of time as a circuit breaker, that the Board will know vis a vis the nature of the current climate in the marketplace and with people, where would we be in terms of our campaign goals and objectives in terms of levels of confidence.

Mr. Weiler:

I think we are going to know in the first 12 months. I think we will know by this time next year quite honestly.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you. Other questions or comments for Mr. O'Dell?

Mr. O'Dell:

We have two items on the consent agenda we are recommending for approval and they are the University Development Report and the Appointment of Investment Managers and Reallocation of Funds.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much.

Mr. Shumate:

I know that we have talked in the Committee on Trusteeship that we are pushing the majority of our work to our committees, but the topic of the development campaign might be one of those items that we would do as a committee of the whole so that we would all have a good feel for that because of the critical importance of that to our strategic goals.

Dr. Cloyd:

I think that is an excellent suggestion and let me ask the secretary that we can have some discussion on this on how we can best arrange and coordinate the activities because it is obviously going to be something of a tremendous importance to everyone around this table on where we are in the campaign, and importantly how we can help, and I am sure Peter you will come by and advise us on how we can help. We will look forward to that, but it is a good comment Mr. Shumate, we will figure out how to do that.

Any other questions or comments?

The consent agenda is now before the Trustees, and I would like to call on President Gee to present it to the Board.

RESOLUTIONS IN MEMORIAM

Margaret J. Adamson

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on March 9, 2008, of Margaret J. "Maggie" Adamson, Assistant Professor Emeritus in the School of Allied Medical Professions.

Professor Adamson taught in the Division of Occupational Therapy from 1972-2003. In her 31 years in the Division, she taught core courses in occupational therapy and coordinated fieldwork for the students. She established clinical sites for Ohio State students throughout the United States, coordinating the fieldwork for more than 1,500 students. Professor Adamson developed strong relationships with clinical sites and established strong loyalty among the clinical supervisors. The clinical partners remember Professor Adamson for her organizational skills and her wisdom in guiding supervisors and students.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

She developed and organized many aspects of the occupational therapy education program and provided the behind-the-scenes work to help the Division work smoothly. After her retirement, she remained loyal to Ohio State, providing consultation to and lectures for the occupational therapy faculty.

Professor Adamson was dedicated to the field of occupational therapy and made many contributions to the profession. She held offices in state and national organizations and was the Ohio Representative to the American Occupational Therapy Association for many years. Her high energy and hard-working nature made her an asset to the committees or service organizations on which she served.

Maggie's bright and cheerful manner was well known among students and faculty. She was known for her ready smile, her quick wit, and her passion for life. She had many diverse interests in addition to educating students. These interests included traveling and volunteering at the Columbus Zoo where she volunteered every week, working frequently with the gorillas. She loved adventure and lived life to the fullest.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Margaret J. Adamson its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to her family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

John D. Conteh-Morgan

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on March 3, 2008, of John D. Conteh-Morgan, Professor of French and Italian and Professor of African American and African Studies.

Professor Conteh-Morgan earned a D.Phil. degree in 20th Century French literature from Sussex University (England) in 1977; he also received a Maîtrise-ès-Lettres Modernes and a Licence-ès-Lettres Modernes from the Université de Besançon (France). Before coming to Ohio State in 1991, Professor Conteh-Morgan taught at Berea College, Maryville College, and the University of Sierra Leone.

Professor Conteh-Morgan had an international reputation as one of the leading scholars in Francophone African Studies and was one of relatively few scholars to produce highly distinguished work in the associated field of performance and theatre studies. He published two major translations, four edited volumes, 20 articles, seven chapters in books, and 12 book reviews, and presented papers at more than 40 national and international conferences. His two book monographs, Theatre and Drama in Francophone Africa: A Critical Introduction and Theatres of Delegitimation: Performance, Politics, and Transgression in Postcolonial Francophone Drama represent major critical contributions to the field and major reference points to scholars in the field.

In addition to his considerable service to his departments and the University, Professor Conteh-Morgan served his profession at the highest level. He served on the editorial board of West Africa Review, was associate editor of African Theatre Journal, served as advisory editor/contributor to the 2003 Oxford Encyclopedia of Theatre and Performance, and served as an outside evaluator for a variety of professional journals and academic presses.

Professor Conteh-Morgan's most notable contribution to the profession was his very successful leadership as editor of Research in African Literatures, which is considered the leading international forum for research and scholarship in the African literary field. His most notable legacy to the Department of French and Italian was the creation of one of the best-known—and earliest—programs in Francophone Studies in the United States. In 1990, he was named a Chevalier dans l'Ordre des Palmes Académiques by the French government, and in 2002 was named fellow at the prestigious W.E.B. Du Bois Institute for Afro-American Research at Harvard University.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor John D. Conteh-Morgan its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Paul R. Klohr

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on June 3, 2008, of Paul R. Klohr, Professor Emeritus in the School of Educational Policy and Leadership.

Professor Klohr earned his B.A. degree from DePauw University in 1940 where he was a Rector Scholar. Subsequently, he taught high school in Centralia, Illinois, and served in the U.S. Military for five years as commanding officer of the 3467th MAM Ordinance Company in the Persian Gulf Command in Iran. In 1948 he completed his dissertation, "A Study of the Role of the Resource Unit in the Curriculum Reorganization of Selected Secondary Schools," and earned a Ph.D. degree from The Ohio State University. He taught for two years at Syracuse University and served as director of Curriculum for Columbus Public Schools before returning to OSU. From 1952-57 he worked as director of the OSU University School. Professor Klohr served as associate dean in the OSU College of Education and as a member of the Dean's Executive Committee. He also worked as a respected curriculum consultant and as a visiting professor at the University of California at Davis and the University of Melbourne in Australia.

Dr. Klohr's research interests focused on curriculum theory as well as history and philosophy of education. He published in a variety of professional journals during his career, including the Review of Educational Research. Publications by Dr. Klohr included: "The Resource Unit in Curriculum Reorganization," NASSP Bulletin (1950); "Problems in Curriculum Theory Development," Theory into Practice (1967); and his significant reevaluation of curriculum studies in "Emerging Foundations for Curriculum Theory," Educational Consideration (1978).

Many students benefited from Professor Klohr's teaching in the classroom, guidance at professional conferences, and instruction in less formal settings. One of his former students, Robert V. Bullough, Jr. (Professor of Teacher Education at Brigham Young University) called him "the father or perhaps some might argue the grandfather, of the reconceptualist movement in curriculum studies..." According to Professor Bullough, "his life presented and still presents a compelling argument for openness, respect, and courage of conviction as the hallmarks of the academic life and of the education professoriate."

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Paul R. Klohr its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Hugh D. Laughlin

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on May 4, 2008, of Hugh D. Laughlin, Professor Emeritus in the School of Educational Policy and Leadership.

Professor Laughlin graduated with bachelor (1937), master (M.A. 1940), and doctoral (Ph.D. 1951) degrees from The Ohio State University in Columbus. His dissertation was entitled, "A Study of the Curriculum Development Program of The Secondary Schools of Garrett County, Maryland." He taught at the University School and worked for 38 years as a devoted professor of educational administration at The Ohio State University. Professor Laughlin's teaching interests included school organization and needs; curriculum development; and high school forums, such as discussions and debates.

Many students benefited from Professor Laughlin's creative teaching method through which students were allowed to debate the University School curriculum. Eugene Price, one of Professor Laughlin's former students and a distinguished alumnus from The Ohio State University School, commented on Professor Laughlin's approach, "The option to do subjects creatively, and to have a voice in what we studied, and how we studied it, was refreshing to me."

During his academic career, Professor Laughlin published in the Educational Research Bulletin and the Review of Educational Research. In other publications, Professor Laughlin provided valuable reports and recommendations on instructional programs for Ohio public schools. For example, he published, "A Report on the Instructional Program of the Hamilton, Ohio Public Schools" (1954) for the OSU Bureau of Educational Research and the "Instructional Needs of the Southwest Licking Local School District" (1969) for the OSU Educational Administration and Facilities Unit. Professor Laughlin called for a broader general education for nurses in his address to the Council of Member Agencies of the Department of Diploma and Associate Degree Programs at the 1955 National League for Nursing Convention. Also, he wrote an article for Nursing Outlook in May 1956 on "Education Programs in Service Centered Hospital Schools." In addition, Professor Laughlin assisted the State Department of Instruction of Ohio and participated in discussion groups with the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Hugh D. Laughlin its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Richard P. Lewis

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on May 18, 2008, of Richard P. Lewis, Professor Emeritus in the Department of Internal Medicine's Division of Cardiology.

Dr. Lewis received his undergraduate degree from Yale University in 1957. He obtained his M.D. degree from the University of Oregon in 1961, and interned and served a residency at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston. He was a fellow in cardiology at the University of Oregon and served as a senior resident and instructor in medicine at Stanford University. Dr. Lewis was commissioned a captain in the U.S. Army Medical Corps in 1966 and completed a two-year tour of duty as associate chief of cardiology at the Madigan Army Hospital in Tacoma, Washington. While he began his military career at Madigan, he remained in the U.S. Army Reserve and ultimately reached the rank of colonel.

Dr. Lewis began his academic career as an associate professor of medicine in the Division of Cardiology in 1969 at OSU's College of Medicine. He quickly established a reputation for clinical and academic excellence, and assisted with the growth of the Division through publishing many peer-reviewed papers. Progressing to full professor, he was director of the Division from 1971-86. During his tenure, the Division of Cardiology grew dramatically, and became known for its exceptional faculty and staff and quality research. He and his peers continued the tradition of excellent patient care established by their predecessors. He remained a professor and then professor emeritus in the Division for 39 years, continuing to write, teach, and see patients until a few weeks before his death.

Dr. Lewis was a leader in national associations in cardiology and medicine, most notably the American College of Cardiology, for which he served as president in 1996-97. The hallmark of Dr. Lewis' contributions to the ACC was his dedication to innovations in cardiovascular education. He was the founding editor of the ACC Foundation's Adult Clinical Cardiology Self-Assessment Program (ACC-SAP) and remained editor until his death. He was instrumental in expanding ACC Educational Products into international markets. He established the Ohio Chapter of the American College of Physicians and served as governor from 1976-80. Although a native Oregonian, Dr. Lewis loved Columbus and was a true Buckeye at heart. He was also an avid, if frequently frustrated, golfer, and loved to travel both for pleasure and as part of his service in various medical organizations. Dr. Lewis was a world-renowned academician, teacher, and physician. He will be missed by the generations of physicians whom he trained, the patients whose lives he touched, and his family and friends who loved him deeply.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Dr. Richard P. Lewis its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Arthur D. Lynn, Jr.

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on March 6, 2008, of Arthur D. Lynn, Jr., Associate Dean Emeritus in The Max M. Fisher College of Business and Professor Emeritus of Public Policy and Management.

Arthur Lynn was born November 21, 1921, in Portsmouth, Ohio. He attended the Virginia Military Institute from 1938-39, the U.S. Naval Academy from 1939-40, and served in the U.S. Army from 1942-46. He graduated in 1941 from The Ohio State University with a B.A. degree in economics and in 1943 with a M.A. degree in economics. In 1948 he earned a J.D. degree and in 1951 a Ph.D degree in economics, both from Ohio State.

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on June 29, 2008, of Dr. Edward "Ned" Q. Moulton, Vice President and Secretary of the Board of Trustees Emeritus.

Professor Moulton began his collegiate education at Michigan State University in 1943. After completing two years of civil engineering, Ned's career was interrupted by World War II. He served as an Electrician's Mate Second Class in the U.S. Navy from February 1945 until May 1946 on the U.S.S. Rodman in the Pacific Theater. He returned to Michigan State in 1946 and was graduated in 1947. Professor Moulton then earned a Master of Science degree in hydraulic engineering from Louisiana State University in 1948, and held a position as an assistant professor of engineering at Auburn University from January 1949 until June 1950. He then enrolled in the Ph.D. program at the University of California at Berkeley where, in 1956, he received the first Ph.D. in sanitary (now environmental) engineering granted by the university.

Professor Moulton began his career at The Ohio State University as an assistant professor of civil engineering in 1954. He was appointed associate professor of civil engineering in 1958 and professor of engineering mechanics in 1964. Ned moved through a number of administrative posts at the University during the next decade. From 1964-66 he was associate dean of Faculties in the College of Engineering for the Personnel Budget. At the same time he was appointed the first dean of Off-Campus Education and also director of the School of Engineering for the Miami-OSU Campus at Dayton (subsequently Wright State University). In 1966 Professor Moulton served as the ninth president of the University of South Dakota. He returned to Ohio State in 1968.

Upon his return to The Ohio State University, Ned became executive assistant to President Novice G. Fawcett for one year, subsequently serving as vice president for Administrative Operations, executive vice president for Operations, and executive vice president. Under President Harold Enarson he served as vice president for Business and Administration from 1973-79. He also served as secretary of the Board of Trustees from November 1968 to January 1979. In 1979 Professor Moulton became chancellor of the Board of Regents; he served in that capacity until 1984, at which point he was named chancellor emeritus of the Board of Regents, as well as vice president emeritus and secretary of the Board emeritus of The Ohio State University.

Ned was active in community affairs. He was a trustee of Blue Cross of Central Ohio, served on the Riverside Methodist Hospital board of trustees, and was the first chairperson of the trustees of Grant/Riverside Methodist Hospitals. He was a member of the Board of Directors of Ohio Health. Ned was a trustee of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra from 1980-85 and in 1986 he became president and executive director of the Symphony. In addition, Ned was a director of the Development Committee of Greater Columbus, a trustee of the Greater Columbus Arts Council, and general chairperson of the United Way Fund Drive for The Ohio State University.

Professor Moulton was awarded an honorary Doctor of Science degree by Wittenberg University, and honorary Doctor of Law degrees by Xavier University and Wilmington College.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Ned was an active member of Scioto Country Club, the Athletic Club of Columbus, and the Faculty Club of The Ohio State University.

In the performance of his many office positions and engagements throughout his career, Ned Moulton brought a passion for the mission of public higher education. Genuine intellectual curiosity was a constant trademark, whether engaged in matters of engineering, the arts, antique silver, or his wife's passion for genealogy. He was intensely committed to his family, to the University, and to the larger community of the city and state. Ned sought out and nurtured talent and took great pride in mentoring and advancing the careers of others.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Vice President and Secretary of the Board of Trustees Emeritus Edward Q. Moulton its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Charles H. Summerson

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on April 28, 2008, of Charles H. Summerson, Professor Emeritus in the School of Earth Sciences.

Professor Summerson held bachelor, master, and doctoral degrees from the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana. Before coming to The Ohio State University, he was employed by the United States Geological Survey and the war effort in New Mexico, where he explored for strategic minerals. Dr. Summerson came to Ohio State in 1947, joining the Department of Geology (now the School of Earth Sciences). His teaching and research concentrated on general geology, geologic mapping, and sedimentary geology. Professor Summerson was a dedicated classroom teacher and advisor, and he remained a lifelong friend and mentor to his students. Dr. Summerson was a long-time supporter and advisor for the Orton Memorial Library of Geology and the Orton Library has a development fund named for Professor Summerson.

In 1947, Professor Summerson helped to establish the School Field Geology Station in central Utah, which is still in operation today. He helped to establish the Institute of Geodesy, Photogrammetry, and Cartography in 1950, which remains a thriving program now housed in the School of Earth Sciences. In 1963, Professor Summerson received the Antarctic Research Medal for his work in Antarctica, and for his part on the committee for the proposal to establish the Institute of Polar Studies, now the Byrd Polar Research Center. A mountain in the Geologists Range in the Tranantarctic Mountains is named for Professor Summerson.

Toward the end of his tenure as a regular faculty member, Professor Summerson was the chief coordinator for the renovation of Orton Hall, the iconic building on the Oval that is listed on the National Historic Register. After retirement in 1982, he filled a similar role for the renovation of Mendenhall Laboratory.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Charles H. Summerson its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Edgar P. Watkins

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on April 30, 2008, of Edgar P. Watkins, Assistant Professor Emeritus in the Department of Agricultural, Environmental, and Development Economics.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Professor Watkins graduated in agricultural education at The Ohio State University in 1940, and taught at schools in Huntsburg, Austinburg, and Smithville, Ohio, before and after serving in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He saw service aboard the USS Whitney in the Solomon Islands and the USS Tularosa in the mid-Pacific. Subsequently, he worked for the Ashland Farm Bureau and OSU Extension in Canfield and Akron, before joining what was then the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology at Ohio State, where he worked until his retirement in 1980.

Ed Watkins was a prolific researcher and extension educator in marketing agricultural products directly to consumers, and was a charter member of the Food Distribution Research Society. He was retained by the U.S. Department of Agriculture as a consultant evaluating funded direct marketing projects and, post-retirement, worked extensively on agricultural marketing issues in Saudi Arabia and Guatemala under the sponsorship of the USDA and the U.S. Agency for International Development. A colleague in these assignments writes, "His technical recommendations were absolutely on the mark, his advice was always excellent, and it was always given with humor and kindness. Ed was a great colleague and a good friend."

Professor Watkins was an able carpenter and electrician who was generous in helping his friends and neighbors, and a dedicated family man who took much pleasure in his garden.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Edgar P. Watkins its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on May 9, 2008, of Arthur E. Wohlers, Professor Emeritus in the School of Educational Policy and Leadership.

Professor Wohlers worked as a dedicated teacher, administrator, and professor. He graduated from Bowling Green State University with a B.S. degree in education in 1935 and from The Ohio State University with a master's degree in 1939, writing his thesis on "Reading Problems in Secondary School Mathematics." Professor Wohlers served as a 1st lieutenant for the Army Air Corps during World War II and worked as a teacher and high school principal. He joined the faculty of Educational Administration at Ohio State in 1951. Professor Wohlers received a Ph.D. degree in 1954 from the University after completing his two-volume dissertation, entitled, "The Development, Use, and Preliminary Evaluation of a Self-Help Manual to Guide the Educational Planning of Secondary School Buildings."

During his career, Professor Wohlers developed service and educational programs and worked as a consultant to school districts on local and national levels. He created guides for planners and administrators of secondary schools, as indicated in his publication, "A Manual for Planning a Secondary School Building" (c. 1952). His advisory role on school districts and their communities is demonstrated through his publications in the Educational Research Bulletin. Two of his articles in that bulletin included, "The American Secondary School" (1953) and "The Associated Schools Approach to Planning School Buildings" (1961). Also, Professor Wohlers wrote multiple government reports on planning public school facilities that focused on building design. One of those reports, "Educational facility needs of the Worthington City School District, Worthington, Ohio," (1969) reflected this interest. Professor Wohlers presented a paper on faculty attitudes in higher education at the American Educational Research Association in 1974, entitled, "An Explanation of Faculty Attitude Toward Collective Bargaining in Selected Ohio Higher Education Institutions." Authorization. The Bonds, to be designated and known as The Ohio State University General Receipts Commercial Paper Notes, Series I, shall be issued pursuant to and as authorized by the Act, Section 2i of Article VIII of the Ohio Constitution, the 1999 General Bond Resolution, this Resolution, the Amended and Restated Trust Indenture and the Series I Supplement for the purposes of financing a portion of the costs of the University Facilities comprising the Series I Project and expenses incidental to the issuance of the Series I Notes. The Series I Notes shall be issued from time to time as provided in the Series I Supplement to finance and refinance the cost of the Series I Project. Proceeds of the Series I Notes may also be used to pay maturing Series I Notes.

Form and Numbering. The Series I Notes shall be issued only as fully registered Bonds. The Series I Notes shall be numbered as determined by the Trustee.

Denominations and Dates. The Notes shall be dated the date of their respective authentication and issuance; shall be issued in registered form, registered to bearer (subject to Section 2.06 of the Series I Supplement) unless otherwise designated by a Dealer; and shall be issued in denominations of $100,000 and in integral multiples of $1,000 in excess thereof.

Principal Amount. The Series I Notes shall be issued in the principal amount specified in the Series I Supplement, which amount shall not exceed $227,000,000.

Delivery and Execution. The Treasurer is hereby authorized to make the necessary arrangements with the Dealer to establish the date, location, procedures and conditions for the delivery of the Series I Notes to the Dealer and to take all steps as necessary to effect due execution, authentication and delivery of the Series I Notes to the Dealer or to the persons whom the Dealer directs under the terms of this Resolution. The Series I Notes shall be signed by the Treasurer in his official capacity (provided that such signature may be a facsimile) and may bear the corporate seal of the University or a facsimile thereof.

Appointment of Dealer. The Board hereby appoints Merrill Lynch & Co. as the initial Dealer for the Series I Notes.

As provided in the Indenture, there is hereby pledged to the security of the Series I Notes, (i) the gross amount of General Receipts of the University (subject to the provisions for the partial release of a pledge of General Receipts contained in Section 4.10 of the Amended and Restated Trust Indenture) and (ii) the moneys contained in the Special Funds. Anything else to the contrary in the Indenture, the 1999 General Bond Resolution, the Series I Supplement or this Resolution notwithstanding, the Series I Notes shall not have access to, any claim upon or be secured by, the Bond Reserve Fund or the Note Program Fund. This pledge of General Receipts shall be on parity with expenses, claims and payments relating to other Parity Obligations (as defined in the Original Indenture) and in priority to all other expenses, claims and payments of the University. In accordance with the Act, all the General Receipts or portions thereof are immediately subject to the lien of the pledge upon receipt thereof by the University; provided, however, the lien of such pledge shall not attach to any Series I Notes the proceeds of which are to be used to provide the Series I Project until the Board of Regents of the State shall have approved such pledge.

For the further security of the Series I Notes, and any Obligations, the University hereby covenants with the bondholders and the Trustee that so long as any Series I Notes or Obligations are outstanding, the University shall fix, make, adjust and collect fees, rates, rentals, charges, and other items of General Receipts, as will produce at all times General Receipts sufficient (i) to pay Debt Service Charges when due, (ii) together with other moneys lawfully available therefor, to pay all costs and expenses required to be paid under the Note Proceedings, and (iii) together with other moneys lawfully available therefor, to pay all other costs and expenses necessary for the proper maintenance and successful and continuous operation of the University.

Payment, Places of Payment, and Paying Agents. The principal of and interest on the Series I Notes shall be paid in federal or other immediately available funds in such coin or currency of the United States of America as, at the respective times of payment, is legal tender for the payment of public and private debts. The principal of and interest on the Series I Notes shall be payable at the principal office of the Trustee on or before the close of business on any Business Day upon which such Series I Notes have become due and payable, provided that such Series I Notes are presented and surrendered on a timely basis. Upon presentation of such a Series I Note to the Trustee no later than 3:00 p.m. (Columbus, Ohio time) on a Business Day, payment for such Series I Note shall be made by the Trustee in immediately available funds on such Business Day. If a Series I Note is presented for payment after 3:00 p.m. (Columbus, Ohio time) on a Business Day, payment therefor shall be made by the Trustee on the next succeeding Business Day, without the accrual of additional interest thereon.

Book Entry. Subject to the provisions of the immediately following paragraph, the Series I Notes shall be issued only to a Depository for holding in a Book Entry System in accordance with the provisions of Section 2.06 of the Series I Supplement. Those Series I Notes shall be registered in the name of the Depository or its nominee, as registered owner, and immobilized in the custody of the Depository; and shall not be transferable or exchangeable, except for transfer to another Depository or to another nominee of a Depository, without further action by the University. Each maturity of the Series I Notes shall be evidenced by a single certificate in the aggregate principal amount of the Series I Notes maturing on such maturity date.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

If any Depository determines not to continue to act as a Depository for the Series I Notes for holding in a Book Entry System, the University may attempt to have established a securities depository and Book Entry System relationship with another qualified Depository. If the University does not or is unable to do so, the University, after making provision for notification of the owners of book entry interests by appropriate notice to the then Depository and any other arrangements it deems necessary, shall permit the withdrawal of the Series I Notes from the Depository, and authenticate and deliver the Series I Note certificates, in fully registered form to the assigns of the Depository or its nominee (if such Bond was held by a nominee), all at the cost and expense (including costs of printing or otherwise preparing and delivering replacement Series I Notes) of the Bondholders.

Offering Memorandum. It is determined hereby that the manner of sale and the terms of the Series I Notes, as provided in this Resolution and the Series I Supplement, are consistent with all legal requirements and will carry out the public purposes of the Act.

The use and distribution of the Offering Memorandum relating to the Series I Notes is hereby approved and authorized. Such Offering Memorandum shall be in substantially the form of the offering memorandum for the Series H Notes, the form of which is hereby approved. The Board has not confirmed, and assumes no responsibility for, the accuracy, sufficiency or fairness of any statements in the Offering Memorandum contained in Appendix B thereto.

Allocation of Proceeds. The proceeds from the sale of the Series I Notes, including any accrued interest, shall be allocated, deposited and applied as follows:

(i) To the Bond Fund, accrued interest, if any, received on the sale of the Series I Notes; and

(ii) To the Note Program Fund, created pursuant to Section 5 of this Resolution, the entire remaining amount of the proceeds of the Series I Notes, to be applied to the purposes of that Fund, including transfers from that Fund authorized by the Act and to pay costs and expenses associated with the issuance of the Series I Notes.

Note Program Fund. There is hereby created a fund to be maintained in the custody of the Treasurer and designated the "Note Program Fund." The Note Program Fund shall be funded from the proceeds of the sale of the Series I Notes. Such proceeds shall be used for the payment or reimbursement of a portion of the costs and expenses relating to the Series I Project and costs and expenses associated with the issuance of the Series I Notes. The Note Program Fund shall not constitute a Special Fund and shall not be pledged to the payment of Debt Service Charges.

Moneys held in the Note Program Fund, including all investment earnings thereon, pending disbursement from the Note Program Fund shall be invested in Authorized Investments specified in Section VIII of the Non-Endowment Investments Policy of the University, as the same may be amended from time to time. The University may establish such accounts in the Note Program Fund as are necessary or desirable to carry out the requirements of the Series I Supplement.

The Treasurer shall maintain such books and records with respect to disbursements from the Note Program Fund so as to enable the Treasurer to determine the name of any payee of any such disbursement, the date on which such disbursement occurred, the amount of such disbursement and the purpose for which such disbursement was made. Investment earnings on the funds on deposit in the Note Program Fund may, at the discretion of the University, be paid to the Trustee for deposit in the Bond Service Account in the Bond Fund to be used to pay Debt Service Charges on the Series I Notes.

There shall be established in the Note Program Fund the following accounts:

(i) The Costs of Issuance Account, from which shall be paid the costs of issuance of the Series I Notes;

(ii) The Redemption Account, from which shall be disbursed such portion of the proceeds as shall be necessary to retire such portion of the General Receipts Commercial Paper Notes, Series H; and

(iii) The Project Account, from which shall be disbursed such portion of the proceeds of the Series I Notes necessary to pay costs of the Series I Project and paying costs and expenses associated with the issuance of the Series I Notes. The Treasurer shall designate in writing, either in the Series I Supplement or otherwise, the allocation of the proceeds of the Series I Notes to each of the foregoing accounts.

Upon the determination by the Treasurer that the costs incurred in connection with any item listed on Exhibit A hereto within the description of the Series I Project (each a "Component") to be paid from the Note Program Fund have been paid in full or provision for such payment has been made, the University may use any remaining moneys on deposit in the Note Program Fund with respect to such Component to fund the costs of other Components or to fund the costs of additional projects constituting University Facilities (each, an "Additional Project"). Moneys remaining on deposit in the Note Program Fund after the completion of the Series I Project and any Additional Projects shall be used by the University in any manner which, in the opinion of Bond Counsel, shall be permissible under the Act and the Code.

Application of Bond Proceeds. The University covenants that the use of the proceeds of the Series I Notes will be restricted in such manner and to such extent, if any, as may be necessary, after taking into account reasonable expectations at the time of delivery of and payment for the Series I Notes, so that the Series I Notes will not constitute "arbitrage bonds" under Sections 103(c) and 148 of the Code. The Treasurer of the University, or any other officer having responsibility with respect to the issuance of the Series I Notes, alone or in conjunction with any other officer or employee of or consultant to the University, will give an appropriate certificate of the University for inclusion in the transcript of proceedings for the Series I Notes setting forth the reasonable expectations of the University regarding the amount and use of those proceeds and the facts and estimates on which they are based, all as of the date of original delivery of and payment for the Series I Notes.

The University further covenants that it will take all actions required to maintain the exclusion from gross income for purposes of federal income taxation of interest on the Series I Notes and will not take or permit to be taken, any actions which would adversely affect such exclusion under the provisions of the Code that apply to the Series I Notes; and the Chairman or the Treasurer and other appropriate officers are hereby authorized to take such actions and give such certifications as may be appropriate to assure such exclusion from gross income of interest on the Series I Notes.

Series I Supplement and Other Documents. In order to better secure the payment of the Debt Service Charges as the same shall become due and payable, the Chairman, the President of the University, the Secretary of the Board and the Treasurer, or any one or more of them, are authorized and directed to execute, acknowledge and deliver to the Trustee and the Dealer, in the name and on behalf of the University and pursuant to the Indenture, the Series I Supplement and the Dealer Agreement, respectively, each in substantially the form of the Series H Supplement and the Dealer Agreement related thereto, or to such officers on behalf of this Board and the University, and such documents are hereby approved, with such changes therein as are not substantially adverse to the University and as may be permitted by the Act and approved by the officers executing the same on behalf of the University. The Series I Supplement shall also include the form of the Series I Notes (the "Form of Note"), attached thereto as Exhibit A. The execution of such documents by any of the officers shall conclusively evidence that the officers and the Board approve such changes and that such changes are not substantially adverse to the University.

Each of such officers is further authorized to execute and deliver on behalf of the University such other certificates, documents and instruments as are necessary in connection with the acts authorized by this Resolution.

Section 8. Authorization of Bond Insurance or Credit Support Instruments. The Treasurer is authorized to submit applications to recognized providers of municipal bond insurance or the providers of any Credit Support Instruments requesting the issuance of municipal bond insurance policies or Credit Support Instruments, as the case may be, to insure the University's obligation to make payments of principal of and interest or purchase price payments on the Series I Notes. The Treasurer is hereby authorized to accept one or more commitments for insurance or a Credit Support Instrument from such providers if, in his reasonable judgment, it is in the best interests of the University to do so and the Treasurer is authorized to execute and deliver, and the University is authorized to perform, any documents, certificates or instruments reasonably necessary to obtain the benefits of such policy of bond insurance or Credit Support Instrument. There is hereby authorized to be paid from the moneys deposited in the Series I Notes such amount as is required to pay the premium and expenses for such insurance policies.

Section 9. Open Meeting Determination. It is found and determined that all formal actions of the Board concerning and relating to the adoption of this Resolution were adopted in an open meeting of the Board, and that all deliberations of the Board and of any of its committees that resulted in such formal action were in meetings open to the public, in compliance with all legal requirements including Section 121.22 of the Ohio Revised Code.

Section 10 Effective Date. This Resolution shall take effect and be in force immediately upon its adoption.

Compliance Agreement describing the use of the proceeds of the Series 2008 A Bonds shall be conclusive evidence that the determination of the Treasurer with respect to which Obligations are to constitute Refunded Obligations is authorized.

Notwithstanding the authorization contained within the preceding paragraph of this Section 2(a)(ii), outstanding Obligations of the University shall be refunded with the proceeds of the Series 2008 A Bonds in an amount not to exceed the sum of the outstanding principal amount of such Refunded Obligations, plus any issuance expense, underwriter's discount, and original issuance premium in connection with such refunding.

(iii) The Series 2008 A Refunding Bonds may bear such designation or titles, be issued in one or more sub-series within the Series 2008 A Bonds and otherwise be denominated in such fashion as the Treasurer, in the exercise of his reasonable discretion, shall determine to be appropriate in connection with the marketing and sale of such Series 2008 A Refunding Bonds. The Series 2008 A Refunding Bonds may be issued simultaneously with, prior to or after the issuance of the Series 2008 A New Money Bonds and the Treasurer shall execute an additional Certificate of Award if in the judgment of the Treasurer such action is reasonably necessary to facilitate the issuance of any series or sub-series of Refunding Bonds; provided, however, that no Series 2008 A Bonds shall be issued pursuant to this Resolution later than June 30, 2009.

(b) Form and Numbering. The Series 2008 A Bonds shall be issued only as fully registered bonds. The Series 2008 A Bonds shall be numbered as determined by the Trustee that will distinguish each Series 2008 A Bond from each other Series 2008 A Bond, and if necessary, any sub-series from any other sub-series.

(c) Denominations and Dates. The Series 2008 A Bonds shall be issuable in denominations of $5,000 and integral multiples thereof and shall be dated as of as provided in the Certificate of Award.

(d) Principal Amount. The Series 2008 A Bonds shall be issued in the principal amount specified in the Certificate of Award; provided that the aggregate principal amount of New Money Bonds shall not exceed $300,000,000.00 and the aggregate amount of proceeds from the Series 2008 A Bonds and the Series 2008 B Bonds not used to pay any portion of the principal of, interest or premium on any Refunded Obligations under this Resolution or under the Series 2008 B Supplement shall not exceed Four Hundred Million Dollars ($400,000,000).

(e) Delivery and Execution. The Treasurer is hereby authorized to make the necessary arrangements with the Original Purchaser to establish the date, location, procedures and conditions for the delivery of the Series 2008 A Bonds to the Original Purchaser and to take all steps as necessary to effect due execution, authentication, sale and delivery of the Series 2008 A Bonds to the Original Purchaser under the terms of this Resolution. Interest shall be calculated on the basis of a 360-day year consisting of twelve 30-day months. Such rate or rates shall in no event produce an interest rate for the Series 2008 A Bonds in excess of eight percent (8.00%) per annum.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

(ii) The Series 2008 A Bonds shall mature not later than December 1, 2033 as provided for in the Certificate of Award.

(iii) The Series 2008 A Bonds, if so provided for in the Certificate of Award, shall be subject to optional redemption at the option of the University prior to stated maturity, in whole or in part, but if in part, in installments of $5,000 principal amount of such Series 2008 A Bond or integral multiples thereof, in accordance with the terms, conditions, redemption prices and on the dates set forth in the Certificate of Award. Notice of call for and other terms and provisions governing redemption of the Series 2008 A Bonds shall be given in the manner provided in the Indenture. At no time shall the redemption price on any Series 2008 A Bonds, exclusive of accrued interest, exceed one hundred percent (100%) of the principal amount of such Bond to be redeemed.

(g) Security. As provided in the Amended and Restated Trust Indenture as supplemented by the Series 2008 A Supplement, there is hereby pledged to the security of the Series 2008 A Bonds and for the payment of the Debt Service Charges on the Series 2008 A Bonds, (i) the gross amount of General Receipts of the University (subject to the provisions for the partial release of a pledge of General Receipts contained in Section 4.11 of the Original Indenture) and (ii) the monies contained in the Special Funds, but excluding the Bond Reserve Fund. Anything else to the contrary in the Indenture or this Resolution notwithstanding, the Series 2008 A Bonds shall not have access to, any claim upon or be secured by the Bond Reserve Fund or the Note Program Fund.

The pledge of General Receipts in the immediately preceding paragraph shall be on a parity with expenses, claims and payments relating to other Parity Obligations and in priority to all other expenses, claims and payments of the University. In accordance with the Act, all General Receipts or portions thereof are immediately subject to the lien of the pledge upon receipt thereof by the University. Furthermore, the Pledge contained herein and the Amended and Restated Trust Indenture is not in derogation of the pledge contained in the Original Indenture, any supplement thereto Indenture, any Series Resolution adopted pursuant to the Original Resolution or any Bond proceedings with respect to any Obligations currently outstanding, it being the intention of the University that all such Obligations outstanding upon the execution and delivery of the Series 2008 A Supplement shall be Parity Obligations within the meaning of the Amended and Restated Trust Indenture, equally and ratably secured by the pledge of General Receipts of the University herein and therein contained.

For the further security of the Series 2008 A Bonds, and any other Obligations, the University hereby covenants with the bondholders and the Trustee that so long as any Series 2008 A Bonds or Obligations are outstanding, the University shall fix, make, adjust and collect fees, rates, rentals, charges, and other items of General Receipts, as will produce at all times General Receipts sufficient (i) to pay Debt Service Charges when due, (ii) together with other monies lawfully available therefor, to pay all costs and expenses required to be paid under the Bond proceedings, and

(iii) together with other monies lawfully available therefor, to pay all other costs and expenses necessary for the proper maintenance and successful and continuous operation of the University.

(h) Payment, Places of Payment and Paying Agents. The principal of and any redemption premium on any Series 2008 A Bond when due shall be payable to the registered holder upon presentation and surrender thereof at the principal corporate trust office of the Trustee. Interest on Series 2008 A Bonds shall be payable by check or draft mailed by the Trustee as provided in the Indenture; provided, however, that interest on any Series 2008 A Bonds aggregating $1,000,000 or more in principal amount registered in the name of a single holder shall be paid by wire transfer in immediately available funds to such account, if any, as such holder directs in writing to the Trustee at least ten (10) days prior to any Interest Payment Date, such payment by wire transfer pursuant to that direction continuing in effect as to subsequent Interest Payment Dates until such time as the holder notifies the Trustee to the contrary or until such time as such holder ceases to be a holder of the requisite principal amount of Series 2008 A Bonds.

(i) Book Entry. Subject to the provisions of the immediately following paragraph, the Series 2008 A Bonds shall be issued only to a Depository for holding in a Book Entry System. Those Series 2008 A Bonds shall be registered in the name of the Depository or its nominee, as registered owner, and immobilized in the custody of the Depository; and shall not be transferable or exchangeable, except for transfer to another Depository or to another nominee of a Depository, without further action by the University. Each maturity of the Series 2008 A Bonds shall be evidenced by a single certificate in the aggregate principal amount of the Series 2008 A Bonds maturing on each such maturity date.

If any Depository determines not to continue to act as a Depository for the Series 2008 A Bonds for holding in a Book Entry System, the University may attempt to have established a securities depository/Book Entry System relationship with another qualified Depository. If the University does not or is unable to do so, the University, after making provision for notification of the owners of book entry interests by appropriate notice to the then Depository and any other arrangements it deems necessary, shall permit the withdrawal of the Series 2008 A Bonds from the Depository, and authenticate and deliver the Series 2008 A Bond certificates, in fully registered form to the assigns of the Depository or its nominee (if such Bond was held by a nominee), all at the cost and expense (including costs of printing or otherwise preparing and delivering replacement Series 2008 A Bonds) of the University. Series 2008 A Bond certificates authenticated and delivered pursuant to this paragraph shall be in the denomination of $5,000 or any integral multiple thereof.

Section 3. Series 2008 A Supplement, Contract of Purchase, Certificate of Award, Official Statement, Escrow Agreement and Continuing Disclosure Agreement. To secure the pledge of General Receipts for the payment of Debt Service Charges on all Obligations, the execution, delivery and performance of the Series 2008 A Supplement in substantially the form on file with the Secretary of the Board is hereby approved and authorized. The Chairman, the President of the University, the Secretary of the Board and the Treasurer, or any one or more of them, are authorized and directed to execute and deliver to the Trustee, in the name and on behalf of the University such Amended and Restated Trust Indenture, with such changes therein as are not substantially adverse to the University and as may be permitted by the Act and approved by the officers executing the same on behalf of the University. The Series 2008 A Bonds are sold and awarded to the Original Purchaser in accordance with the Contract of Purchase at the purchase price provided in the Certificate of Award. The Contract of Purchase shall be in substantially the same form as the contract of purchase entered into in connection with the issuance of the Series 2005 A Bonds, which form is hereby approved, together with any changes therein and completions thereof which necessary to reflect the terms of the Series 2008 A Bonds and are not inconsistent with this Resolution and not substantially adverse to the University, and as are permitted by the Act and approved on behalf of the University by the Chairman or the Treasurer. The approval on behalf of the University of those changes and completions by the Chairman or the Treasurer, and the status of those changes as not substantially adverse to the University, shall be conclusively evidenced by the execution of the Contract of Purchase on behalf of the University by the Chairman or the Treasurer. It is determined hereby that the purchase price and the manner of sale and the terms of the Series 2008 A Bonds, as provided in this

The Certificate of Award shall state or confirm the aggregate principal amount of the Series 2008 A Bonds, the purchase price of such Bonds, the interest rate or rates with respect to each maturity of such Bonds, and the optional redemption provisions, all as determined in accordance with the provisions of this Resolution and the Contract of Purchase, and all of which shall be conclusively evidenced by the execution of the Certificate of Award. The Certificate of Award shall also contain such other dates or provisions as the Chairman or the Treasurer determines are appropriate or necessary, and as are consistent with this Resolution, the Indenture, the Series 2008 A Supplement and the Contract of Purchase.

The use and distribution of the Preliminary Official Statement and the Official Statement relating to the Series 2008 A Bonds by the Original Purchasers is hereby approved, authorized and ratified. The Preliminary Official Statement is deemed final by the University for purposes of Securities Exchange Commission Rule 15c2-12 except for such omissions therefrom as may be permitted by such Rule. The Official Statement, substantially in the form of the Preliminary Official Statement now on file with the Secretary of the Board, shall be executed by the Chairman and the Treasurer or either of them, each in his official capacity on behalf of the University with any modifications, changes and supplements necessary or desirable for the purposes thereof which the Chairman or the Treasurer shall approve. The Board has not confirmed, and assumes no responsibility for, the accuracy, sufficiency or fairness of the statements in the Preliminary Official Statement or the final Official Statement under the caption "UNDERWRITING."

The execution, delivery and performance of the Continuing Disclosure Agreement (the "Continuing Disclosure Agreement") between the University and the Trustee shall be in substantially the same form as the continuing disclosure agreement entered into in connection with the issuance of the Series 2005 A Bonds the form of which is hereby authorized and approved, together with any changes therein which are not substantially adverse to the University. The Chairman and the Treasurer, or either of them is each authorized to execute the Continuing Disclosure Agreement and such execution by either or both of them shall be conclusive evidence that such changes are not substantially adverse to the University.

The University is authorized to execute, deliver and perform the Escrow Agreement between the University and the Escrow Trustee. (iii) To the Series 2008 Project Account, created pursuant to Section 5 of this Resolution, the amount of the proceeds of the Series 2008 A Bonds as specified in the Certificate of Award, to be applied to the purposes of that Fund, including transfers from that Fund authorized by the Act and to pay costs and expenses associated with the issuance of the Series 2008 A Bonds;

(iv) To the Series 2008 Project Account, created pursuant to Section 5 of this Resolution, the amount of the proceeds of the Series 2008 A Bonds as specified in the Certificate of Award, and to pay costs and expenses associated with the issuance of the Series 2008 A Bonds; and

(v) To the Escrow Fund, the amount of the proceeds of the Series 2008 A Refunding Bonds required to be deposited in the Escrow Fund under the Escrow Agreement.

Section 5. Series 2008 Project Account. There is hereby created by the University an account within the Facilities Fund to be maintained in the custody of the Treasurer and designated the "Series 2008 Project Account." The Series 2008 Project Account shall be funded in part from the proceeds of the sale of the Series 2008 A Bonds. In addition to the costs of the Series 2008 Project paid from such proceeds, such proceeds shall be used for the payment of the costs and expenses associated with the issuance of the Series 2008 A Bonds. The Series 2008 Project Account shall not constitute a Special Fund and shall not be pledged to the payment of Debt Service Charges.

Moneys held in the Series 2008 Project Account, including all investment earnings thereon, pending disbursement from the Series 2008 Project Account shall be invested in Authorized Investments specified in Section VIII of the Non-Endowment Investments Policy of the University attached hereto as Exhibit A, as the same may be amended from time to time. If the proceeds of the Series 2008 A Bonds remain unspent upon the issuance of any Obligations to fund costs of the Series 2008 Project, the University shall establish separate accounts and subaccounts, for accounting purposes, for the deposit of the proceeds of such Obligations in accordance with the provisions of this Section 5.

The Treasurer shall maintain such books and records with respect to disbursements from the Series 2008 Project Account so as to enable the Treasurer to determine the name of any payee of any such disbursement, the date on which such disbursement occurred, the amount of such disbursement and the purpose for which such disbursement was made. Investment earnings on the funds on deposit in the Series 2008 Project Account may, at the discretion of the University, be paid to the Trustee for deposit in the Bond Service Account in the Debt Service Fund to be used to pay Debt Service Charges on the Series 2008 A Bonds.

Upon the determination by the Treasurer that the costs incurred in connection with any item listed on Exhibit A hereto within the description of the Series 2008 Project (each a "Component") to be paid from the Series 2008 Project Account have been paid in full or provision for such payment has been made, the University may use any remaining moneys on deposit in the Series 2008 Project Account with respect to such Component to fund the costs of other Components or to fund the costs of additional projects constituting University Facilities (each, an "Additional Project"). Monies remaining on deposit in the Series 2008 Project Account after the completion of the Series 2008 Project and any Additional Projects shall be used by the University in any manner which, in the opinion of Bond Counsel, shall be permissible under the Act and the Code.

Section 6. Application of Bond Proceeds. The University covenants that the use of the proceeds of the Series 2008 A Bonds will be restricted in such manner and to such extent, if any, as may be necessary, after taking into account reasonable expectations at the time of delivery of and payment for the Series 2008 A Bonds, so that the Series 2008 A Bonds will not constitute arbitrage bonds under Sections 103(c) and 148 of the Code. The Treasurer of the University, or any other officer having responsibility with respect to the issuance of the Series 2008 A Bonds, alone or in conjunction with any other officer or employee of or consultant to the University, will give an appropriate certificate of the University for inclusion in the transcript of proceedings for the Series 2008 A Bonds setting forth the reasonable expectations of the University regarding the amount and use of all those proceeds and the facts and estimates on which they are based, all as of the date of original delivery of and payment for the Series 2008 A Bonds.

The University further covenants that it will take all actions required to maintain the exclusion from gross income for purposes of federal income taxation of interest on the Series 2008 A Bonds, and will not take, nor permit to be taken, any actions which would adversely affect such exclusion under the provisions of the Code that apply to the Series 2008 A Bonds; and the Chairman or the Treasurer and other appropriate officers are hereby authorized to take such actions and give such certifications as may be appropriate to assure such exclusion from gross income of interest on the Series 2008 A Bonds.

Section 7. Call for Redemption of Refunded Obligations. The University hereby determines that the Refunded Obligations shall be called for optional redemption at the earliest date on which each of them may be redeemed pursuant to the Indenture and that the execution and delivery by the University of the Series 2008 A Supplement shall constitute the irrevocable direction to the Trustee to send such notices as are required by the Indenture to effect such call for redemption. The execution of the Series 2008 A Supplement and the acceptance of the estate conveyed thereby by the Trustee shall constitute the receipt by the Trustee of such direction and the agreement by the Trustee to give the aforementioned notices.

Section 8. Authorization of Bond Insurance, Credit Support Instruments and Rate Management Agreements. The Treasurer is authorized to submit applications to recognized providers of municipal bond insurance or the providers of any Credit Support Instruments requesting the issuance of municipal bond insurance policies or Credit Support Instruments, as the case may be, to insure the University's obligation to make payments of principal of and interest on the Series 2008 A Bonds. The Treasurer is hereby authorized to accept one or more commitments for insurance or a Credit Support Instrument from such providers if, in his reasonable judgment, it is in the best interests of the University to do so and the Treasurer is authorized to execute and deliver, and the University is authorized to perform, any documents, certificates or instruments reasonably necessary to obtain the benefits of such policy of bond insurance or Credit Support Instrument. There is hereby authorized to be paid from the moneys deposited in the Series 2008 Project Account such amount as is required to pay the premium and expenses for such insurance policies.

The Treasurer is authorized to execute, deliver, and perform any rate management agreement, swap agreement, or guaranteed investment contract as such officer deems reasonable and prudent in connection with the issuance of the Series 2008 A Bonds, the management of the interest rates on any Refunded Obligations, and the execution, delivery, and performance of the Amended and Restated Trust Indenture and the Series 2008 A Supplement.

Section 9. Open Meeting Determination. It is found and determined that all formal actions of the Board concerning and relating to the adoption of this Resolution were adopted in an open meeting of the Board, and that all deliberations of the Board and of any of its committees that resulted in such formal action were in meetings open to the public, in compliance with all legal requirements including Section 121.22 of the Ohio Revised Code.

The University hereby determines that the Refunded Obligations shall be called for optional redemption at the earliest date on which each of them may be redeemed pursuant to the Indenture and that the execution and delivery by the University of the Series 2008 B Supplement shall constitute the irrevocable direction to the Trustee to send such notices as are required by the Indenture to effect such call for redemption. The execution of the Series 2008 B Supplement and the acceptance of the estate conveyed thereby by the Trustee shall constitute the receipt by the Trustee of such direction and the agreement by the Trustee to give the aforementioned notices.

Section 8. Authorization of Bond Insurance, Credit Support Instruments and Rate Management Agreements. The Treasurer is authorized to submit applications to recognized providers of municipal bond insurance or the providers of any Credit Support Instruments requesting the issuance of municipal bond insurance policies or Credit Support Instruments, as the case may be, to insure the University's obligation to make payments of principal of and interest or purchase price payments on the Series 2008 B Bonds. The Treasurer is hereby authorized to accept one or more commitments for insurance or a Credit Support Instrument from such providers if, in his reasonable judgment, it is in the best interests of the University to do so and the Treasurer is authorized to executed and deliver, and the University is authorized to perform, any documents, certificates or instruments reasonably necessary to obtain the benefits of such policy of bond insurance or Credit Support Instrument. There is hereby authorized to be paid from the moneys deposited in the Series 2008 Project Account such amount as is required to pay the premium and expenses for such insurance policies.

"research misconduct" means fabrication, falsification or plagiarism in proposing, performing, or reviewing research, or in reporting research results. Research misconduct does not include honest error or differences of opinion.

(A) Objectives

- (1) The policy shall aim to protect both the integrity and the reputation of research and scholarship produced by members of the university community.
- (2) The policy shall aim to protect the integrity and reputation of the university and its scholars from false or unproven allegations of research misconduct. For this reason, the university assumes that a person accused of research misconduct is innocent of any allegations until the contrary has been established by a final decision reached under the policy and the applicable disciplinary rules or procedures. The procedures undertaken pursuant to the policy are intended to be investigatory, not adversarial.

(B) Jurisdiction

- (1) The policy shall apply to all university personnel who may be involved with research activities, including faculty members, staff, students, research associates and fellows, post-doctoral fellows, and other research trainees.
- (2) The policy shall therefore apply to all research and scholarship conducted within the University community, irrespective of the funding source, if any, which supports the research or scholarship.
- (3) The terms "research" and "scholarship" shall be broadly construed, including activities ranging from scientific experimentation to artistic expression to research and scholarship in the humanities.
- (4) All persons to whom the policy applies, including those accused of research misconduct, have a duty to cooperate with all proceedings under the policy as well as any subsequent investigations. Such cooperation shall include providing research records and other relevant information to the vice president for research and/or his or her designee.

(C) Confidentiality

To the extent possible within the law and in accordance with the need to conduct a thorough inquiry, all participants in the actions initiated pursuant to the policy shall keep confidential all information regarding allegations and proceedings until the university process, including any disciplinary action, has concluded and all avenues of appeal under the university rules (if pursued) have been exhausted. The vice president for research shall be the university official responsible for determining when a release of information is necessary or appropriate.

(D) Administration of the policy

- (1) The Vice President for Research shall be responsible for disseminating the policy to the research community and handling all allegations of research misconduct. - (2) The vice president for research shall designate a coordinator to assist in administering the policy. The person appointed as coordinator shall not be university counsel acting in that capacity, but shall consult with University counsel to ensure that the requirements of the law and university policy are being satisfied.

(E) Administrative Actions

The vice president for research may, during proceedings under the policy or any subsequent investigation, take whatever administrative actions that are in his or her judgment needed to ensure the integrity of the investigation and to protect research funds or equipment or the legitimate interest of patients or clients.

July 11, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

(F) Definitions

The key terms for the policy shall be defined in the policy document.

(G) Procedures

(1) The policy shall describe procedures pertaining, but not limited to: assessing whether an allegation has been made in good faith and has merits; investigating pursuant to such findings; the role of administrators and other individuals in the process; the time line for such investigations; protecting data; reporting to sponsors and clients; and sanctions.

(2) A finding of research misconduct requires that:

(a) There be a significant departure from accepted practices of the relevant research community;

(b) The misconduct be committed intentionally, knowingly, or recklessly; and

(c) The allegation be proved by a preponderance of the evidence.

 - a) Program review
 - b) Reduced tuition for Ph.D. students in dissertation phase
 - c) Allocation of dollars reflects quality
 - D. FINANCIAL STABILITY – Protection/buffering against uncertain economic environment.
 - E. ALIGNMENT – Aligns with Academic Plan, President’s six objectives, and Master Planning goals.

- (9) $10M held in reserve to ensure stability in uncertain economic times.

C. User Fee Changes

1. International Student Fee

A fee of $50 for new international students will be established in FY 2009. This fee will be used to support the costs of an immigration attorney in the Office of Legal Services in order to address the rising workload surrounding international students and the legal requirements the university has to meet.

2. Project Fee for Construction projects

A new fee for construction projects will be established in FY 2009 in order to support the need to fund an attorney position in the Attorney General's Office of the State of Ohio to address needed legal work for OSU. Currently, the work is being handled by outside counsel, which is expensive. Providing funding to the AG's office will be cost effective overall.

3. Vehicle Maintenance Fee

A fee of $160 will be charged for each vehicle owned by OSU in order to provide cost recovery for these related costs of maintaining these vehicles.

4. ULAR Animal Per Diems

A 2% increase in the animal per diems will be instituted to assure that sufficient funding is available to help cover the costs of housing and caring for the animals.

D. Additional Budget Highlights

This budget includes the following additional highlights:

1. $9 million in one-time funds and $1 million in continuing funds to support Phase III of V of Targeted Investments in Excellence. The total commitment is $50 million over five years.
 2. $7 million for doctoral funding is set aside to be allocated by the Graduate School to enhance quality doctoral programs.
 3. The entering freshman class is expected to be 6,050. This is factored into the enrollment and revenue estimates. In addition, increased retention rates have been taken into account.
 4. $3.1 million in continuing funds to support step one of five for increasing the student financial aid budget to address existing commitments.
 5. $1.5 million in continuing funds and $2.7 million in one-time funds for significant improvements in security and fire safety.
 6. $0.10 per ASF in POM charges to all General Fund units to begin to address deferred maintenance needs. Similar increases are expected for several years until this problem is addressed.
 7. $9.7 million for the continued installation of the Student Information System.
 8. The Office of Development will utilize $1.3 million in carryover funds from FY 08 along with $750,000 additional funds in the Development Assessment to plan and develop the new Capital Campaign in FY 2009.
 9. $2.5 million in one-time seed money to build up Outreach and Engagement.
 10. The budget includes $228,000 for a new vice provost position for Global Strategies and International Affairs. The new position will allow us to stimulate and enable our aspirations to global eminence in a focused manner.

E. General Funds Increased Support by Area of Focus

Central discretionary funds of $5.6 million in continuing funds and $39.9 million in one-time funds are recommended to fund University-wide initiatives that cross college boundaries and strengthen core support services. More detail on these allocations will be presented in September.

B. Cost Savings

The University remains committed to continued improvements in cost savings and operating efficiencies, as reflected in this budget.

The FY 2008 – FY 2009 Biennial Budget Bill requires universities to meet efficiency incentive requirements in order to receive the full amount of state support. For FY 09, OSU provided information to the Board of Regents totaling $68.9 million in cost savings, which exceeded the target of $4.7 million. The cost savings submitted were primarily derived from strategic purchasing activities. The target for FY 09 is $14.2 million. We anticipate exceeding this target as well.

This operating budget also includes continued support for additional efficiency savings in the following areas:

- Energy Conservation
- Strategic Purchasing
- Transition to Work
- Your Plan for Health
- Enterprise-Wide Systems

More detail will be presented at the September meeting.

C. Financial Goals

This budget is balanced with appropriate reserves.

Financial goals are met in each of these areas:

- Margin
- Liquidity
- Debt Coverage

Additional information will be presented at the September meeting.

B. Summary

1. This budget meets our commitments to state officials for the second year of a tuition freeze for resident undergraduates. -- We have been able to support the commitment of the Governor and legislators to control the cost of higher education through tuition stability. This budget, along with internal reallocations, allows us to move forward toward our goals while holding tuition steady, thereby increasing access for citizens of Ohio.
 2. Because of increases in state support and internal reallocations, we will be able to continue to meet normal budget commitments such as continuing to improve the quality of our academic programs. -- Internal budget adjustments made by the university to support the state access goal included reallocations between programs, elimination and consolidation of operating units and increased external fund generation. All of this occurred while the university also achieved greater national and international recognition for its academic achievements and status as the flag ship for the University System of Ohio. Continued success is at least in part dependent on the state meeting its funding commitments for FY 2009.
 3. Future challenges still need to be addressed. -- There are a series of accumulated issues that may endanger our ability to continue toward agreed upon institutional and access goals if not addressed. These include increasingly debilitating deferred maintenance needs, reduced state capital construction funds, diminished funding prospects for the next biennium in the face of weak economic growth, and inefficiencies imposed by excessive regulation.

Over the last 12 months the University has worked to ensure that the project plans are aligned with the physical, programmatic, and financial goals of the OSUMC and those of the University. This additional review has provided the assurance that the OSUMC will be able to continue to move forward in a way that is beneficial to the University, the community and the state of Ohio.

RECOMMENDATION:

It is recommended that approval be given to advertise and contract for design services for the projects listed below. The total estimated cost for design services for these projects is $57M.

- a. EOC Clinical Expansion – Cancer and Critical Care
- b. Infrastructure and Roadways WOC Phase 2
- c. Playfield and Surface Parking
- d. Spirit of Women Park
- e. West of Cannon Parking Garage
- f. WOC Cancer Ambulatory and Cannon Bridge

Separate approvals will be required on individual projects before moving forward with construction. Specific programmatic and financial targets will need to be met prior to seeking approval.

CONSIDERATIONS:

- What impact will the project have on the finances of the University and the Medical Center?
- What are the deliverables and the timeline of this review?
- How will the Board be kept informed?
- Are these plans consistent with the University's debt schedule?

Description/Scope:

The Medical Center Facility Master Plan is a strategic initiative that will enable the Medical Center to expand its services in meeting its research, clinical and education missions to achieve parity with top-quartile academic medical centers nationwide. The MCFP projects will result in a net increase of approximately 270,000 gross square feet of parking, a net increase of approximately 1,060,000 gross square feet of clinical, faculty/staff/administrative, and support space, and renovate approximately 75,000 gross square feet of space.

Approval to advertise for a global construction manager and commissioning agent was received at the June 2008 Board of Trustees meeting as was approval to advertise for design services for the 10th Avenue Parking Garage and RDJC-MEP Upgrades project. Approval to advertise for design services for the following projects is now requested:

1. EOC Clinical Expansion - Cancer and Critical Care
2. Infrastructure and Roadways WOC Phase 2
3. Playfield and Surface Parking
4. Spirit of Women Park
5. West of Cannon Parking Garage
6. WOC Cancer Ambulatory and Cannon Bridge

The anticipated dates for requesting construction approval for the Medical Center Facility Plan projects are noted below. Projects are presented for construction approval at the completion of the construction documents phase.

- April 2009
 - Infrastructure and Roadways EOC Phase 1
- July 2009
 - Spirit of Women Park
 - Playfield and Surface Parking
- Nov 2009
 - Infrastructure and Roadways WOC Phase 2
 - RDJC-MEP Upgrades
 - West of Cannon Parking Garage
- Dec 2009
 - 10th Avenue Parking Garage
- Nov 2010
 - EOC Clinical Expansion - Cancer and Critical Care
- Feb 2011
 - WOC Cancer Ambulatory and Cannon Bridge

Funding Status and Sources: Funding has been confirmed and approved. Construction expenditures must be coordinated with the available debt capacity. The fundraising goal for the project is $75,000,000. It has not been determined which projects will require development funds; therefore, projects that will require development funds will be determined prior to requesting construction approval. In summer 2010 and submitted for BOT approval prior to construction for the CORE plan projects. Note that the Infrastructure and Roadways projects will move forward in 2009 for construction approval but will not have development dollars applied to them.

Logistics: There will be multiple logistics issues related to the amount of construction associated with these projects as well as across campus. A global Construction Manager will be hired to ensure coordination.

Energy and Sustainability: Energy and sustainability will be addressed during the design phases as requested by the Board of Trustees.

OARDC - Animal & Plant Biology Level 3 Isolate Fac

315-2000-125

Requesting Agency(s): OHIO AGRIC RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT CTR

N/A ASF/GSF Age: N/A

Description/Scope:

The proposed BSL-3 isolation facility is a new facility for the research of biological agents and pathogens in animals. It will support the research programs of several departments.

The specific facility location was established through a secondary siting study during the feasibility study phase of the project. The size of the building will be determined by the amount of funding acquired but is currently anticipated to be a $20-$24M project. The anticipated program will include three large animal labs, with a fourth large animal lab included as an alternate.

Approval is requested to advertise for Construction Manager services and a Commissioning agent to assist in the completion of the design phase and continue through building completion, testing and occupancy. The project will be presented to the Board of Trustees for construction approval at the completion of design.

How does this project advance the Academic Plan? To pursue research to prevent, treat, detect or control infectious diseases of animals. The facility is part of the OARDC BioOhio Research Park concept on the Wooster campus to enhance economic development in Northeast Ohio.

Funding Status and Source: Obtaining funding has been, and will continue to be a major focus of OARDC's effort to build the facility. Currently, OARDC is working through the FAES College Desk, Director of OARDC and the OSU Legislative Affairs office to secure additional funding for this facility. Currently, available funding for this project includes state capital dollars and federal dollars received through congressional appropriation. OARDC must have tangible evidence, as soon as possible, of intent to move forward in order to secure construction funding. Decisions on proceeding further with this project will be reviewed by the Senior Vice President for Business and Finance at four milestones: completion of schematic design, completion of design development, completion of construction documents and prior to construction.

Logistics: None

Energy and Sustainability: None

Risks: The building will have to be commissioned before it can be occupied, which may take a year to complete. During this time the facility will not be operational and cannot collect revenue.

(APPENDIX VII)

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY BOARD OF TRUSTEES
FISCAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

July 10, 2008

TOPIC: Issuance of University Bonds and Commercial Paper

CONTEXT:

In helping to address its capital and renewal and replacement plans, the university periodically issues public, tax-exempt debt in the form of long-term bonds and short-term commercial paper. This debt is backed by a pledge of the University's general receipts. The Ohio Board of Regents must also approve the pledge of general receipts.

SUMMARY:

The resolutions seek authorization of three debt issuances – fixed rate bonds, variable rate bonds and commercial paper. The final maturity on the bonds will be twenty years and the commercial paper will be eighteen months. The bond issuance will be $363 million plus issuance costs. This is below the $400 million limit previously set by the Board. Commercial Paper authorization is for up to $227 million.

The debt will be issued to refund $81 million in outstanding Commercial Paper and to fund twenty-four projects in areas including the medical center, student affairs, transportation, facilities infrastructure and three regional campuses. Commercial Paper is issued as needed to allow projects to facilitate construction and will be converted into bonds at a later date. All of these projects are in the University's Capital Plan previously approved by the Board of Trustees and are listed in Attachment A.

No refinancing of previous debt is anticipated at this time. Should market conditions become favorable prior to issuance, the resolutions would allow for a refinancing.

Applications for a rating have been made to the bond rating agencies. The University does not feel bond insurance or a bank line of credit is necessary.

CONSIDERATIONS:

- Will the university retain its AA credit rating?
- How much additional debt capacity does the university have?
- What will be the impact on the financial ratios and performance goals?
- Have the financing documents been reviewed by legal counsel?
- Is this a good time to issue debt?
- Does the University have the budget and cash flow to service the debt?

REQUESTED OF FISCAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE:

Approval is requested.

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY
COMMENCEMENT CONVOCATION

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

David L. Denlinger

David L. Denlinger is Distinguished University Professor and professor of entomology at The Ohio State University.

Dr. Denlinger earned his bachelor's degree in zoology from Pennsylvania State University in 1967 and his doctorate in entomology from the University of Illinois in 1971. He served as a research scientist for the International Centre of Insect Physiology and Ecology in Nairobi, Kenya, and as a research associate at Harvard University before joining the Ohio State faculty in 1976.

Dr. Denlinger is regarded as one of the world's leading environmental insect physiologists, and his research has had a profound impact on agriculture, the environment, and human health. His discoveries on how insects survive harsh weather offer new tools for controlling insect populations and for better understanding the regulation of animal development. His ongoing research in Africa focuses on the regulation of the reproduction of the tsetse fly, vectors of African sleeping sickness and nagana.

He served as chair of the Department of Entomology from 1994 to 2005 and won Ohio State's Distinguished Scholar award in 1996. In 2005, he was named Distinguished University Professor, Ohio State's highest faculty honor.

In 2004, Dr. Denlinger was elected to the National Academy of Sciences, the premier scientific society in the United States. He also has been named a fellow of the Royal Entomological Society, the Entomological Society of America, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Additionally, he has more than 200 published papers, serves on the editorial boards of six international scholarly journals, and has been the editor of the Journal of Insect Physiology since 1993.

Dr. Denlinger has received numerous awards, including the Recognition Award in Insect Physiology, the Founder's Memorial Award, and the C.V. Riley Achievement Award, all from the Entomological Society of America, as well as the Antarctica Service Medal from the National Science Foundation and the Gregor Mendel Medal from the Czech Academy of Sciences.

RECIPIENTS OF HONORS

John L. Hall

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE

Nobel laureate John L. Hall is senior fellow emeritus at the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST), adjunct professor at the University of Colorado, and adjunct fellow of JILA (formerly the Joint Institute for Laboratory Astrophysics), a cooperative physical science research institute of NIST and the University of Colorado-Boulder.

The Colorado native holds BS, MS, and PhD degrees from the Carnegie Institute of Technology (now Carnegie-Mellon University). He joined the National Bureau of Standards (now NIST) as a physicist in 1962 and served as senior scientist from 1971 until his retirement in 2004.

Internationally renowned for his experimentation with lasers, Dr. Hall has contributed significantly to the evolution of the laser from a laboratory curiosity into one of the fundamental tools of modern science. His research has resulted in a number of major innovations and developments in laser frequency stabilization, high-resolution and ultrasensitive laser spectroscopy, laser length and frequency standards, laser/atom cooling, quantum optics, and high-precision laser-based measurements.

He was awarded the 2005 Nobel Prize in Physics, jointly with Theodor Hänsch of the Max Planck Institute and Roy Glauber of Harvard, for his pioneering work on "Optical Comb" techniques, which allow simple and direct measurement of optical frequencies and have broad applications in science, meteorology, and diagnostic medicine.

Dr. Hall has received numerous other peer-generated awards, has more than 235 refereed publications, and holds 11 U.S. patents, the most recent on "Airport Sniffing." He is a member of the National Academy of Sciences and the French Légion d'honneur, and fellow of the Optical Society of America and the American Physical Society.

Frank Wilczek

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE

Frank Wilczek is the Herman Feshbach Professor of Physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and an adjunct professor in the Centro de Estudios Científicos in Valdivia, Chile.

Considered one of the world's most eminent theoretical physicists, he is known, among other things, for the discovery of asymptotic freedom, the development of quantum chromodynamics, the invention of axions, and the discovery and exploitation of new forms of quantum statistics (anyons). When only 21 years old and a graduate student at Princeton University, in work with David Gross, he defined the properties of color gluons, which hold atomic nuclei together. For this work, he was awarded the 2004 Nobel Prize in Physics.

Professor Wilczek received his BS degree from the University of Chicago and his PhD from Princeton University. After teaching at Princeton from 1974 to 1981, he was the Chancellor Robert Huttenback Professor of Physics at the University of California at Santa Barbara, and the first permanent member of the National Science Foundation's Institute for Theoretical Physics. In 2000, he moved from the Institute for Advanced Study, where he was the J.R. Oppenheimer Professor, to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Professor Wilczek has received fellowships from the Sloan Foundation and the MacArthur Foundation. He is the recipient of UNESCO's Dirac Medal, the American Physical Society's Sakurai Prize, the Michelson Prize from Case Western University, and the Lorentz Medal of the Netherlands Academy for his contributions to the development of theoretical physics. He is a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the Netherlands Academy of Sciences, and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He contributes regularly to Physics Today and to Nature, explaining topics at the frontiers of physics to wider scientific audiences.

His book, Longing for the Harmonies, co-written with his wife, Betsy Devine, was named a New York Times Notable Book of the Year. He is also the author of Fantastic Realities and his new book The Lightness of Being.

Alice Remington Galloway

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD

Alice Remington Galloway is a longtime supporter of and advocate for The Ohio State University, having earned her bachelor of arts degree in speech as a Phi Beta Kappa scholar from the university in 1947.

After raising her children, Mrs. Galloway joined the faculty of the Marion City Schools in 1967, teaching English, speech, and drama until her 1986 retirement. Throughout her teaching career, she was a member of many educational and theatrical organizations and directed annual musical and theatrical productions.

With her late husband, Joseph W. Galloway Jr., Mrs. Galloway devoted her energies to establishing the Ohio State Marion campus. Actively involved with the campus since its inception in 1957, the Galloways solicited funds from individuals and organizations throughout central Ohio to buy land and build Morrill Hall in 1968 and are recognized as campus founders. She has continued to be an active Marion campus volunteer for five decades in a variety of roles, including Buckeye Backers, a group of volunteers that she helped organize to serve the campus as needed and for which she serves as unofficial historian.

Beginning in 2006, Mrs. Galloway began service on the Marion campus 50th Anniversary Committee, where she researched archival scrapbooks and created a chronology of events vital to the development, character, and progress of the campus. The first segment of that history has been published and is titled Reflections: 1957-1968. The next installment will cover the 40 years of the present campus and its growth.

Mrs. Galloway's service was recognized with the Marion campus Ralph Howard Service Award in 2001. In 2006, she established the Susan Galloway Endowed Scholarship in memory of her late daughter, who earned her bachelor's and master's degrees in education from Ohio State.

Corbett A. Price

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD

Corbett A. Price is founder, chair, and chief executive officer of Kurron Shares of America, Inc., a leading health care acquisition, management, consulting, restructuring, and strategic advisory firm with offices in New York, Washington, D.C., Columbus, and Bermuda.

Since founding Kurron in 1990, Mr. Price has led the restructuring and revitalization of health care institutions and systems valued in excess of $2 billion. He has directed the operational, restructuring, and financial revitalization of more than 60 health care companies, urgent care centers, physician groups, assisted living nursing homes and home health care companies, third party administration companies, and hospitals throughout the United States.

Recognized as an international leader in health care management, Mr. Price has been frequently called upon by the governments of Central and South American countries to design, develop, or improve their health care systems. He is currently working with the governments of Mexico and Barbados to develop their health care systems.

Since earning his master's degree in health administration from The Ohio State University in 1975, Mr. Price has been a dedicated supporter of and advocate for the university. He provided the lead gift to create a professorship in Health Services Management and Policy in the College of Public Health, where he also established an endowment to fund scholarships, technological enhancements, and training programs. In addition, he has supported the Kirwan Institute for the Study of Race and Ethnicity. He serves as a director of The Ohio State University Foundation Board and is a member of the advisory board of the Fisher College of Business.

Mr. Price is the father of two sons, Devin Price and Dorian Price, both graduates of Ohio State. He is the co-founder, with Devin, of the Louise Cares Foundation, which provides educational opportunities, including private boarding school scholarships, to promising young inner city males from Baltimore, Maryland. Devin named the foundation in honor of his maternal grandmother, Louise Jenkins Bates, who graduated from Ohio State in 1936.

Present: G. Gil Cloyd, Chairman, Dimon R. McFerson, Jo Ann Davidson, Douglas G. Borrer, Leslie H. Wexner, Walden W. O'Dell, Brian K. Hicks, John C. Fisher, Alan W. Brass, Ronald A. Ratner, Algenon L. Marbley, Linda S. Kass, Debra J. Van Camp, and Jason W. Marion.

Dr. Cloyd reconvened the meeting on Friday, September 19, 2008, at 1:00 pm.

Dr. Cloyd:

So that we are all able to conduct the business of this meeting in an orderly fashion I would ask that the ringers on all cell phones and all other communication devices be turned off at this time, and I would ask that all members of the audience observe rules of decorum proper to the conduct of the business at hand.

At this point I would like to welcome Linda Kass, our new Trustee appointed by Governor Strickland on August 1, 2008. Linda is a strong advocate of education, the arts, and early childhood development. She currently serves as chair of the County Wide Champion of Children Initiative, board chair of the Bexley Education Foundation, a board trustee of Kids Ohio.org and a member of the Alumni Secondary School Committee of the University of Pennsylvania. We are really pleased to have you join the Board of Trustees, Linda, and extend you a very sincere welcome.

At this time I would also like to welcome Jonathan Hook, our new vice president and chief investment officer; Tom Katzenmeyer, senior vice president for University Communications; and Caroline Whitacre, vice president for Research. We are pleased to have you with us here today.

Next item in my report relates to our Statement of Expectations. In the memorandum I sent to all the Trustees on September 4, 2008, outlining our new committee structure and meeting times, I also sent you a copy of these Rules of Engagement that we adopted at our November meeting last year. I believe it is important that we return annually to this document to renew our commitment to it. We have made sure that our new Trustees have been given this document, as it forms the basis of our functioning as individual Board members and as a Board as a whole. It seems especially appropriate to do this at this meeting in which we have been pleased to welcome our Board Consultant, Professor Richard Chait from Harvard, back among us as we continue to seek ways to make ourselves the highest functioning Board possible. Professor Chait, thank you very much.

As I move into my second year as chairman, I want to begin by thanking Board members for all of their efforts this past year, and their commitment to continued diligence in the year ahead. We began discussing with Professor Chait yesterday a process for Board self-evaluation. Clearly any such process like this begins by measuring ourselves against our Statement of Expectations. I urge each of you to review the Statement periodically, as we all strive to attain the ideals that we espouse therein. I also want to highlight that the Statement calls for us to submit annually to the chair of the Board a written declaration of any potential or actual conflicts of interest with respect to the discharge of one's responsibilities as a Trustee of the University. If you have no conflict, I would like you to make a positive affirmation of such in an e-mail to our secretary, David Frantz.

Moving to the next agenda item, for myself, first of all, and this relates to President Gee's compensation, I want to note that it's the unanimous opinion of this Board that we have the best university president in the United States. We all understand the unique and highly valued asset that we have in President Gee. Now we had anticipated setting compensation at this meeting, but have found we need additional time to address some legal technicalities and to further define the Academic Excellence Fund this Board established one year ago to assist in the retention and recruitment of the highest caliber academic and administrative leaders for The Ohio State University, and to provide supplemental funding for campus initiatives and programs. In light of the additional work that is required, there will not be any documents available about our process until all the work is complete, and at that point in time all relevant public records will be made available to people. We fully expect to make our decision at our November Board Meeting, and as we take this action, it will be our collective goal to recognize that we have in Gordon Gee, the best president in American higher education.

I have one more item I want to cover before I turn it over to the president. Since our last Board meeting, the Ohio State family lost a very special member, and I would like to make a statement that reflects the feelings of this Board of Trustees. Dr. Allan Moore, the son-in-law of President Gee, was a relatively new member of the Ohio State family, but touched all of us with the warmth that lasts a lifetime. Allan was one of those very special people, imbued with great intellect, leadership qualities and a passion to serve others, while at the same time, humble, deeply respectful of others, and able to bond quickly with everyone. He became a Buckeye first as an enthusiastic fan of the football team, and then of the entire University. Allan's time with our family was far too brief. We all struggle with the loss of such a very special young person. However we do benefit from our memories of Allan; these are truly a gift. We also take inspiration from a man who was so passionately dedicated to the service of others. Allan really remains a compass for all of us, helping us stay directed to the role we have to help make the lives of others better and achievement of their dreams possible. Our thoughts and prayers remain with Dr. Rebekah Gee for her speedy recovery. It has been wonderful to see her up and about again and fully engaged in her constant drive to help others. Rebekah always makes a positive difference and our world a better place.

President Gee, our steadfast friend and leader, you remain in our thoughts and prayers in your healing journey.

I want to now call for a moment of silence, so that we can all reflect on Allan and the Gee family in our own way.

Thank you.

President Gee:

Thank you, I must say I want to thank you, Mr. Chairman, and the members of the Board and the members of the University family for that wonderful tribute to Allan. He was a very special person and indeed was the son that I never had, and you know I just miss him tremendously, as you can imagine. Rebekah is doing well, I just wanted to say that, thanks to the healing power of the friends she has in this room and beyond, so I really do appreciate that, and thanks for those kind words, they were exactly the way I wrote them about my presidency, so I want you to know that. I really do appreciate that.

You know because I remind you every chance that I get, that I am a great optimist by nature, but after last Saturday's game, and Sunday's decimation of Central Ohio by hurricane Ike, even I have been wondering when the locusts will descend. If trouble comes in threes, my fingers are crossed that the third somehow involves Rich Rodriguez.

Truly the University's progress continues, and we have pulled together through difficult times. Many of our faculty and staff are still without power in their homes, which is particularly problematic when we are preparing for the arrival of 10,000 people in the residence halls alone. The University is making every accommodation possible for faculty and staff and even flexible work arrangements. The RPAC has been open to those needing showers, and colleagues are helping one another in a myriad of ways. Autumn, of course, is a time of renewal in the rhythm of University life, and we are starting to feel that just by the vibrancy of the place. New faculty, new students, and I am thrilled to report that our entering class is the strongest ever. New high marks have been hit for all the test scores and grade point averages. One especially telling measure of Ohio State's distinction is the huge number of international freshmen who have been attracted to this University this year. Some 240 students from 73 different countries will begin as freshmen next week. It is more than twice the number of international freshmen from just a year ago. Our Land Grant University to the world, as our provost calls us, is taking hold fast. We are fortunate to have attracted superb new faculty as well. I spent part of this week on the Rhodes Scholars Tour with dozens of them, and I will tell you they are very exceptional. In addition to our new faculty, we have other faculty news. Last week we learned that Ann Hamilton, in our Department of Art, received the Heinz Award in Arts and Humanities. Let me just say that is one of the most important awards given to an artist in this nation. Professor Hamilton's installations are world-renowned and this award is well-deserved. Recognition of her talents and broad reach make a real difference in the arts and humanities programs, in this University and beyond. Now while the award is of course very much hers alone, it also signals a great strength in the University's visual and performing arts, in fact, this fall is packed with great art offerings on campus and around the city. The new Warhol Exhibition opened last weekend at the Wexner Center. It is here through February. It is fabulous and it received wonderful reviews. Ohio State was selected as the only U.S. site for this show because we are the nation's most comprehensive research University and because of our gifted faculty and students, along with the wonders of the Wexner Center itself.

Ohio State is getting its own 15 minutes of fame as well. Next week the Columbus Museum of Art unveils its show "Objects of Wonder from The Ohio State University." This is an eclectic collection of the University's treasures from Thomas Moran's paintings, to John Glenn's flight manual, and John Glenn keeps everything I want you to know, I have been in his basement. I am delighted that the museum is shining a spotlight on Ohio State.

I want to take a moment to mention my signing of the Amethyst Initiative. This by the way is a personal signature, not that of the University. I want to make that very clear. I have done so because I believe strongly in America's young people, regardless of one's position on this particular issue, all of us in higher education acknowledge the very real, very dangerous problem of alcohol abuse and binge drinking. I have joined with well over 130 other college and university presidents in calling for open and candid discussion of the problems and potential solutions. Higher education has always been a forum for open discourse, while this issue is an emotional one, it should not be exempted from debate.

Faculty research continues its exceptionally strong showing. The latest National Science Foundation rankings released in July places Ohio State second nationally in attracting industry sponsored research. We have moved up two places. We now rank ninth among all universities in total research funding. By the way, the two institutions we passed, I will just remind you again, the University of Pennsylvania and Stanford University, they are fading fast.

That brings me of course to acknowledging Dr. Caroline Whitacre who happily for us just accepted the position of vice president for Research. She has all the right stuff for the job, including the creativity, wisdom and determination to help grow our stellar research programs. I might just make a quick personal note, I have known Caroline now for 18 years. She was one of our great young faculty members, and still is a young faculty member, but this time she is taking on an extraordinarily important position, and no one is better equipped for that.

I have also made other key hires as I finalize my senior leadership team. I am delighted that Tom Katzenmeyer, Tom over here has joined us as senior vice president for University Communications. We hired him away from The Limited.

Swiping talent from Board members shop might seem a bad career move on my part, but I believe Les has forgiven me, I hope so. We also announced this week the hiring of Representative Joyce Beatty, she will be a tremendous asset as we reinvigorate our already substantial work in Ohio's communities.

It is no secret that Ohio State is a wonderful place to grow careers. External validation of that came this summer when Ohio State was recognized by the Chronicle of Higher Education as one of this nation's great colleges to work for. That is a tremendous honor, but my sights are set even higher. This fall, deans and administrative leaders will begin to work with faculty and staff to enhance the University's culture. This means reinvigorating ourselves. It means giving past accomplishments their full due, but raising the bar even higher. It means working collaboratively in new ways, reducing bureaucracies where ever we encounter them, and finding joy in the fact that we work at one of the nations most important institutions. Transforming from an elephant into a ballerina, as I called it the other day, will not be easy but the results will be well worth the effort.

We owe it to ourselves to be sure, but first and foremost we owe it to the state of Ohio. During my 4,100 mile state tour this summer, I reconnected with Ohioans and their needs. I saw first hand the work we are doing in all 88 counties; work with the schools, 4-H clubs, farmers and small business people, from fostering startup electronics companies in Dayton, to conducting all kinds of research with Honda in Marysville. Ohio State is an economic engine that never sputters and never quits. We are founded as an agent of opportunity and we are duly bound to meet needs head-on. So I am committed not to just fulfilling our mission, but to extending it. This, and I will say this to everyone on this Board and to all those who are listening to this, this is our moment of calling. This is our time of grace; this is Ohio State's noble purpose. So I thank you today, particularly for the opportunity to lead this great University at such an important time.

Mr. Chairman that is my report.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you President Gee. I would next like to have a session we enjoy very much; this University is about students and our Student Recognition Awards. Trustee Debra Van Camp will make these introductions.

STUDENT RECOGNITION AWARDS

Ms. Van Camp:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. Today I have the privilege of introducing to everyone, and awarding on behalf of the Board, two exceptional students from two different colleges, with the student recognition award. These two students serve as two perfect examples of the tremendous impact that students across the University are having on our local community and across the world.

First I would like to introduce you to Brian Williams, who is here in the front row, along with Dr. Jacquelyn Monroe, director of Undergraduate Studies in the College of Social Work. Brian is a senior who grew up in Youngstown, Ohio. He began his academic career in the public school system but did not pursue college immediately after high school graduation. However, upon entering Ohio State, Brian found his destiny in the College of Social Work where he has demonstrated academic excellence and outstanding service to others. He currently serves as the president of Mwanafunzi, which is the OSU student chapter of the National Association of Black Social Workers. He is a member of the African Youth League at Ohio State and is among the prestigious group of students selected to participate in the Team Smith group on campus. Last year Brian attended the National Association of Black Social Workers Conference in Los Angeles, where he was able to interact with other researchers from across the country and discuss his aspirations of becoming more involved with research at The Ohio State University. He has been active with the Bell Resource Center which addresses critical issues in society affecting African American men. Brian, today the Board recognizes your initiative, service and leadership both on and off campus, and would like to thank you for your dedication by presenting you with this Student Recognition Award.

Mr. Brian K. Williams:

Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen. This is my first award, and I am honored to receive it. I do the things that I do not to be honored or have recognition; I do them because I just love to. I love school; I love The Ohio State University. I was intimidated to come here at first because I heard that it was so big and people would not help you, but when I got here I found out that was untrue. I received help from so many different resources. Anything that I ever wanted to do, anything I set my mind to do, and I did not know how to go about doing it, I could find it here, and I did find it here, so I just want to thank you for this award, and I do really appreciate it. Thank you.

Ms. Van Camp:

Thank you Brian. The second student I would like to recognize today is Katherine Clonan-Roy who is here with her father Bob Roy. Kate is a senior in the College of Humanities nominated by Interim Dean John Roberts. She is a double major in Women Studies and Spanish with a minor in Neuroscience. She is a member of the Honors Collegium, and she was awarded one of the Richard and Karol Wells Scholarships from the College of Humanities last year. This spring she was one of ten students participating in a Women in Politics internship course, through which she worked with Representative Tracy Heard in the Ohio House. During summer break she has continued her education through study abroad programs in London, Spain, and most recently in Mexico, where she conducted field work on her honors thesis on indigenous women active in the Zapatista movement. She is a volunteer with Big Brothers and Big Sisters and a member of the service organization Club Hispanol, she volunteers at a bilingual medical clinic here in Columbus. Kate, you demonstrate a combination of academic excellence, intellectual curiosity, and service, both in the local community and abroad. Today the Board honors you for your dedication by presenting you with the Student Recognition Award.

Ms. Katherine Clonan-Roy:

First I just want to say thank you. I am so honored to receive this Ohio State Board of Trustees Student Recognition Award. As an undergraduate at Ohio State I have had the opportunity to do and to envision myself in so many different things. My freshman year when I arrived, I envisioned myself as a doctor one day. Starting out as a biology and Spanish major in the pre-health sciences track, my honors advisors quickly recommended that I volunteer at a bilingual free clinic here in Columbus. I still volunteer there today and I am constantly exposed to vivid realities of things that I learn about in my classroom curriculums.

The next year I saw myself as an athlete, as I had a short career in the Ohio State Varsity Women's rowing team. My junior year when I changed my major to women's studies, I envisioned myself as a policy maker, as I took the class which allowed me to intern with State Representative Tracy Maxwell Heard. Through all these ideas of what I would become, I do not think I would have ever envisioned that one day I would be conducting field work research on indigenous women in a rebel army in the mountains of Chiapas, Mexico.

September 19, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

My academic concentration of women's studies, Spanish and neuroscience, my field work abroad and all of these experiences tell you about the breadth of opportunity and the commitment of the faculty and staff to their students at Ohio State. Being here has made it possible for me to create my own academic focus - to be a varsity athlete for a bit and then to conduct research abroad for my senior honors thesis. My professors and advisors have introduced me to ideas that have allowed me to develop as a scholar and a humanitarian. Ohio State is so unique to be so large and yet to provide such a supportive and encouraging academic community.

I want to say thank you to my parents who have always inspired my academic ambition, to my thesis advisor, Dr. Ana Del Sarto and Dr. Jill Bystydzienski. My academic advisors and honors collegiums advisors, who have all broadened my ideas of the world, and what my future can hold, and to the Ohio State community and Board of Trustees for providing me with such vast opportunities which define my academic experiences.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you so much Kate. I would now like to move to Committee Reports, and we will first hear the report from the Audit and Compliance Committee, Mr. Fisher.

-0-

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Mr. Fisher:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. Our Audit and Compliance Committee addressed two areas. I would remind the Board that in the last two years we had a consultant arrangement with PriceWaterhouseCoopers (PWC), particularly looking at internal controls, and first of all I want to reiterate that there are a lot of complimentary remarks and reports from PWC, and we are building off of that. We did have some things that they encouraged us to look at, and we are certainly doing that. This is a true partnership between the Audit and Compliance Committee and management in terms of going forward in the future. It is certainly our sense here that the best audits are preceded by effective internal controls, and that is what we are trying to do. Mr. Shkurti reported on the work of a committee chaired by Leslie Flesch, and they are looking at internal controls in four major areas, policies, personnel, processes and accountability. I will highlight one area that we think is very critical and Bill has been working on, and that is the reporting of CFO's to senior fiscal officers on a more frequent basis with dotted line authority. Truly in this area, we think that the way to go is to prevent fraud and abuse, not correct it.

Our second area was a visit from Kathy Starkoff, who is relatively new to the University, with about three months on the job as our chief information officer. We are looking at the whole area of data protection, and I can tell you from a personal issue in my own company that when you lose someone's social security number they have a lot of perception about your character and ability, so it is very important that we work collectively as one University to protect data. Kathy, through her work is moving forward and we are taking a general approach for a decentralized group of data. We are about 99% there in early-on encryption of a lot of laptops and computers. We have a little ways to go there, and over time we will have additional programming and training University wide to emphasize the sensitivity and need for protection of data for everyone.

That concludes my report.

September 19, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Fisher, are there questions or comments?

I just have one question. To keep in following the policy, what are the thoughts of the University as we put the good protection programs in place, to make sure that they get followed in a large complex institution that is always a difficult project?

Mr. Fisher:

Maybe Bill can answer, it was my impression that this is primarily done through job descriptions and performance evaluations in the long-term, but right now this is a concerted effort to identify with everyone the importance of data security. With Kathy's leadership, they are doing that. Bill may have more detail on how he intends to enforce it.

Mr. Shkurti:

Actually on the instructional technology and cyber security, Kathy would be the enforcing officer. In any type of policy University wide the first important thing is a clear set of expectations sent down from the center to the units, and Kathy has done that. She has set some standards, and the next step is to make sure people understand that and are complying which is going through now, and then monitoring from the center so that people who are not in compliance can be given corrective action, and I think she reported 99 percent compliance on most of the key cyber security issues at this point.

Dr. Cloyd:

I think that is great progress Bill, but coming back to what Mr. Fisher said, this is just so important and in a University like this I think that unfortunately the nature of information that is available in computer systems really need to get to the 100 percent level. While 99 percent in most areas is pretty darn good, in this area the one percent can cause all kinds of problems, and I recognize we are in a transition state, but I would just give a voice of encouragement to keep after this one and we really cannot be satisfied until we have the 100 percent.

Mr. Shkurti:

Mr. Chairman that is appropriate and in fact that issue came up in the committee and Kathy mentioned that she was in the process of closing the loop on the outliers if you will, and probably within a month expected to have that done.

Dr. Cloyd:

Great, any other questions or comments for Mr. Fisher?

We will next have a report on the Committee on Trusteeship from Mr. McFerson.

Mr. McFerson:

Thank you Mr. Chairman, and thank you for beginning this meeting by refreshing our memories with regard to the Statement of Expectations. We need to continually keep this in mind as Board members; my colleagues know that, I have brought it up from time to time. It clearly is the document as to how we operate. The Committee on Trusteeship was not in place two years ago, and it was organized when we expanded our numbers from nine to fifteen and needed to take a look at how we are structured, how we operated, and we had a long list of agenda items at that time and we are continuing to address some of those. We appreciated having Dr. Chait with us, I think he is still in the audience somewhere. He has helped us in the early stages, and he is back, once again to evaluate how we perform, and he never will give us an A+. We always have room to improve, and he has helped us understand where those areas are.

I would also share with the Board that one of the responsibilities that this Committee has according to the bylaws of the Board is the Chair selection process. As Dr. Cloyd indicated he is in his second year, we recognized that it is the responsibility of this Committee, and we are beginning to talk about that.

We also had some conversation about the Board attendance requirements with regard to state law, and then we moved into talking about evaluation of the Board. It was on an early list of things we wanted to do, and we will continue to make progress in that area too. It is important that a Board have the courage to evaluate its performance as to whether or not we are doing the kinds of things we said we want to do and should be doing to help the administration and to be good stewards.

Finally, as a Committee, we are asking for some dialogue here, Mr. Chairman, on the question of National Trustees, maybe there is a better name, not Ohio Trustees, but we have talked about this, and we thought it was time now to bring this forward for some conversation as well with the full Board, and then we can take it back into the Committee for a recommendation. So the early suggestions here would be to establish the position, and I am going to use the term National Trustee, I recognize that you may not like that name, who would be non-Ohio residence and would be chosen on the basis of their ability to contribute to the University. Coming from anywhere outside of Ohio, recognizing that this Board always has the need for additional skill sets in areas where we may need them. These would be individuals of state or national prominence where they are located. We have if not the largest, the second largest alumni group in the country, so we have a large number of people to consider. We would suggest initially, perhaps three of these, such individuals, appointed by the Board, each serving a three-year term, perhaps eligible for appointment to a second term. They of course would be governed by the same rules and laws that govern this Board. They would be non-voting Trustees, only Ohio residences can be voting Trustees, but they would be assigned to committees and would be voting members of those committees, and would sit in with us throughout our meetings. They would be expected to have the same attendance requirements, and in many respects, act and perform like we are all expected to act and perform.

So with that, Mr. Chairman, I would ask for any comments that my colleagues might have that we would be able to glean insight from, and then we will take it back into our committee for further discussion.

Mr. O'Dell:

Mr. Chairman and Dimon, I think it would be an excellent idea and there are always areas where we need some assistance and we have some really fabulous people who are outside of this state who, bringing in their expertise could really help us in various ways. I strongly support your recommendation.

Mr. Marion:

I also think one thing we can consider, regarding our global context at the University as well, is expanding this beyond national to even being potentially international trustees as well. Coming up with an appropriate name for the Trustees would be the dilemma. Charter Trustee, is something I have heard, speaking with Dick Chait about, but I do think an appropriate name would be good, but we do not want to limit ourselves just to this country.

September 19, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Mr. Hicks:

Mr. Chairman, it may be worth pointing out that both Ohio University and Miami do have these kind of national trustees, and that they have worked very, very successfully, and have been a value added contributing members to those boards too, so this is not a completely novel concept, but I support it very much. We have been kicking it around for a couple of years; I think it is a very good idea.

Mr. Brass:

I also would echo my support for it as well. Question and a statement.

Question would be, the Statement of Expectations, I would assume they would be also abiding as well with?

Mr. McFerson:

Absolutely.

Mr. Brass:

The statement I would make would be that I think we bring a lot of expertise around this room, but there are areas that we may in fact have avoided, so we should be very cognizant of the fact that we could bring bench strength to the Board, possibly in areas of expertise that we in fact could augment our current membership with, so I think that would be something we should look long and hard for.

Dr. Cloyd:

Any other comments?

Mr. Wexner:

I am very supportive. I think the notion of national and international Trustees and having more skills and diverse opinions on subject matter, whether it is national or global, I think it would make us much better.

Judge Marbley:

Mr. McFerson, you know that I support this concept. We have had this discussion before. One question that I have though, would these national Trustees be limited to outside of Ohio, because there may come a point when we have Trustees or people we want to bring on who have particular expertise in unique and discrete areas, who may be in the state of Ohio, but maybe not on our Board, so could we consider Ohioans National Trustees?

Mr. McFerson:

Judge Marbley, I believe we can consider anybody we want. We do have in place now the possibility for each committee chair with the exception of the Committee on Trusteeship, which is how we govern ourselves, for each Committee to appoint up to two non-trustees on their Committee and be voting members of those Committees, and that is also a good place for additional Ohio people to come and lend their expertise and help us.

Mr. Ratner:

I am totally supportive of the concept. I might suggest that we should consider whether we want to limit it to Ohio State Alumni. As one non on the Board, those of us in my camp can make a lot of contributions to the University, but if we are going to be casting our net wide, I think we should cast it very wide, and at least in the rule making, and then decide as we get into this and begin to understand it the pool that we want to select from. The attempt here should be to cast a very wide net and get the very best people who are also willing to be very committed to the University and to move the University forward.

Dr. Cloyd:

Any other input for Mr. McFerson?

Mr. McFerson:

Hearing none we will take these comments under advisement and talk about it at our next meeting. It might be a meeting or two before we come back with a proposal, but thank you for your feedback, and feel free to call or offer any other comments to me any way you can get me, that you think might help. We will work on the name. Sometimes names are the hardest things to tackle.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. McFerson. We will next hear the report from the Medical Affairs Committee.

Mr. Brass:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. Good afternoon everyone. We had a very good meeting, and covered an awful lot of ground, and I will try to summarize it quickly for the Board. Dr. Steve Gabbe and Dr. Chip Souba, along with other executive members of our team started off the meeting with some really good news, and I thought it would be worthwhile sharing. Our class of 2012, which just entered the Medical School, is absolutely an outstanding class, not good, not very good, but absolutely outstanding. There are 210 students, they are 50/50, male/female, 45 percent are from out of state, and 55 percent from in-state, 92 from different colleges are representative with this incoming class, 82 different majors, the average grade point average coming in at 3.78 on a 4.0 scale, just a great class coming into our Medical School this year.

I want you to be aware that we have 18 clinical departments and six basic science departments in our medical system, and we are currently looking for two chairs in our basic science department, one in pharmacology and one in the neurosciences, and four clinical chairs, one in radiology, one in the center of transplantation, one in radiation medicine and one in anesthesiology. In the past year we have focused so much on the master plan, we are now starting to move our attention to some of the inner workings of the Medical School as well.

We approved five items in the Medical Affairs Committee this past time, two of which were endorsed and also passed on to the Finance Committee for approval and endorsement as well, but I wanted to make sure all four are understood. First thing we approved at this meeting was a brand new scorecard called Project One. It really is a benchmarking scorecard that we will be using throughout the construction project to manage all of the basic parameters that we put in place as part of the forecast to make sure we stay on target as it relates to such a large project. They are based on four different criteria, one is financial performance, one is the growth of the business itself, one is productivity and efficiency and the last one is usage of contingency plans and monies. In a project of this size you have to monitor all four. We did endorse that as a brand new scorecard that will in fact be used to monitor the system.

John Stone, our finance individual in charge of the finances for the medical system, basically gave us a very good report for the first two months; not only against our benchmarks we are using for the project, but against last years benchmarks and against the budget. Everything is looking good, I can go into details, but the bottom line is we had a very strong first two months. Our EBIDA, our days cash on hand and our debt service coverage, one red flag came up on days cash on hand, and that is one of the critical things we are looking at each day's cash on hand represents $3.5 and $4 million to our medical system. We watch days cash on hand very closely, the only reason it was red flagged was we had three payroll systems this time, and the reason I am highlighting it is to show you the magnitude. One payroll system drives $15 million. It is something we have to watch, and watch very carefully. All of our numbers are looking better than last year, which is a very important statement.

Next, we spent some time on the selection of a construction manager for the new project. After going through a complete RFP and looking and interviewing, we have arrived on Turner, and specifically a gentleman by the name of Randy Kaiser, who will be joining us to be our construction manager for this project. We did approve that and it will be moving forward.

In addition to that our internal project manager was also selected. His name is Fred DeWeese. Fred has extensive experience on large projects throughout the country. He is coming here, will be on the board, and will be working internally with Jay Kasey, Steve Gabbe and Chip Souba and others as it relates to our project here, so we are proud of that.

We spent some time taking a look and talking through our ambulatory care sites. As you know we are beginning to diversify as it relates to moving off campus as well. We have four of those that are in the cue, one of which we brought forward to the Fiscal Affairs Committee for approval; we have approved it and it is on the agenda for today's approval, and that is Gowdy Fields. Gowdy Fields site will basically relocate ENT, plastic surgery, ophthalmology and the center for women's care. It basically will free up space on the main campus. It will move us in a very close location. The site is about 137,000 square feet, has six operating rooms and is scheduled to go operationally upon approval next year.

We talked about the central chiller plant, as part of a project that is the size of what we are about to undertake. There is a need for a chiller plant. We basically are going to be buying services through the University chiller system verses doing it ourselves inside the hospital structure, and that also was approved by the Medical Affairs Committee, and it has moved over to the Fiscal Affairs Committee. It was approved by the Fiscal Affairs Committee, and is on our consent agenda today.

The last thing that we spent some time on and we will be spending more time on is biomedical research as it relates to the medical and health system. We have a research tower that was built a couple of years ago. It has three shelled in floors and the rest of it is fully consumed. We basically have about 75,000 square feet of space. We are now beginning to take a hard look at the funding of the three additional floors. I am happy to tell you that the metrics that were put in place for the first phase of the BRT are being met as far as the overhead coming in to support that and pay for that. So we now are going through feasibility and sensitivity analysis as it relates to making sure if we finish up the three last floors, which we do need, whether or not we can in fact make sure that the funding mechanism works. On a macro-scale, just so we have this in the right perspective, we are short about 300,000 to 400,000 thousand square feet of research space for a medical system of our size. One of our fortes, and one of the reasons we have been able to attract and retain the kind of faculty and staff that we have has been our strong bench research. This is something we are taking very seriously and you will be hearing more about that as well.

September 19, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

The five items that were approved, Mr. Chairman, this was our scorecard, which I think will be a valuable tool, our construction manager, our construction company, our chiller plant, and a long-term lease for the Gowdy Field Ambulatory Care site. That completes my report Mr. Chairman.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you, Mr. Brass. A question I have, the laboratory space, the research laboratory space, is the projection of need based upon size and what we expect to have coming in in research funding, or are we actually missing opportunities right now on research funding because we do not have space?

Mr. Brass:

I will call on our two doctor friends over here. I think it is a combination of both. Steve and Chip do you want to add to that please?

Dr. Souba:

Dr. Cloyd, the number that Mr. Brass cited of being about 300,000 to 400,000 thousand square feet shy is compared to our aspirational peers. Right now we have about 500,000 total assignable square feet in the Medical Center for research and our aspirational peers are all up around 900,000 to 1,000,000, so we are shy on that front.

The flip side of that coin as Mr. Brass intimated is that creating new space becomes an extremely powerful magnet that is able to attract top researchers and usually top researchers who are established and well funded and are able to move their entire teams. In fact, my colleague to my right, Dr. Steven Gabbe, was very successful in pulling that off at his previous institution.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you.

Mr. Brass:

One other thought. This is a very difficult era to get grant funding. Only one out of twelve grants that are submitted are now funded through Washington, and in order to get the kind of dollars we want and need to bring in the senior members that really are funded, this becomes one of those critical issues that you have to deal with.

Mr. McFerson:

Mr. Brass, you might remind this Board more emphatically as to how we are paying for this building from those research grants and those indirect costs.

Mr. Brass:

The metrics on overhead, the way a research grant comes in, it has a very large component called indirect costs, and those indirect costs are real dollars that actually flow into an organization to pay for not only the staff, but it is one of the few mechanisms in that it pays for the electricity and water as well, and if you are able to be very successful with your research based on the protocols that are established, they will flow the indirect dollars as part thereof. If you are unsuccessful those indirect dollars will shut down as fast as you started up. We have been very successful with this new building as it relates to that metric. We have met those criteria, we are being reimbursed, and the indirect costs are paying for the space online, so we are optimistic that if we get the right recruits to fill that space, that metric will continue. We are not ready to propose it yet because we need to make sure that the sensitivity analysis is done, but we are feeling pretty good at this point.

Mr. Wexner:

How big is the Biomedical Research Tower, the new building?

Mr. Brass:

Chip, do you want to give an exact square footage please.

Dr. Souba:

Mr. Wexner it is ten stories and each floor is 40,000 square feet, but about 25,000 of that 40,000 is what we call assignable usable square footage, the rest is hallways and the like.

Mr. Brass:

Three shelled floors, and that is where we came up with 75,000 of usable square footage, about 24,500 per floor.

Mr. Wexner:

You said you are going to potentially add 500,000 feet; I was just trying to think of how many more buildings. I was converting that into new buildings.

Mr. Brass:

I have not gone there, staff has. Right now we are looking at three floors, 75,000 square feet of usable square footage to add to the system.

President Gee:

I think the point that Steve and Chip are making is a very powerful one, and Caroline would certainly join with us in that regard. It is a war for talent, and we have done very well in that war, noting as I did earlier that we have moved into the 9th position. Let me just remind everyone that there are 3,600 colleges and universities in America, we are ranked number nine in terms of our research productivity, which is extraordinary. There are 3,590 university presidents who have great envy of me, but in this very competitive world when both the National Institutes of Health (NIH) budget and the National Science Foundation (NSF) are flat, and flattening quickly, the competition is very keen, and so therefore it is very critical that we continue to work very hard to keep our faculty here in place and those facilities are very essential for that. The second thing of course is the fact that we have to go out in a very competitive world and find new faculty, but senior faculty are very important. We also need to understand that we need to continue to grow our own and hiring at the junior level allows us to continue to create an environment in which people come and join us, so we have to be able to also invest in them. Steve did a wonderful job at Vanderbilt of investing in younger faculty who grew in a very short period of time into productive members of our academic community. So it is a very nuance investment strategy we have to have, and one that I think we are working very hard to develop because it cannot be just one size fits all. We are working very diligently to make certain that we have a very discrete set of strategies to make that work.

Mr. Brass:

President Gee, I would absolutely echo that, and you know we have talked at the Board level that we are only as good as our people, and you really have to have the right people to drive it the right way, and I think we have that. One of the other good news items that we heard was that we use a company by the name of Press Ganey that does our satisfaction indexes based on how our patients/customers feel about us. Every one of our satisfaction indexes for all our entities have gone up. This is a score that basically is hard to increase because everybody is in, but our Ross Heart Hospital has received a score of 99%. I have never seen any institution that high, so kudos to all of our units, but especially to our Ross Heart Hospital. It has gained one of the highest scores I have ever seen, and that speaks of the kind of people we have, the quality of people we have, the attitude we have and how motivated we are. To the staff - nice job.

Dr. Cloyd:

Are there questions or comments?

Thank you for that report. We will next have a report from the Development and Investment Committee, Mr. Wexner.

Mr. Wexner:

Anything in Development Peter?

Mr. Weiler:

The summer has been spent primarily on resetting all of our unit goals. We have 24 fundraising units at Ohio State and our summer was spent on resetting all of those goals coming up for this fiscal year. The bounds of the summer was spent on beginning to work with all of the deans in setting all of their individual campaign goals and getting our arms around the $2.5 billion and how that might be allocated in terms of some of their needs. Busy with the staff as well in putting everybody in position, but primarily just a campaign plan, and so I think we are well on our way.

Mr. Wexner:

Jonathan Hook is new to us, getting organized and his feet on the ground.

Mr. Hook:

Yes, after being here seven weeks we have been focused on getting staff in place, creating the team as we are pulling it out of the treasurer's office, and then also getting the policies and procedures worked through so that those are set before we actually separate out and all the activities will be documentable and taken care of in the right way. Now with this market we are starting in on the portfolio and that will keep us busy for some time.

Dr. Cloyd:

The thought comes to mind, Jonathan, following Mr. Brass's report, we may want to locate your unit in the Ross Heart Hospital. Anything else to add Mr. Wexner?

We will next have a report on Academic Affairs and Student Life.

Mr. Borrer:

Thank you Dr. Cloyd. We had a relatively light agenda. However, it was very interesting. We had a presentation from Associate Vice President Larry Lewellen; he was discussing the strategies for attracting and retaining top faculty. We learned that by 2012, almost 40 percent of our tenured and tenure track faculty will be eligible to retire. This is a really staggering number when you look at the number of tenure track, tenure professors we have. Right now our annual turnover is about 7 percent and we are expecting that to go in excess of 10 percent by 2012, due to retirements and recruitment by other institutions. There are people who are after our people, and we are going to try and keep them.

Last year the Talent Acquisition, Retention and Engagement Strategy Committee was created and it was charged with evaluating the current and emerging trends and issues among the University's faculty and staff. In its examinations the committee focused on three major areas; leadership, talent planning and the reward system. They came up with three recommendations. First, we should position our department chairs as foundational leaders of their departments and shift away from the current idea of managing the department to leading the department to where it is headed. Secondly, we need to formalize a talent planning system to retain our faculty. We do not have specific programs in place for that at this time. We also need to attract the next generation of scholars and teachers and work hard to re-attract those professors that are re-entering the professorate. There are people who leave to go to other institutions, go into the private sector, and are now coming back, and that provides a very fertile ground for us to get very good professors. We also need to create a faculty rewards system that promotes collaboration as we have talked about in the last few days, that rewards varied faculty contributions.

We have asked Mr. Lewellen to come back to our Committee within the next couple of meetings to determine the actual rules and objectives that this Committee wants to set out, and how the metrics that they will be setting up to determine how we will measure those results. We think this is critically important for the University and we are looking forward to seeing Larry come back in to set those goals and objectives.

We then concluded the meeting with Provost Alutto's presentation of our routine personnel actions. That concludes my report.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Borrer, any questions or comments?

President Gee:

Mr. Chairman, I just want to point out again, and this comes from our retreat the other day. When we boil everything down, I think there is nothing more important than what we are talking about – talent and culture change, but the talent issues are enormously important. One of the things, and Larry is doing a wonderful job and working very hard to really get a handle on this, is recruitment and re-recruitment. This is a place where people come and they view themselves as long-term committed citizens because the institution has made it possible from junior to senior and creating that kind of environment which is one of the things that the provost and I are looking at right now. We can point to our success stories, and we have a lot of success stories of new people we have hired, and retention strategies and a variety of other things. One of the things that we really need to do is ask the other side of the question. Why do people choose a) to leave, or b) why do they not join us in the first instance. We are really pulsing that system right now and trying to get a lot more information so that we can then recalibrate our strategies. You can celebrate your successes; I want to know about our failures right now. I want to know why we have failed, and what we need to do to correct that. We need to give substantial energy and effort to that human resource calibration because I believe in today's environment that the answer to those questions will differentiate us from other institutions.

Dr. Cloyd:

Well said.

Mr. Wexner:

It just occurred to me because it was mentioned, I think it was yesterday or the day before, but you should know that Columbus Partnership is focusing on the same issues whether it is Battelle, Nationwide or ourselves, and 25 other businesses. From a community point of view to focus on retaining students in Ohio and central Ohio because there is such a large student population, and how to make a community a better place because we are worried about being brain drained at a student level but also at a more senior level. It is just a paid advertisement for the members of the Board. There is a collaboration here to make the community better, not as individual institutions but the community is more appealing, and we think of global world mobility. This is a good big issue for us in the broadest way.

President Gee:

You know as we talk about the knowledge of city we can characterize that in a number of ways, including creating an environment in which you are referring to the collegiums project which is focusing on students who come to this institution and others saying stay here with us. We have 430,000 living alumni around the world, we love to have them around the world, but we also want to have them have a commitment here. The second thing, which I think is very powerful is this notion of creating an environment in which we are all sharing resources. Let me give you an example, I think one of the great advantages that Ohio State has is in dual career couple area, i.e. we can go out and hire people, and there are a number of our faculty given the nature of who they are, that they are dual career people. Well sometimes they are academic and sometimes they are not, but they are dual career and so through the partnership we can develop this effort so that we are immediately sharing. For example, between ourselves and Battelle, there are so many opportunities, we were just talking today in the Board about one of those as an example, so our city is large enough to have a lot of opportunities, but our city is small enough to be able to make those connections that can be a powerful engine for use in terms of the recruitment and retention of talent over time.

Dr. Cloyd:

This is such an important point and I am really glad we are giving it this attention. This with Dr. Reschard who talked to most of us Wednesday and was outlining cataclysmic types of events that we are going to face in our global future absent change when you get into things like global warming, food and water availability, and things like that, but for a University who is just absolutely dependent upon the quality of the faculty for what the institution is able to deliver, we really are facing a troubling trend here. I came from a technical world so I cannot speak from a big part of the world here but I know that the boomer population, I am not surprised by the retirement figures that you have provided, Mr. Borrer, that was very similar to what we have looked at within our Proctor & Gamble technical organization, couple that to the fact that we have a situation today where we need to get more young people interested in technical careers. We have over half of the doctorates given in chemistry and engineering areas everywhere in the United States to foreign students, and with the changes in visa laws and also nicely emerging opportunities in the countries they come from, many of them prefer or have to go back to their home country of origin. We are having difficulty on a generation of the talent front and we are going to have a tipping point in retirement age and this retention concept is so important. I had not heard about this before Mr. Wexner, but I think you are absolutely right. What we can do in the greater community around this University to make it an attractive place is very important because this will really be a market share game of intellectual capital that we need to win, so a very important topic.

Mr. McFerson:

Can I just add a point to that, because I think you are right on and Ohio State has a role to play in this, and collaboration with other major universities across the country can put pressure and influence on Washington to change some of these rules and laws and immigration so that we can keep and retain some of these great students that come here and to learn and be educated. We need to keep them in America because as we heard Wednesday, we need 3 million more people a year, well there is a whole bunch that we are letting go back home.

Dr. Cloyd:

Any other comments? We will then go to the Fiscal Affairs Committee Report, Ms. Davidson.

Ms. Davidson:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. We had several reports that were given to the Fiscal Affairs Committee, one of them was a six year review of our capital projects and actually had some good discussion on how we now have a process in place to do a physical alignment of those projects between all of the various departments on campus so that whether it is coming out of athletics or academics or the medical center, there is now a group of people who look at how you align those, so for instance, you do not dig up the same street three different times when you can align these projects so they work along with each other. This alignment now has taken place through 2012 for projects we are looking at, and now they will work toward completing that alignment up through 2016. There are 115 projects over this period of time to 2012 that actually will be going on that are over $1 million. It is 80 percent of the money, but probably not 20 percent of the project, so you can understand all of the other small projects that are going on out there that can collide with each other.

There was an update on phase one of the student housing plan, which is a $250 million plan and the time in which to carry that forth has been reduced to a four year time period with a completion of that, if we keep on schedule we will have 90 percent of our students in doubles and singles, we will have 88 percent with private bath facilities, and we will have 80 percent in air conditioned facilities which would be a major change. They would then switch to look at phase two which would be adding additional student housing.

There was a report on the Medical Center expansion. Three projects have been completed in that expansion to date for a total of $86 million, the north Doan Hall, the relocation of the MRI, and Ross Hospital addition which we are all very familiar with. It is a little too early to say all three of those are on time and on budget, but it certainly looks like when we get the final report on that, that will be the case. The total infrastructure that we are looking at, and these are just infrastructure projects in general, infrastructure at the University over this period of time will total at about $440 million which includes the chiller that we are looking at and authorizing today. So that gives you a little bit of the concept of the amount of projects that are going on here on the campus.

There was one report on some interim approval that was given to an easement. As you know, easements, when they are initially given are to come to the Board for approval, but there is a process in an emergency situation that you can grant an easement. We had that emergency situation in July involving two of our construction projects which forced the relocation of a gas line, so we granted an easement to Columbia Gas so those projects were not held up.

There was a quarterly report, which is in your books, on the waivers of competitive bidding. Those waivers are given for any project above $250,000. If they need a sole source or in an emergency situation or for significant economic reasons, there were 63 grants given to go outside of competitive bidding which totaled about $63 million.

There were also the actions that we want to bring before the Board today for approval. First action is the absolutely last step in completing our approval for the fiscal year 2009 current funds budget. Most of you should have received this book, I would suggest that this is simply a book that you need to have with you all the time, and any question that you have about the finances of Ohio State University are answered in this book. I want to recognize Bill Shkurti's staff for the great work they did in putting this together for us. Just a couple of things to mention about completing our action on this, as you know the governor announced fairly recently some additional budget cuts, but protected the instructional subsidy line item for higher education, which obviously was an agreement with the universities. We are very pleased that the action was taken. We do have some line item appropriations that are outside of the instructional grant that will receive the same reduction that other state agencies will receive, but we are very pleased with where we are with instructional subsidy and feel comfortable in going ahead with the fiscal 2009 budget, even though everyone knows the economic conditions we are operating under and we are just very hopeful that they improve because we still have a fairly long way to go in the fiscal year 2009 timeframe.

The second issue that we are recommending for approval is two easements; one to Ohio Bell Telephone Company on Kinnear Road in telecommunications wiring, and the second one to the village of Put-in-Bay operation and for their maintenance. An amendment coming with a request from the Athletics Department for a long-term lease change on property that is on Knightsbridge Boulevard which would give us an opportunity to develop that property for a golf training center, for offices for our coaches, and for a recruiting center. This would modify the lease to increase the lease payments by $25,000 a month to accommodate those improvements because they will be advertised over the term of the lease in our design construction, management contract, which is something we do on an every meeting basis. I want to mention what is included in that because some of those are in an amended form from where they came to you initially. Let me first talk about those that were not amended. We are looking for a construction manager to be able to handle our bundle infrastructure projects so that we bundle them together. We have one construction manager that would be overseeing that for efficiency purposes. There was also a request to begin the design work for Kennedy Commons which is one our food services areas and also for the design of the chiller plant. In the recommendation on the chiller plant to move ahead with that design, and it is with the understanding that there has been no location determined for that chiller plant yet, and that will come back to the Fiscal Affairs and the Medical Affairs Committees for their consideration.

We have, in one instance, where we are looking to move ahead with the construction contract for Lincoln Tower which would be the beginning of the renovation of Lincoln Tower to renovate the housing there, to reconvert certain floors back to student housing. We have amended that resolution to provide that we will go for construction bids and advertising for construction bids for the contract, but we will not move ahead with permitting to move to construction without it coming back to both the Medical Affairs Committee or at least to the Fiscal Affairs Committee. There was one other issue, and that was the lease/purchase authorization for the building which we have talked about, Gowdy Fields. Many of you may not relate to where Gowdy Fields is, but if you look at the Time Warner building when you are driving up and down 315, you can easily see where this building exists, and it is requested from the Medical Center that we enter into a lease/purchase authorization for an ambulatory care center that Mr. Brass explained in his discussion with us. We amended that to basically not only let it be a lease agreement, but also a purchase agreement to give them the flexibility to look at those two options and again to move ahead based upon what is best for the University under those circumstances. So while those will be included on the consent agenda, I wanted to mention that those two resolutions have been amended, and you have copies of those amended resolutions before you. I would be happy to answer any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Ms. Davidson. Questions or comments?

Dr. Cloyd:

Sorry for the delay, I was just checking the revised resolution to make sure it reflected what you described Ms. Davidson.

Any other questions or comments?

Thank you very much. We are now ready to move to the Consent Agenda which is before the Board of Trustees, and I will call on President Gee to present it to the Board.

RESOLUTION IN MEMORIAM

Howard E. LeFevre

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on June 30, 2008, of Howard E. LeFevre, regional trustee emeritus of The Ohio State University Newark Campus Board of Trustees.

Mr. LeFevre graduated from The Ohio State University in 1929 with a bachelor degree in architectural engineering. In 1946, he founded B&L Motor Freight, now known as Truck One located in Newark, and continued to drive to his office nearly every day until just a few months before his passing. In 1996, The Industrial Institute of Technology, later renamed The Works, opened in the former Scheidler Machine Works building that Mr. LeFevre bought to save from demolition. On May 18, 2008, The Works, with Mr. LeFevre cutting the ribbon, unveiled the new LeFevre Foundation Administration Building, his last planned addition to the museum.

He was a driving force in the establishment and success of Ohio State Newark for more than 50 years, serving on the first advisory committee, as a lifetime trustee emeritus, and on the Newark Campus Development Fund Board. Over the years he has, with magnificent generosity, contributed his time, talent, and treasure to nurture the growth of Ohio State Newark and has consistently been one of Ohio State's strongest supporters. His commitment to investing in the future was evident through his annual support of scholarships providing financial assistance to hundreds of students over the years. The students are a tangible symbol of his investment in the future and truly represent his legacy.

He was honored with a Distinguished Service Award in 1976, with the Ralph D. Mershon Award, the Everett D. Reese Medal, the Alumni Centennial Award and, in 1997, was presented with the John W. Alford Extraordinary Lifetime Achievement Award by the Newark and Licking County Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. LeFevre, philanthropist, entrepreneur, and community leader, gave generously of his time and leadership through many civic organizations in his community, including the Newark Chamber of Commerce, Newark Rotary, the Licking County United Way, and the Licking County Foundation. He was a founding member of Ohio State's Presidents Club and served on that organization's executive committee during two separate terms.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Howard LeFevre its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Setting Budget Priorities

Budget Context

On October 1, 2007, Gordon Gee returned to Ohio State to serve as the university's 14th president. He set out six strategic goals. The university's FY 2009 current funds budget will fund progress toward these goals.

By February 2008, the worsening economic conditions in both Ohio and the nation caused General Revenue Fund receipts for the State of Ohio to be substantially below the original estimates used in the 2008-2009 biennial state budget (Am. Sub. H.B. 119). On February 20, 2008, the Office of Budget and Management recalibrated the revenue estimates for the State of Ohio and instituted budget reductions and spending controls. While many state agencies received significant budget reductions, higher education was, for the most part, held harmless. In particular, the funding for state subsidy payments to colleges and universities was protected and the tuition freeze for undergraduate students remained in place. Fiscal year 2008 ended with the state's revised revenue estimates and the budget reductions and spending limitations tracking closely. Fiscal year 2009 will continue to be a challenge for the state as the economy and tax receipts remain uncertain.

Six Strategic Goals

President Gee has said that by accomplishing these goals, "Ohio State will distinguish itself and fulfill the enormous responsibilities that come with its global presence."

The Six Strategic Goals

- Forge One Ohio State University.
- Put Students First.
- Focus on Faculty Success.
- Recast Our Research Agenda.
- Commit to Our Communities.
- Simplify University Systems and Structures.

Academic Progress

Ohio State made substantial progress in a number of targeted areas in FY 2008, including:

- Four-year graduation rates increased dramatically to 46%, 11% over the past 5 years. During this same period, Ohio State's freshman-sophomore retention rate also rose nearly 5%, to 92.4%, exceeding the national mean of 78%.
- Ohio State was ranked by the National Science Foundation among the Top 10 public research universities for sponsored research (moving from 12th to 7th since 2002) and was named among the Top 20 public universities by U.S. News & World Report, ranking 19th in 2008 among all public universities (moving from 22nd in the last 5 years).
- For the 13th consecutive year, the incoming first-year class was the best-prepared in history. The average ACT score was 27.0 (up from 25.2 in Autumn 2002); 53% of freshmen were in the top 10% of their high school class, and 89% were in the top 25%, compared to 32% and 67%, respectively, in Autumn 2002.

- Ohio State ranks as one of the nation's top public universities for students studying abroad and for its international student enrollment (Open Doors 2007) and is home to more prestigious Fulbright fellowships than any other university in Ohio (Council For International Exchange of Scholars). In addition, in 2008, Ohio State was recognized for its exemplary outreach and engagement partnerships (Outreach Scholarship W.K. Kellogg Foundation Engagement Award).

Financial Progress

Ohio State also has made significant financial progress in several areas. For example, as a result of an increase in state funding and the tuition freeze under Amended Substitute House Bill 119, undergraduate instructional and general fees were not increased for FY 2008 or FY 2009.

At the beginning of the FY 2009 budget planning process, the university presented a financial benchmark report to its Board of Trustees. The report compares OSU's financial trends with eight benchmark institutions in a number of key areas.

The eight institutions represent public higher education institutions of the highest quality that most closely resemble Ohio State in organization and mission. The institutions represent both Ohio State's peers and its aspirational peers. As the Ohio Board of Regents is in the process of establishing statewide benchmarks for the purpose of measuring the success of the University System of Ohio (USO), the composition of Ohio State's benchmarks will likely be changing. Ohio State is working with the Board of Regents to select an appropriate set of peer institutions based on USO-established criteria, which will be used both for measuring USO success and for financial benchmarking. This process is expected to be completed sometime in the coming year. Financial comparisons follow in the narrative below for FY 2006, the year of the most recent audited financial data available on the current set of benchmarks.

In comparing Ohio State with our peer institutions on funds earned and expended, in FY 2006 current fund revenues are 14.2% below the average of our benchmark institutions. This is a result of gift, grant, and contract revenues for our peer institutions continuing to outpace Ohio State's revenues in these areas. However, this represents a 12% improvement over FY 1996, when OSU's revenues were 26% below the average benchmark. This improvement is due to certain revenue sources, such as state support, tuition and fees, and government grants and contracts, growing at a faster pace for OSU when compared with the benchmark average. Despite Ohio State's revenue sources continuing to lag behind this average (except tuition and fees), the gap between OSU and the benchmark average has closed dramatically since FY 1996.

As in previous years, for FY 2006, state support per student FTE at Ohio State ($8,884) continues to be lower than the benchmark average (11.2% less in FY 2006). As state appropriations had been declining in recent years, the average annual change rate from 1996 to 2006 was -0.4% in 2006 constant dollars. When FY 2008 and FY 2009 data become available, this pattern is expected to improve as a result of the enactment of Am. Sub. H.B. 119, which has increased state support to the university. A table detailing the history of resident undergraduate tuition and state share of instruction from 1960 to 2009 appears in Appendix VI.1.

In comparing instructional versus non-instructional spending, instructional expenditures per student FTE at Ohio State are 2.0% above the benchmark average, while expenditures on academic support¹ outside the classroom are 31% below the benchmark average.

In examining FY 2008 fees and tuition data, average resident undergraduate tuition and fees at Ohio State are 6.6% above the average for the benchmark institutions listed on page two. With the new state budget bill in place, which increased state support and froze tuition rates for FY 2008 and FY 2009, as anticipated, this gap between Ohio State and the benchmark average narrowed 2.7% from last year.

Among public universities in Ohio, Ohio State ranks highest in academic reputation and, given the statewide tuition freeze, will have the second lowest student fees among Ohio's six public four-year universities with selective admissions. This makes Ohio State an excellent value for students and taxpayers, but it also means Ohio State does not have the resources to match its competition in key academic and support areas.

The university will continue to develop benchmarking of key academic, demographic, and administrative issues to inform decisions on budget prioritization.

¹ Includes all non-instructional expenses: research, public service, academic support, student services, instructional support, operation and maintenance of plant, and scholarships and fellowships expenses, excluding discounts/allowances.

Budget Allocation Process

Over the past decade the university has moved toward a budget process that more directly aligns financial incentives for the colleges with the academic goals of the university. The budget process aligns the allocation of new revenues with the Academic Plan and reconciles college base budgets with academic goals. Beginning in FY 2003, annual increases in revenues and expenditures were shared with the colleges based on the following principles of the new budget system:

Principles of Budget System:

- The allocation of resources should be mission driven.
- In a large, complex organization, decentralized decision-making works best.
- Any budget system, but particularly one that is decentralized, depends on the creation and maintenance of a timely and user-friendly information system.
- A significant portion of revenues should be explicitly linked to the generating units, specifically the colleges.
- A portion of all revenues should be dedicated to the support of university-wide goals.
- Costs should also be explicitly linked to the generating college or vice presidential area.
- Although the system should be mission driven, predictability and stability are also important characteristics.
- Appropriate oversight and accountability should be provided by the university's governance and administrative structure.
- A carefully thought out transition is essential to the ultimate success of any changes in the budget system.

In FY 2007, the University Senate Fiscal Committee undertook a comprehensive review of the shifts in marginal resources among the colleges since the inception of the revised budget process to determine if the budget process is providing proper incentives for colleges to generate and use resources consistent with the goals of the Academic Plan. This review resulted in recommendations of incremental changes to offset funding shifts among the colleges teaching undergraduates that were unanticipated when budget restructuring was implemented. Changes implemented included the weighting of the marginal increase in undergraduate revenues to recognize the differential cost of delivering undergraduate programs. In FY 2009 the marginal increase in the doctoral subsidy (about $7 million) will be set aside to further enhance quality doctoral programs.

Also in FY 2007, the Provost and Senior Vice-President for Business and Finance appointed an ad hoc Budget System Review Committee to assess how effectively Ohio State's budget system supports the Academic Plan, aligns resources and commitments with college and support unit activities, and provides central funding to optimize academic excellence and the services that support it. In a report issued in May 2008, the committee determined the underlying principles of the budget system are working as intended and made the following recommendations:

- All university resources should be used to promote academic and research excellence.

September 19, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

- Resources and responsibility for achieving the goals set forth in the Academic Plan must be shared by all offices of the university, both vertically and horizontally.
- New strategic investment funds of at least $10M cash should be found annually within the university's budget to drive further quality improvements.
- Deans should work with department chairs, with each other, and with the Provost to develop strategies to reward academic quality and to promote trans-institutional interdisciplinary research.
- Systematically review on a regular basis the efficiency of central administration offices, as well as the centers, programs, and institutes that fall within their jurisdiction.
- The Provost should utilize current committees (Council on Academic Affairs or the General Education Curriculum Review Committee) or establish a working group(s) to develop processes whereby we can gather information on the effectiveness of our GEC instruction, the effectiveness of our majors and minors, and on student outcomes, i.e., post-graduation success.

The Provost has shared these recommendations with the university community for comment and may make changes in the allocation process based on the committee recommendations and the university community reactions in the FY 2010 budget process. The objective is to assure a transparent budget allocation process so the success of resources aligned with expectations can be measured directly.

During FY 2008 the Graduate School carried out an assessment of all doctoral programs at Ohio State, which included the classification of Ohio State's doctoral programs by indicators of quality, as well as the identification of university-wide issues, challenges, and opportunities. The resulting report recommended that enhanced fellowship support be provided to programs classified as high quality or strong. This recommendation is in response to the finding that to compete with the best doctoral programs, stipends at Ohio State need to be increased, and that multi-year funding packages should be offered for outstanding doctoral students. Under this plan, students from the high quality or strong programs who are awarded Graduate School fellowships will also receive an annual $3,000 increase over and above standard graduate school support levels. The commitment will be for four years, and funding will come from Graduate School resources. Details of this plan and expectations for the individual units will be worked out between the Graduate School and each participating doctoral program, but it is expected that programs receiving such commitments will use the enhanced support levels as part of their student recruitment activities.

FY 2009 Priorities

The FY 2009 budget is structured to support the following strategic objectives:

Operating Budget Strategic Objectives in FY 2009

- Access: continue undergraduate tuition freeze without adverse financial impact on academic goals.
- Graduate Program Quality: significantly strengthened through program review, reduced tuition for dissertation students, and allocation of dollars to reflect quality.
- Competitive compensation: pay raise merit pool of at least 3.5% without reallocation for most units.
- Financial Stability: protection against uncertain economic Environment.
- Alignment: strategic objectives align with Academic Plan, President's six objectives, and Master Planning goals.

The colleges are the key focal points to advancing the objectives of the Academic Plan. Consequently, the university's decentralized budget system is designed to ensure that at least 75% of increased annual revenues from tuition and fees and State Share of Instruction, as well as 100% of increased indirect cost recoveries, are distributed back to the generating colleges.

These strategic objectives are discussed in greater detail in Chapter III, FY 2009 Expenditure Summary.

In FY 2009, the economic forecast remains uncertain. The university will continue to monitor the GRF receipts over the next several months in order to assess the stability of the FY 2009 state budget.

Given the FY 2009 budget uncertainty, university leadership has chosen to establish a Stability Reserve of $10M. Maintaining $10M in the Stability Reserve allows the university to smooth the impact of the new distribution methodology changes currently being developed for implementation of the University System of Ohio. If no budget adjustment is necessary, then the money will be distributed as part of the FY 2010 Net Marginal Revenue, which will help to mitigate funding level changes between FY 2009 and FY 2010.

State support to the Columbus campus for FY 2009 is currently expected to grow by about 9.6%, the largest increase since FY 1987. In FY 2009 the state is providing the Columbus campus with $376M in total core state support. Although undergraduate tuition will not increase, a tuition and fee revenue increase of 2.3% will be generated by higher retention rates and increases in graduate and professional tuition and the non-resident surcharge. In FY 2009, the university will continue to strive to diversify its revenue sources through increased private fund raising and sponsored research.

The university continues to seek operating efficiencies through cost savings measures such as the Transition to Work program, Energy Sustainability, and other energy projects, as outlined in Chapter III. The budget context and initiatives for the regional campuses are discussed in Chapter IV. The university continues to advance effective financial stewardship by the updating and monitoring of financial goals and measurements as outlined in Chapter V.

The University System of Ohio

The FY 2010 budget will present new opportunities and challenges for Ohio State, as the state implements the University System of Ohio (USO) and a new, yet-to-be determined, subsidy distribution methodology. The underlying philosophy of the state's distribution methodology is changing from one which funds colleges and universities on credit hours and level of expense of the classes taught to one that rewards quality and performance. This change is intended to align the funding mechanism with the goals of the state's Strategic Plan for Higher Education. The performance measures currently being discussed by the Board of Regents and representatives of various institutions may include, but are not limited to:

- Enrollment goals
- Degree attainment
- Quality measures
- Research measures
- Efficiency goals

The University System of Ohio focuses on developing unique and individual missions for each institution of higher education in Ohio. Each institution or group of institutions' performance will be measured through specific metrics appropriate to their mission. These missions would allow institutions to "specialize" in certain academic areas, which could eliminate duplication and competition for the universities and colleges. Given Ohio State's unique position of being the "flagship" institution for the state and the importance of its economic impact on the state as a whole, it is believed that the university will benefit from the changes anticipated as USO is further defined.

FY 2009 Revenue Summary

Overview

The university's total current funds revenues (including general funds, earnings and restricted revenue) are projected to increase by 6.1% from $4.1 billion to $4.4 billion between FY 2008 and FY 2009.

General fund revenues for the Columbus campus consist primarily of state support (State Share of Instruction, challenge funding and state line-item appropriations) and student tuition and fees. General fund revenues are projected to increase by $52.8 million.

FY 2008 was the first time since 1987 that resident undergraduate tuition did not increase, and the resident undergraduate tuition freeze will continue in FY 2009. The undergraduate tuition freeze is made possible by a 9.6% increase in state support and higher fee revenue resulting from increased enrollment and retention rates as well as increases in graduate and professional tuition and the out-of-state surcharge. The proportional share of state support of the Columbus Campus budget has actually increased slightly, to 36%. This is the first time this percentage has increased since 1987.

Comparison of State Support* to Tuition Income: Columbus Campus

* As used here, "State Support" includes State Share of Instruction, Success Challenge, and Innovation Incentive funding.
  "Tuition Income" includes instructional, general, student activity, and recreation fees, and non-resident surcharge.

State Support

Am. Sub. H.B. 119 represents a significant investment by the State of Ohio in higher education. The bill increased state support to higher education by $340M for the FY 2008-2009 biennium, including additional moneys intended to offset the freeze in undergraduate tuition, as well as new moneys intended to enhance research, instruction, and enrollments in Science, Technology, Engineering, Mathematics, and Medicine (STEMM).

State Share of Instruction

The state Share of Instruction (SSI) allocation is the state's primary funding support for enrollments at its colleges and universities. In FY 2009, SSI is projected to increase by 10% uniformly, plus the state will allocate an additional $58M to colleges and universities that agree to not raise undergraduate tuition as well as achieve cost reductions in their operations. Ohio State's campuses are projected to receive $376M in base SSI in FY 09 plus an additional $11M to offset the loss of tuition.

Ohio Innovation Partnership

Am. Sub. H.B. 119 created the Ohio Innovation Partnership which will invest $250M over the course of the biennium to bolster research in Science, Technology, Engineering, Mathematics, and Medicine (STEMM) as well as to provide scholarships for students majoring in STEMM related fields. Initially the program allotted $150M over the course of the biennium. However, other programs were consolidated into Innovation Partnership and additional money was allocated from the Third Frontier Network overseen by the Ohio Department of Development to increase the total available over the biennium to $250M.

Of the total amount allotted, $150M of the Ohio Innovation Partnership is to support the Ohio Research Scholars Program. The income from the program will fund grants that universities can use to help recruit scientists and faculty to their campuses. Under this program, campuses and their partners compete for grants ranging from $2M up to $50M. By state law, the appropriated funds are invested in an endowment fund that is used to support these positions.

The other $100M Innovation Partnership funds are used to support the Choose Ohio First Scholarship for students majoring in STEMM fields. The scholarships will range from a minimum of $1,500 per year to one-half the highest tuition rate charged by state universities (excluding Miami).

Both the Ohio Research Scholars Program and the Choose Ohio First Scholarship are funded on a competitive basis. To the extent possible the state has expressed an interest in collaborative proposals among institutions to meet the needs of the state. In the first round of competition for the Ohio Research Scholars program, OSU was part of approximately $100M in successful proposals, and expects to receive at least $39M of these moneys. Partnering with other Ohio institutions, OSU was part of a $4.5M proposal which was selected in the first round of the Choose Ohio First Scholarship program, and expects to receive at least $3M in new moneys.

Challenge Funding

Am. Sub. H.B. 119 also maintains or enhances the Challenge funding, while requiring studies to ascertain its effectiveness. The amount of challenge funding received is dependent upon the university's contribution to meeting the following statewide goals:

Success Challenge – rewards successful completion of baccalaureate programs by at-risk students (OIG-eligible undergraduates) and successful, timely completion of baccalaureate degrees by state residents. In FY 2009, OSU is projected to receive $11.6M in Success Challenge funding, an increase of 4.4% over FY 2008.

Innovation Incentive – allows institutions to match a portion of their doctoral allocation from the State Share of Instruction allocation with state funds to improve doctoral programs and enhance research in strategic areas. In FY 2009, OSU is projected to receive $1.9M in Innovation Incentive funding, the same as in FY 2008.

Access Challenge – reduces financial barriers to entry-level higher education (two-year campuses only). Access Challenge funds help the regional campuses keep their tuition low. OSU's regional campuses are projected to receive $3.1M in Access Challenge funding in FY 2009.

Jobs Challenge – rewards successful efforts in meeting community needs for non-credit job training (two-year campuses only). OSU's regional campuses are projected to receive $361,000 in Jobs Challenge funding in FY 2009.

Priorities in Graduate Education – supports improvements in graduate programs in computer science. In FY 2009, OSU is projected to receive $572,000 in Priorities in Graduate Education funding, the same as in FY 2008.

Research Incentive – rewards success in securing sponsored research from external sources. (Formerly known as Research Challenge.) Am. Sub. H.B. 119 initially increased funding for Research Incentive by $18M over FY 2007. The additional funding for Research Incentive was later moved to support the Ohio Research Scholars program, leaving the funding for Research Incentive at its historic levels. In FY 2009, OSU is projected to receive $7.8M in Research Incentive funding. As directed by the state Board of Regents, starting in FY 2008 the Research Incentive funds were reclassified as restricted in order to ensure that they were not included in the university's instructional expenses that are used in the calculation of statewide average costs used in the state subsidy process. Research Incentive previously was included in general funds. From FY 2009 forward, these funds will be administered by the Office of Research and no longer shared with the President's Strategic Investment Fund.

Student Fees

Student Enrollments

Total undergraduate, graduate and professional Columbus campus enrollments for Autumn Quarter 2008 are projected to be 52,773, up 205 students over Autumn 2007.

An autumn quarter freshman class of 6,050 is expected. Slightly larger freshman classes over the past three years, as well as continuing improvement in the number of students who remain enrolled, are anticipated to slightly offset decreasing enrollments due to an increasing number of students who graduate in four years. As a result, the estimated undergraduate enrollment level for FY 2009 is projected to increase by 447, or 0.4%, above FY 2008 enrollments.

Both graduate and professional student enrollments are projected to increase slightly in FY 2009.

Undergraduate Instructional, General, Student Activity and Recreation Fees

In accord with Am. Sub. H.B. 119, undergraduate general and instructional fees did not increase for FY 2008 or 2009. This was the first time since 1987 that resident undergraduate tuition did not increase, and it was the lowest two-year tuition increase since 1965-66 (see Appendix VI.1).

Autumn Quarter Headcount Enrollments
By Level of Student

Starting in Summer Quarter 2002, the university had a tiered schedule of instructional fees for undergraduates, based upon the quarter of the student's initial enrollment. Tier 1 was phased out in Autumn Quarter 2007, and Tier 2 will be phased out in Autumn Quarter 2008, thus returning undergraduate instructional fees to a single-tier schedule.

The revenue generated by tuition will provide the university with resources to continue to make progress toward the goals of the Academic Plan and meet the needs of our students as well as continue to be a high value investment to the citizens of Ohio. In FY 2009, new students at the Columbus campus will pay less in tuition and fees than new students at four other Ohio public universities.

Undergraduate Program and Technology Fees

Several colleges and programs have established learning technology fees in prior years to fund enhanced technology needed to remain competitive within their fields. For FY 2009 these fees are as follows:

College/School	FY 2009 Annual Fees
College of Arts (Undergrad & Grad)	$180
College of Business (Undergrad)	381
College of Business (Grad)	522
College of Engineering (Undergrad)	330
College of Engineering (Grad)	360
College of Education and Human Ecology (Undergrad)	150
College of Education and Human Ecology (Grad)	225
College of Nursing (Undergrad & Grad)	159
MAPS students in CSE (Undergrad)	219
Dept of Engineering Physics (Undergrad)	219
School of Public Policy & Management (Grad)	360

The technology fee for the College of the Arts is increasing by $12 annually for FY 2009. The undergraduate and graduate technology fees for the College of Education and Human Ecology are new this year. All other technology fees are unchanged from their FY 2008 levels.

The following six programs will have undergraduate program fees in FY 2009:

College/School	FY 2009 Annual Fees
School of Music	$627
College of Business	750
College of Nursing	150
College of Biological Sciences	180
College of Engineering	300
School of Allied Medicine	300

For the School of Music, College of Engineering, School of Allied Medicine, and the Fisher College of Business, the FY 2009 program fee represents a $50 per quarter increase over the FY 2008 program fee. Program fees for Nursing and Biological Sciences remain at their FY 2008 levels.

All technology and program fees are prorated by credit hours. Credit hour charges will be adjusted effective Summer Quarter 2009 to accommodate the new Student Information System's (SIS) requirement that all student fees be charged on an equal per credit hour basis.

Over the past few years, undergraduate program and learning technology fees have become an important revenue source for some colleges. Therefore, following the recommendation of the Senate Fiscal Committee, these fees were annualized in FY 2008 and will be considered non-taxable present budget allocation (PBA) for purposes of annual reporting and financial assessments in FY 2009.

Graduate and Professional Fees

Masters and PhD instructional and general fees will increase $465 per year (4.8%), or $155 per quarter.

Effective Autumn Quarter 2008, doctoral students who have passed their candidacy exams will be considered full-time at 3 credit hours rather than at 10 hours. The change better aligns Ohio State with national and peer practices, but does have fiscal consequences. It is anticipated that revenues derived from Graduate fees will be lower in FY 2009 than in FY 2008, which will be accompanied by lowered expenses for fee authorizations. It is anticipated that most colleges will realize savings due to the reduced expenses for fee authorizations for these students.

Some graduate and professional students pay a higher, or differential, instructional fee. Revenue generated from FY 2009 differential fee increases is earmarked to support the graduate and professional programs that generate the fee income.

Twenty graduate and professional programs will have differential instructional fees in FY 2009, including Master of Business Operational Excellence, a new program set to start in Winter Quarter 2009. The following table shows those programs that will have differential fee increases in excess of a base fee increase of 5%.

Non-Resident Surcharges

Effective Autumn Quarter 2007, the undergraduate non-resident surcharge at all campuses will increase 5% to $4,413 per quarter for a full-time student. The non-resident surcharge will also increase by 5% for all graduate and professional programs at each campus, except for the College of Law, which will increase by 1.7%, and the College of Optometry, which will not increase.

Residence Halls and Other Charges

Housing fees (the second highest expense after tuition) for a resident undergraduate student at Ohio State's Columbus campus are set to increase by an average of 5.8%, or $441, for FY 2009. The residence halls are self-supporting and receive no state support or tuition to offset costs of operations and facility maintenance. All increased costs must be covered by housing fees.

The total cost for a resident undergraduate student to attend Ohio State's Columbus campus and live in university housing will increase approximately 3.2% for a three quarter academic year for a new student. However, for resident undergraduate students who receive some form of university financial aid the increase will be less and in some cases, zero.

Indirect cost recoveries grow as a function of the level of external research grants awarded to the university and actual expenditures to support research at the university. The negotiated indirect cost recovery reimbursement rate is a function of the university's actual expenditures (subject to certain established ceilings) for general administrative and library support services, and research facility and equipment costs. The OSU indirect cost recovery rate on most federal research grants increased from 49.5% to 50.0% on grants awarded after July 1, 2006. This will remain the indirect cost recovery rate until July 2009. Even with this higher recovery rate, there is only a slight increase in recoveries projected for FY 2009 as a result of the federal government's flat funding of research.

Colleges and research centers are projecting budgeted general fund indirect cost recoveries to remain flat. However, an additional $920,000 will be available for colleges and research centers in FY 2009 as a result of FY 2008 actuals coming in above budget.

University overhead paid by earnings units and auxiliaries is increasing by over $3.6M in FY 2009. Assessments

The purpose of the assessments¹² is to fund the support services necessary to achieve the University's goals by allocating the expense among the beneficiaries of the support services.

The marginal allocations for the Research Administration, Student Services, and Development Assessments for FYs 2006 through 2009 were as follows:

¹⁰ Total Direct Costs are estimated to remain flat in FY 2009. Indirect Costs are per the General Funds Budget.

¹¹ These revenues are not reflected in the tables in the appendices as they are considered intra-university transfers.

¹² The assessments are not reflected in the tables in the appendices, as they are transfers within the general fund.

Research Administration Assessment

This assessment supporting the Office of Research and OSURF is allocated proportionally to the modified total direct costs recorded by each college and center. When first implemented, the rate of growth in the research assessment from one year to the next was set at approximately one-fourth of the growth of indirect cost recoveries for the preceding year, since central expenses in support of research account for about 25% of the indirect cost rate.

Student Services Assessment

The student services assessment (SSA) covers the annual increases in the cost of services provided by Student Affairs, Enrollment Services, Undergraduate Student Academic Services, and the Graduate School in addition to annual changes in the non-resident portion of graduate fee waivers, graduate fellowships, and undergraduate student financial aid.

The total budgets of those units whose increases are funded through the student services assessment make up three separate cost pools: undergraduate, graduate, and all students. The component of the SSA that funds each cost pool is based on a two-year average of credit hours for the appropriate students (i.e., undergraduate, graduate, or all).

Because of the anticipated effects of the change in the required credit hours for post-candidate doctoral students, for FY 2009 there is a reduction in the amount required to support graduate fee waivers and scholarships. This accounts for the large decrease from prior years. The SSA reduction partially offsets the reduction in graduate fee revenue allocated to colleges as a result of the post-candidacy change. The total marginal allocation for the three SSA cost pools for FY 2009 is $605,000.

Development Assessment

A robust development effort is a university priority. In recent years, the investment income earned from the endowment and other gifts was not sufficient to support the level of development effort needed to meet that goal. In FY 2006, an assessment paid by colleges, support units and auxiliaries was implemented to supplement the investment income support. That assessment level is increased by $831,000 this year, including $750,000 for the new capital campaign. The operating budget for development in FY 2009 is $24.4M. The budget and funding mechanisms for the new capital campaign will be developed over the next several months.

Each college or support unit's portion of the development assessment is based on its percentage of total gifts received and total central resources expended.

Other Income

Additional sources of general funds income include interest income and miscellaneous administrative fees and charges income. As a category, budgeted revenue from other income is projected to increase 22% over FY 2008 budgeted levels. Because of the volatility of the return on investments, the annual budget does not assume the actual increase earned in the prior year will be realized in its entirety. The interest earned above the budgeted annual rate is used to fund one time needs in the following year.

In addition to their general funds support, colleges and academic support units will receive an estimated $67M in distributions in FY 2009 generated through the investment of their endowments.

FY 2009 Expenditure Summary

Resource Allocation

FY 2009 is the seventh year of Ohio State's restructured budget process. This budget process aligns the allocation of resources with the Academic Plan and decentralizes much of the decision making about expenditure priorities to the college and vice-presidential level.

In FY 2009, Ohio State's current funds budgeted expenditures for all campuses total $4.2 billion including $1.2 billion in general funds, $2.2 billion in funds generated from earnings and auxiliary operations and $815 million in estimated restricted expenditures.

The Columbus campus requires $1.2 billion in general funds to support existing operations, including $669 million for faculty and staff salary and benefits and $97 million to operate existing facilities. The total FY 2009 financial aid budget including graduate fee authorizations is $183 million, or 15.0% of the university's general funds budget.

The FY 2009 budget is structured to support key university-wide strategic objectives, consistent with the Academic Plan:

- Competitive compensation
- Access under the continued undergraduate tuition freeze
- Quality graduate programs
- Protection against an uncertain economic environment
- Alignment with the Academic Plan, President's six objectives, and Master Planning goals.

Funding for these objectives is described below:

- A. Competitive compensation – An FY 2009 merit compensation pool of at least 3.5% for faculty and staff is funded from the operating budget of each college and support unit. Many college faculty compensation pools will exceed the 3.5% minimum.
- B. Access under the continued undergraduate tuition freeze – In FY 2009, the resident undergraduate tuition freeze that began in FY 2008 will continue. The university has been able to support the commitment of the governor and legislators to control the cost of higher education while moving forward toward our goal, thereby increasing access for citizens of Ohio without adverse financial impact on academic goals and with increased financial aid to reflect the increase in housing costs.

- C. Quality graduate programs – $7M of the Ph.D. level subsidy will be redirected to support quality Ph.D. programs. During FY 2008 the Graduate School completed an assessment of doctoral programs at Ohio State, which included the classification of Ohio State's doctoral programs by indicators of quality, as well as the identification of university-wide issues, challenges, and opportunities. The resulting report recommended that enhanced fellowship support be allocated to programs classified as high quality or strong. The assessment process and this allocation, along with the new reduced tuition charges for students in the dissertation phase, are expected to result in significant strengthening of graduate programs.
- D. Protection against an uncertain economic environment – The university has set aside a $10M stability reserve to provide stability in an uncertain economic environment. Also, the university began a planned five-year reduction of the Student Financial Aid deficit, which is estimated to be $5.7M at the close of FY 2009. As in prior years, a $1M cash reserve is set aside to address unanticipated midyear needs.
- E. Alignment – The strategic objectives are in alignment with the Academic Plan, the president's six objectives, and master planning goals. The focus on strategic objectives means that funds for support unit budget increases will be very limited.

The university remains committed to continued improvements in cost savings and operating efficiencies, as reflected in this budget.

Am. Sub. H.B. 119 requires universities to meet efficiency incentive requirements in order to receive the full amount of state support. For FY 2009, OSU provided information to the Board of Regents summarizing $68.9M in cost savings, which exceeded the target of $4.7M. The cost savings submitted were primarily derived from strategic purchasing activities. The target for FY 2009 is $14.2M. We anticipate exceeding this target as well.

This operating budget also includes continued support for additional efficiency savings in the following areas:

- Energy Conservation
- Strategic Purchasing
- Transition to Work
- Your Plan for Health
- Enterprise-Wide Systems

¹⁷ College and support unit fee authorizations are contained in their respective budgets.

¹⁹ This category includes the provost's and president's strategic investment funds.

Areas of emphasis for FY 2009 include:

Competitive faculty and staff salaries – Salaries and benefits are budgeted for in the college and support unit operating budgets and comprise 75.0% of the college budgets and 67.9% of the support unit budgets.

In FY 2009, merit compensation pools for faculty and staff, also effective in October, will average at least 3.5% without reallocation for most units. The estimated benefit cost increase is 6.4%. Where significant gaps with benchmark programs exist, colleges and support units are urged to strive toward greater pay increases. However, the primary criterion for an individual's compensation is performance.

Student Financial Aid – Financial aid funds are increased at a rate that ensures students who are otherwise qualified will not be denied access for financial reasons. Although there is no increase in in-state tuition in FY 2009, undergraduate financial aid was increased by $2.5M to reflect the increased cost of housing and the 5% increase in the out-of-state surcharge and by $3.1M from the deficit reduction plan. In addition, $0.5M in student financial aid funding was shifted to the general fund from unrestricted endowment, making a total increase of nearly $6.2M. The fee reduction for post-candidacy Ph.D. students and the decentralization of dependent fee authorizations resulted in a net decrease of $7.8 million in graduate financial aid.

Support of Facilities – The focus of facilities support continues to be directed toward funding utilities adequately and implementing energy conservation changes to be more efficient in energy use. In addition, funding has been designated for further campus beautification projects and long-term planning for facility needs in the future.

Colleges and support units contributed from their net marginal resources a $2.7M inflationary increase in budgeted facility costs, including utilities, rent, repair, and renovations. Included in this increase are the highly complex research facilities housed in the Biomedical Research Tower (BRT), which opened during FY 2007. Because the projected maintenance cost per assignable square foot for the BRT is more than 10% in excess of the rate for the rest of the university, BRT occupants pay a maintenance surcharge in addition to the physical plant assessment (PPA) which is charged to all colleges and support units. This charge began in FY 2008; in FY 2009 a similar utilities surcharge will be implemented for BRT. The first surcharge adopted by the university for a building with higher than average physical plant costs was the McCorkle Aquatic Facility utilities surcharge, which has been in place since FY 2007. A utilities surcharge will also be implemented for the Recreation and Physical Activity Center in FY 2009.

Most facilities costs are funded through the Physical Plant Assessment (PPA). The four cost pools that make up the PPA and their marginal increases for FY 2009 are: utilities, $3.5M; maintenance, $1.8M; custodial, $0.7M; and the maintenance and renewal fund, $0.7M. The maintenance and renewal fund established in 2005 to address long-term maintenance and renovation needs of general funds space cannot be spent until FY 2015. The cash balances are invested and the interest returned to the fund. It is estimated in FY 2015 the fund will have a balance of $48.5M.²⁰

²⁰ This assumes an annual ten cent per assigned square foot increase in 2010-2015.

The auxiliary operations, regional campuses, the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, and the Agricultural Technical Institute also fund maintenance and renewal endowments for their facilities.

Provost's Investment in University-wide Initiatives – The provost has $4.48M to support university-wide academic initiatives. This includes the $2M in the Provost's Strategic Investment Fund and an additional $2.48M generated from the 5% set aside of marginal increases in tuition and state support.

The FY 2002-2008 dollars illustrated below include continuing funds transferred to the colleges for the rebasing initiative only. Beginning in FY 2009, the reported distribution of central funds to the colleges is more comprehensive. The funds are allocated to the colleges in a manner that is consistent with the academic plan as well as the demonstrated ability of a college to effectively deploy resources in a manner consistent with the academic plan and agreed upon objectives. The sources of the FY 2009 allocations include the Enrollment Reserve, Success Challenge, Provost Strategic Investment Funds, and TIE funding.

September 19, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Starting in FY 2007, the provost committed $1M of the $2M Strategic Investment Fund for five years to support the Targeted Investments in Excellence Initiative. Remaining Strategic Investment Funds are set aside to fund other academic initiatives such as the Reform of the Undergraduate Curriculum.

President's Strategic Investment Funds – In October 2000, the University Board of Trustees approved the creation of the President's Strategic Investment Fund. The purpose of this fund is to allow the president to direct one-time resources to areas of strategic investment.

The Board resolution prohibits use of these resources for continuing commitments. Use of these funds is reported annually to the Board of Trustees. Committed funds are identified in the table on the following page.

The President's Strategic Endowment was created in FY 2005. The fund income is derived from the investments made possible by a change in Ohio law that allows the university treasurer to invest university revenues in the long term investment fund to earn a higher rate of return. The funds may be used at the discretion of the university's president.

In FY 2008 the Research Incentive funds from the State of Ohio were reclassified as restricted. These funds are administered by the Office of Research in FY 2009 and are no longer allocated to the President's fund.

In the FY 2009 budget the two President's funds are combined into one retaining the name, President's Strategic Investment Fund. Over time, the long term investment pool is expected to earn returns 3 to 4% above the short term pool, although this will fluctuate from year to year. This spread in returns on the operating funds invested in the Long Term Investment Pool will be transferred annually to the President's Strategic Investment Fund after the 5% of operating funds reserve requirement is met. This fund may be used by the President at his/her discretion, but no more than 25% of the value of the fund can be disbursed in any one year. 75% of the fund should be invested in the long term pool and 25% in the short term pool.

In FY 2008, $7.1M was transferred from the growth in the former President's Strategic Endowment fund to fund the first year of a 5-year plan to fund Student Financial Aid at current commitment levels. In FY 2009, $10M will be transferred to fund the first year of a 5-year commitment to Campus Partners, and an additional estimated $5M will be transferred to Student Financial Aid. $2.8M remains available to fund future cash commitments at the President's discretion.

Multi-year University Initiatives

The FY 2009 budget assumes $9M in new funding for continuing strategic investments. These investments include the Targeted Investments in Excellence (TIE), Medical Center support, and funding for the Student Information System (SIS).

Targeted Investments in Excellence (TIE) – Funding is set aside for Phase III of V of the TIE programs. The funding includes $5M of the President's Strategic Investment Fund, $3M of research funding, $1M of central funds (all one-time funding) and $1M of continuing funding from the provost.

Medical Center Support – One-time funding is set aside for Phase V of V for the Medical Center. The funding includes $3M of the President's Strategic Investment Fund, $500,000 of central general funds, $1M of research funding and $500,000 of funding from the provost.

Central SIS Support – One-time funding is set aside for Phase IV of V. The funding includes $1M of the President's Strategic Investment Fund, $1M from OAA, and $1M from central funds. College SIS support started a year later and will continue until FY 2011.

Service Improvements and Mandates

The FY 2009 budget funds service improvements and mandates as well as providing for one-time funding for specific activities in accordance with the university's strategic goals.

Table II.4 (in Appendix II) provides specific funding by project. Some of the highlights include:

Safety and Security – the FY 2009 budget supports physical and system safety and security issues by setting aside $1.32M of continuing funds and $2.67M of one-time money to address fire safety, building security, cyber-security activities, neighborhood policing, and student escort services.

Facilities – the FY 2009 budget supports facilities needs by setting aside $615,000 of continuing funding for projects including energy sustainability and steam line maintenance. Also set aside is $3.25M of one-time funding for deferred maintenance, campus beautification, and energy projects.

Outreach and Engagement – the FY 2009 budget provides a total of $200,000 to technology transfer of continuing funds and $2.56M in one-time funding for outreach and engagement activities.

Academic Investment – the FY 2009 budget includes $1.3M in continuing funds for TIE, STEM scholarships, and the new Vice-Provost for International Affairs, as well as $14.2M in one-time funds for TIE, the Kirwan Institute, and Medical Center support.

Systems – the FY 2009 budget provides $14.9M in one-time funds to support systems, including $9.7M for SIS and $4M for financial infrastructure.

Changes by College and Academic Support Unit

The budget allocation methodology directs 76% of state support and tuition and almost 100% of indirect cost recoveries to the colleges. This has, as anticipated, resulted in differential net marginal revenue growth among the colleges. The colleges teaching a growing number of credit hours or expanding their research are realizing more growth in general funds revenues than the colleges with flat or declining credit hours or research initiatives. In addition, some professional colleges and programs charge differential instructional fees. Differential tuition revenues are earmarked in their entirety for the support of the programs in which the students paying the tuition are enrolled.

It is important to recognize that some colleges rely more heavily on general fund revenue than others and therefore are more directly affected by the allocation methodologies. The following table shows fund proportions for FY 2008.

²⁴ Restricted Funds are funds whose use has been designated by an external agency or individual and limited to support a specific purpose and/or unit. Sponsored Programs are included.

²⁵ Includes the College of Food, Agricultural & Environmental Science, as well as ATI, OSUE and OARDC.

Another way to look at the allocation of university resources is by sorting the budget by unit responsible for administering the funds. The following tables show the relative size of the college and academic support unit budgets and the growth in their budgets for FY 2009 compared to FY 2008.

Continuing funding for service Improvements and mandates include $3.26M identified above and $1M in TIE funding previously committed to the colleges schedule. Total FY 2009 continuing service improvement and mandates funding is $5.42M. Additional items are: $0.75M to fund the upcoming capital campaign; $0.13M to Legal Affairs to hire a construction attorney funded by charges to construction projects; and $0.14M to Legal Affairs to hire an immigration attorney funded by a combination of departmental and international student fees. The FY 2010 physical plant assessment rate will include $0.20M to fund Fire Suppression.

³³ Does not include graduate fellows.

³⁵ Includes $700,000 in annual rate provided for capacity building in the President's Office during the first year.

³⁷ This funding covers the portion of the Executive Dean's Office that advises non-Arts and Sciences students. The remainder of the office is shown on the preceding page under colleges.

³⁸ Includes OSURF operating. Not reflected in the NMR is over $500,000 in annual rate Research is allocating to cover the new space costs associated with the ULAR space in the Biomedical Research Tower. With this reallocation, Research will have sufficient resources to provide a 3.5% pay raise pool.

One-time funding for service improvements and Mandates includes $10.52M identified above and $9.0M TIE funding previously committed to the colleges schedule. Additional items funded from the reallocation of existing funds are: $9.7M for the Student Information System project; $4.0M for financial system infrastructure upgrades; $0.83M for enterprise reporting priorities and 100W processing; and $5.0M for Medical Center support. Total FY 2009 one-time service improvement and mandate funding is $39.05M. For one-time unanticipated financial needs, $1.0M is set aside in the Integrated Financial Planning Group (IFP) Reserve.

The Office of Development

To ensure a robust University Development effort, a new model for funding development operations was adopted in FY 2008. The model assumes a FY 2009 endowment payout in support of development of 1.050% or about $14.2 million. The payout is recommended to be reduced by 0.025% in FY's 2010 and 2011 to reach a recommended permanent endowment support of development level of 1%. Colleges, support units, auxiliaries, and regional campuses will increase their support of development by $823,000 in FY 2009. These recommendations in combination with the 180-day hold on current-use gifts and the revenue from the first six months of new endowments distribution, both already in place, along with the revenue from existing unrestricted gift money and endowments set aside for the support of development, will stabilize continuing general fund support of development, provide a funding base for the current level of development efforts and raise $750,000 of the increased support which in combination with $1.3 million cash carry forward will be earmarked to assist in the funding of Ohio State's new capital campaign.

Regional Campuses

Budget Context

The mission of the regional campuses of The Ohio State University is to further Ohio State's land grant and outreach traditions by making higher education accessible to university students who desire a campus close to home or a smaller and more intimate one, or who want to be Buckeyes but do not meet the selective admissions standards for the Columbus campus. Regional campus admission is open to all students with high school diplomas or GEDs. The campuses value diversity and enroll students who are traditional and non-traditional in age, many of whom are first generation college students. The regional campuses strive to reach out to their surrounding communities and have a long history, beginning with their very origins, of strong support from their communities. Campus scholarships and other financial aid assist many students to surmount financial obstacles, as does the lower tuition rate on the regional campuses. Smaller class sizes, more personal attention from faculty and staff, and academic enrichment services on the campuses benefit all students and help those who may have been away from education for a number of years or who need to improve their learning skills.

The regional campuses offer the first one to two years of Ohio State arts and sciences general education curriculum as well as all coursework toward OSU degrees in a handful of undergraduate disciplines and graduate professions that align with community and state needs. Many regional campus students take advantage of "campus change" to Columbus to complete their Ohio State academic programs. The regional campuses deliver their programs using OSU faculty and staff.

The campuses share facilities with co-located technical and state colleges. Lima shares its campus with Rhodes State College; Mansfield with North Central State College; Marion with Marion Technical College; and Newark with Central Ohio Technical College. Each campus engages in cooperative activities and programming with its co-located institution, such as library services, student activities, athletic teams, and some transfer and articulation agreements for academic programs. Although each campus has its unique model, the regional campus and the co-located institution strive for efficiency and sharing of expenditures. The regional campuses play an important role in the University System of Ohio as described in Chancellor Fingerhut's "Strategic Plan for Higher Education, 2008-2017" (March, 2008). The regional campus deans are working with the president and the Board of Regents to define an expanded mission for these unique Ohio State locations, as the state begins implementation of the University System of Ohio.

Revenues and Expenditures

Revenues for the regional campuses are earned from two primary sources: tuition and state subsidy. The table that follows summarizes the resources and expenditures for each campus. (Detailed budgets are included in Section II – Detail of Budgeted Revenues and Expenditures).

The primary initiatives funded in the 2009 budget are merit-based faculty and staff compensation, improved student services, activities, and facilities, outreach and engagement programming, diversity initiatives, technology, and undergraduate student research and other unique academic opportunities.

Multi-Year Commitments and Financial Goals

While the university budgets on an annual basis, it is necessary to take a longer view to assure that commitments beyond the current year are feasible and that sufficient funds are available to fulfill these long term commitments. In addition, the university needs to continually monitor its financial health in the current year and set targets to guide decision making in the future. By setting legitimate financial goals and parameters, the leadership of the university can make better informed decisions about current year commitments and multi-year commitments with the knowledge that financial resources are available and are being funded in an appropriate manner.

Multiple Year Commitments

The documentation of multi-year commitments has been part of the annual budget report every year since FY 1996. The purpose of this review is to share with the campus community the nature of these commitments and how they change from year to year. In order to plan effectively, the university needs to be able to make commitments across fiscal years, but to do so in a way that does not jeopardize future financial flexibility and maximizes the opportunities for implementation of the Academic Plan.

Continuing General Funds

The following table lists the explicit multi-year commitments against continuing general funds. All amounts are additional funds required in that year. Cancer Center Match is to fund 10% of the marginal increase in indirect cost recoveries on cancer research; however, no match is needed in FY 2009.

Multi-Year Continuing General Funds Commitments (Columbus Campus General Funds Budget – In Millions)

Commitment	FY 2009	FY 2010 Est.	FY 2011 Est.
Student Financial Aid	$3.5	$3.5	$3.5
Cancer Center Match	0.0 ³⁹	TBD	TBD
Outreach and Engagement	0.0	2.5	TBD
Total	$3.5	$6.0	$3.5

There are no continuing commitments beyond FY 2011. The desired ceiling for multi-year commitments is that commitments in the succeeding three years not exceed 1% of the current year's budget. This guideline was established in the mid-1990s in order to preserve future financial flexibility. One percent of the FY 2009 Columbus campus general funds budget is $12.1M.

In addition to the specific multi-year commitments above, the university will continue to fund increases in a number of areas of the general funds budget.

These include:

- Competitive annual compensation increases for faculty, staff and student employees
- Access – student financial aid
- Graduate program quality
- Financial stability
- Safety and security
- Facilities
- Academic programs
- Academic and administrative systems
- Outreach and engagement
- Other Academic Plan initiatives

One-Time General Funds

The table below identifies a number of multi-year operating budget cash commitments. These commitments include financing plans for SIS. Planning for SIS began in FY 2006, with funding of $5M from central resources. Beginning in FY 2007 and continuing through FY 2011 a 0.5% cash assessment will be charged against all college, support unit and auxiliary unit operating budgets to help offset the costs of installing the new system. The total project is estimated to cost between $43M and $50M. The targeted completion date of the system is September 2009.

Financial Goals

Measures of financial well being are an important part of any planning process – even more so for public institutions where transparency is paramount. The following goals were developed by the Integrated Financial Planning Group to assist in the University’s strategic financial planning. They have been thoroughly vetted and reviewed over the last year. The Board of Trustees approved these financial performance goals on June 6, 2008. The performance shown is for 2007. Final 2008 performance will not be available until September 1 (after this book goes to print). Please see pia.ohio-state.edu for the updated numbers.

Conclusions

Financial projections indicate that if present trends continue, the university will have sufficient funds to cover its commitments, but only limited funds to embark on other significant new initiatives. Thus, if any new initiatives are desired or existing initiatives expanded, the university needs to reduce other commitments or secure additional funds.

Selected Definitions

Current Funds are those funds that are earned and expended in the current fiscal year. They include the General Fund, Earnings Operations and Restricted Funds. Excluded entirely from this report are Non-Current Funds such as Plant Funds, Loan Funds and Endowment Principal.

General Funds are unrestricted resources available for allocation in support of core instruction; instructional support and related general administrative and physical plant expenditures.

Earnings Operations are also unrestricted with resources generated from the sales and services of the earnings units. While not a requirement, these resources are generally designated to the unit generating the revenue. Included are the Hospitals & CHRI, Auxiliaries and departmental earnings units.

Auxiliaries are specifically identified by the State as the following earnings operations: Residence & Dining Halls, Intercollegiate Athletics, Student Unions, Bookstores, Transportation & Parking, Fawcett Center, University Airport and Property Management.

Unrestricted refers to the sum of general funds plus earnings operations.

Restricted Funds are funds whose use has been designated by an external agency or individual and limited to support a specific purpose and/or unit. Included is Sponsored Programs.

Instruction and Departmental Research includes all direct and applicable allocated expenditures for all activities that are part of the University's instructional program. It includes expenditures for departmental research and public service that are not separately budgeted.

Academic Support includes all funds expended for activities carried out primarily to provide support services that are an integral part of the operations of one of the three primary missions - instruction, research and public service. Included in this category are Academic Affairs Administration, Libraries, Museums & Galleries and the Deans' offices.

Student Services includes funds expended for those activities whose primary purpose is to contribute to students' emotional and physical well being, as well as their cultural and social development outside the context of the formal instructional program. Included in this category are Admissions and Registration, Counseling, Student Health Service, Recreation & Intramural Sports, Student Financial Aid and the Student unions.

Institutional Support contains expenditures for operations that provide support services to the total University. Included in this category are Executive Management, Business and Finance, Human Resources, University Relations and Development.

Plant, Operations and Maintenance includes all expenditures of current funds for the operation and maintenance of the physical plant, net of amounts charged to auxiliary operations and hospitals.

September 19, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Included in this category are utilities, repair and renovations, custodial services, grounds maintenance, space rental and property insurance.

Separately Budgeted Research includes all expenditures for activities specifically organized to produce research outcomes, whether commissioned by an external agency to the University (restricted) or the University (unrestricted) and includes matching funds applicable to the conditions set forth by the grant or contract. It does not include training grants or equipment grants.

Public Service includes all funds expended for activities that are established primarily to provide non-credit designated course offerings and services beneficial to individuals and groups external to the University. Included in this category are Continuing Education and Cooperative Extension Services.

Scholarships and Fellowships include expenditures in the form of outright grants and trainee stipends to individuals enrolled in formal coursework, either for credit or non-credit.

One-Time Funds are cash payments made to colleges and departments on a discretionary basis. The source of the funds is the cash balance carried forward from the previous year.

SUBJECT:

Medical Center Facilities Master Plan Expansion Projects – Phase I

CONTEXT:

The Medical Center Master Facilities Plan was originally approved in September 2005 with the understanding that the Administration would return for approval of individual projects.

As part of the expanded project West of Cannon, as well as a University-wide initiative to explore and implement concepts surrounding sustainable design and energy conservation, a third party assessment was completed and it has been determined that a chiller plant in support of the EOC and WOC development is in the best interest of the Master Plan project and the university. The project will also include emergency generators and related equipment to support business continuity for the chiller plant. As a result of this project the scope of the RDJC-MEP Upgrades project will be revised as it included a distributed system through a series of decentralized chillers within new and existing buildings.

The total expected cost of the project is $62M.

RECOMMENDATION:

It is recommended that:

1. Approval to advertise and contract for design services for WOC Chiller Plant and Emergency Generation.

CONSIDERATIONS:

- What impact will the project have on the total budget and timeline for the MCFP project?

REQUESTED OF FISCAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE:

Approval

Infrastructure Construction Management and Global Logistics

OSU-090308

Requesting Agency(s): Facilities Operations and Development

Location(s): See Project Information

ASF/O GSF Age: N/A

Description/Scope:

The Infrastructure master plan is a strategic initiative that will enable the University to improve its infrastructure by addressing critical deferred maintenance needs, as well as provide the necessary infrastructure to support University priorities in the areas of Student Life, Medical Center expansion and general growth and demand. Part of the Infrastructure Master Plan includes the bundling of infrastructure projects to improve project efficiency, reduce operational disruption to the campus by geographic area and improve overall utility planning. The total cost of all of the bundled projects is $51.1M in first 5 years of a 20 year plan. The total Infrastructure plan through 2012 is $300M.

We are requesting approval to advertise for an executive Construction Manager to coordinate the construction management of all bundled infrastructure expansion projects. In addition this construction manager will serve as a Global Logistics Manager for all large construction projects on campus ensuring global communication, logistics and coordination between projects through calendar year 2012 - interacting with approximately 6-8 other large campus projects with construction managers.

Fees for all services are estimated at $2.5M. It should be noted that an additional $1M ($250K/year) has been planned for global campus needs, such as fencing, signage, communications, traffic control, central laydown areas, etc. Unused funds will be reallocated for future infrastructure needs.

The bundled projects include:

John Herrick Drive Rebuild - Phase 1	$6.3M
John Herrick Drive Rebuild - Phase 2	$7.1M
Woodruff Ave. and Tuttle Park Place Rebuilds	$11.5M
17 th Avenue Rebuild	$11.0M
16 th and 19 th Avenue Rebuilds	$7.8M
Total	$51.1M

Funding Status and Source: Funding will be from University bond proceeds and part of the global infrastructure improvement costs for the university through 2012.

Logistics: There will be multiple logistics issues related to the amount of construction expected with the amount of construction on campus as well as the OSUWC/MCFP, and surrounding community projects.

LONG-TERM LEASE/PURCHASE

OSU MEDICAL CENTER AMBULATORY SURGERY CENTER AND AMBULATORY CARE CENTER
915 OLENTANGY RIVER ROAD
COLUMBUS, OHIO 43212

Background

Introduction

The Ambulatory Care Strategy is a key component of the OSU Medical Center (OSUMC) Strategic Plan and is incorporated in the Health System's integrated financial plan. The plan was co-developed by the OSU Health System and OSU Physicians, LLC (OSUP), and it emphasizes strategic growth of the Signature Programs and related/referring programs. While the Health System and OSUP currently have more than 40 ambulatory sites, the opportunity to improve market presence and economies of scale necessitates a collaborative strategy. The ambulatory plan's primary objectives are:

- ✓ Improve access and quality for our patients
- ✓ Lower cost of providing care
- ✓ Become geographically preferable to payors
- ✓ Optimize use of space on campus
- ✓ Target growth in outpatient business with focus on Signature Programs
- ✓ Ensure financially self-sufficient entities
- ✓ Provide appropriate teaching and research sites

The ambulatory planning process included extensive study of the local market including demographic analysis, current OSUMC locations including market share, and competitor locations and planning efforts. In addition, ambulatory strategies of top academic medical centers across the country and regionally were studied. OSUMC practice sites were analyzed to determine possible inclusion in any new locations in order to increase critical mass, increase efficiencies, and improve clinical services to the community.

The top four priorities of the ambulatory plan are the Route 23 North Ambulatory Care Center, JamesCare Breast Health Program, the Gahanna Ambulatory Care Center, and the Ambulatory Surgery Center and Ambulatory Care Center.

Location

The Ambulatory Surgery Center and Ambulatory Care Center will be located at 915 Olentangy River Road, between Goodale Boulevard and Third Avenue. The site is just west of Route 315 and just south of the new Time Warner Cable building. The property is an existing shell building owned by Gowdy Fields Partners II LLC, situated on an approximately 7.8 acre lot. The property provides approximately 137,000 rentable square feet of academic, research and medical office space for programs including Ophthalmology, Otolaryngology (ENT), Plastic Surgery, the Center for Women's Health and an Ambulatory Surgery Center comprising six operating rooms. The building will provide the necessary square footage for the initial program and space for future expansion as the programs develop, along with improved patient access, prominent signage, adequate parking and great visibility. The University will lease/purchase the entire facility for a 20-year term with renewal options. All costs, including lease payments and operating costs, will be the responsibility of the Health System and will be paid for by the operating revenue and sub-lease revenue generated at the location.

Terms of Lease/Purchase

The initial lease/purchase term will be for a period of 20 years with renewal options. The proposed annual base rent including estimated amortized tenant improvements for the first five years is $18.95/SF. The base rent includes an offered $70.00/SF tenant improvement allowance for all 137,000 SF. Base rent increases approximately 7.5% at the beginning of the 6th, 11th, and 16th years. Initial annual operating cost estimates of $7.50/SF include a ten-year, 75% real estate tax abatement.

In addition to the University's internal lease evaluation process, the lease was further reviewed by medical real estate advisors from Street Sotheby's International Realty, which confirmed that the terms and conditions of the lease were well within market rates.

AMENDMENT TO LONG-TERM LEASE

LEASED ATHLETIC FACILITY
880 WEST HENDERSON ROAD / 4559 KNIGHTSBRIDGE BOULEVARD

Location and Description

The University leases property located in northwest Columbus at 880 West Henderson Road and 4559 Knightsbridge Boulevard, west of Olentangy River Road. In December 2007, pursuant to Board of Trustees authorization in February 2007, the University entered into a ten-year lease of the property, with an option to purchase after the eighth year of the lease. The leased property is being used by OSU Athletics and contains 5.2 acres, improved with two buildings, one containing 57,000 SF at the Henderson Road address and the other containing 24,000 SF at the Knightsbridge address. The larger building is used by the varsity men's and women's tennis programs as a competition venue and practice facility with coaches' offices, spectator areas, rest rooms, and locker rooms. OSU Athletics proposes that the smaller building be renovated by the landlord to be used for the varsity golf programs as an indoor practice center, a golf recruiting center, coaches' offices, rest rooms and lockers. This renovation and use of the building will satisfy a long-term need of the Department of Athletics to provide both the men's and women's golf programs with suitable offices and a location for indoor practice needs.

All expenses of this project, including additional lease payments, operating costs, and any other expenses related to this off-campus property, will be the responsibility of the Department of Athletics and will be paid from reserves previously set aside for an indoor golf facility and from future fundraising.

Terms of Lease

The primary lease term expires on December 31, 2017. The lease provides for two five-year renewal options and an option to purchase the property. A purchase of the property would require support of a purchase price by two appraisals, and approvals from the University, the Board of Trustees, and the State Controlling Board. No purchase action is being sought at this time.

Base rent for the property will be increased by $25,000 to $45,000 per month for the balance of the ten-year term or $540,000 annually ($6.67/SF) plus operating expenses associated with the property. The landlord's construction costs to complete alterations and convert the building to an indoor golf center are estimated to be $2.9 million. The lease provides that if the University does not exercise the purchase option or extend the lease term beyond the initial term, the landlord may offer the property for sale in the last four months of the lease, and the University would be responsible for paying the landlord any difference between the sale proceeds [total sale price or net proceeds?] and the landlord's indebtedness on the property. The cap on any amount to be paid to the landlord will be increased from $1 million to $3.5 million because of the additional costs for the improvements.

Dr. Cloyd:

So that we are able to conduct the business of this meeting in an orderly fashion I would ask that the ringers on all cell phones and other communication devices be turned off at this time, and that all members of the audience observe rules of decorum proper to conduct the business at hand.

I would now like to move to the first item of business today which is finishing up the contract, the terms of agreement with President Gee, and evaluation and recommended compensation. I want to provide some context to our discussion regarding the President's compensation package.

The Ohio State University is the largest and one of the best universities in the country. As a Land Grant institution, it serves our state in a leadership role for education, research and service. Ohio State is unique with its overall size, breadth of our academic programs, depth of our student support services, strength of our faculty, growth of our cutting-edge research programs, and the importance of our service to the community, the state of Ohio and the promise that our University brings to enhance the economic well being of our state and nation, and to enhance the quality of life for people around the globe. We have great challenges and great opportunities. These are the reasons we sought to recruit and retain the best university president in the nation. This is the level of leadership we require for our highly complex University to achieve its full potential.

The Board of Trustees believes strongly that we have recruited the best and most experienced university president in America, Gordon Gee. The Board wants to have a compensation program and philosophy that properly recognizes our complex challenges, benchmarks appropriately on a national scale for higher education, values experience, and rewards demonstrated performance. We have established formal goals with President Gee that stretch us to move Ohio State from "excellence to eminence."

When he arrived he quickly set six visionary priorities for the University and has made excellent progress.

1. Forge one Ohio State University
2. Put students first
3. Focus on faculty success
4. Recast our research agenda
5. Commit to our communities
6. Simplify university systems & structures

He has brought global vision to the University; quickly converted this vision to specific goals (which have strong Board support) and tangible action; and is creating new higher standards of excellence and accountability for the leadership. He has established a rigorous goal-setting process going forward. That process, which aligns the planning of all University leadership areas, calls for comprehensive objectives with metrics-driven achievables for the next five years.

He has brought an excellent balance of engagement of leadership, faculty, staff and students for input and trust building, while at the same time taking decisive action. Excellent judgment is being demonstrated and execution quality is high. We have moved forward significantly to become more integrated as "One University."

President Gee is extremely intelligent, has deep mastery in all aspects of higher education, and utilizes his broad experience effectively. He also is very open-minded and engages external counselors to further enhance the substance and thinking behind all of his goals, approaches and actions - then he is decisive, making the tough decisions so we can move forward.

He is a true visionary driven by the principles that are the foundation of a Land Grant public university. He brings strong creativity to the vision setting process, and in defining approaches to achieve the vision. He has an infectious, passionate enthusiasm and energy for higher education and the University that positively affects everyone he touches. He has wonderful charm, humor and "charisma on steroids."

Many presidents would spend the first year meeting constituencies, gaining background knowledge, and initiating an important but limited agenda. President Gee, however, made tangible and very substantial progress on the entire set of goals and milestones established by the Board in consultation with President Gee. These milestones, while not yet based on quantitative metrics, were very aggressive for the first year of his presidency. I would like to take this opportunity to highlight some of his – and the University's – accomplishments during his first year as president, organized around the five thematic goals:

1. To forge One University united around a common vision
2. *To promote academic excellence and access
3. *To bolster the University's financial position and enhance its resources
4. To create a diverse and highly talented team and a high-performance culture; and,
5. To seed and nurture partnerships that benefit our communities.

One University

President Gee has moved with unprecedented speed to reorganize senior leadership and recruit national talent. As part of his reorganization of senior leadership, President Gee created an Integrated Financial Planning group that includes the Medical Center to assure coordination and alignment of all resource planning. Under President Gee, the senior leadership team has been active in defining an integrated planning process and strategic planning for all colleges.

Better operational practices and governance are being adopted across the University. This relates to setting higher standards, changing organizations where needed, putting attention to details and acting decisively. Day-to-day operations are proceeding much more smoothly, and issues and problems are being managed with appropriate fairness, discretion and timeliness—within the University.

He has made great progress in resolving the challenges we faced for the Medical Center. We now have strong leadership working in an aligned fashion to meet the needs of the University and the Medical Center. We have a facility expansion and funding plan that both addresses strategic priorities and meets proper standards of financial soundness. Good relationships have been reestablished with the external community. Recruiting Dr. Gabbe and establishing a transition plan with Dr. Souba was brilliant.

Academic Excellence and Access

President Gee has reached out to the faculty, holding monthly meetings with faculty leaders, delivering two major addresses to the faculty, participating in faculty department meetings, and personally assisting with faculty recruitment and retention efforts.

Progress on improving the graduate programs and the Federation of the Arts and Sciences is excellent. We have had full engagement of all interested parties, decisiveness, and excellent public transparency as we should. We are moving forward with important changes having strong alignment among stakeholders. This will enhance our academic quality and increase the productivity of our University investment.

He has endeared himself to students. The University's commitment to students, i.e. "Putting students first", and defining a student-centered culture at the University is now much more tangible.

Ohio State's 2008 freshman class of 6,041 students (Columbus campus), recruited from nearly 22,000 applicants, is the most talented and best-prepared in the University's history in terms of test scores and class rank. The average ACT score for the class was 27.3; the average SAT score was 1225. More than half were in the top 10 percent of their high school class and more than 90 percent were in the top 25 percent of their class. Approximately 19 percent are first generation students.

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Thanks to a continued funding commitment from the state of Ohio, the University has had back-to-back zero increases in tuition for the first time in more than 40 years. In addition, Ohio State's resident tuition and fees for new freshmen remain the second lowest among Ohio's public four-year universities with selective admissions. We've continued to increase our financial aid to needy students. Last year, this aid amounted to $56 million for undergraduates on the Columbus campus and helped 59% of our students.

This past academic year, 17 Ohio State undergraduates received a number of the nation's most prestigious awards. The University is the only institution in the country in 2008 where students were awarded both the nation's premier academic award – the Rhodes Scholarship – and the maximum number of Goldwater Scholarships.

With $720 million in research expenditures, Ohio State is seventh among public universities, according to the National Science Foundation. The University is also second in the nation among both public and private universities for industry sponsored research. Ohio State's innovative prowess attains world class status, particularly in critical areas such as global warming, cancer, infectious disease, advanced materials and ag-bio products that feed and fuel the world. President Gee has initiated a trans-institutional research focus that will make Ohio State an even more important source of innovative solutions and a significant new business creator.

Resources

Highly talented senior leaders in the key areas of development and investment management were successfully recruited and appointed, and work continues on planning for a new development campaign – of unprecedented size in the University's history.

The university is devoting more effort to controlling expenses through strategic purchasing, managing benefit costs and energy savings – and in that regard, we have documented savings of $94 million in FY 2008 alone.

The quality and coordination of facilities planning has also escalated. The Executive Sponsors Group has developed a final Medical Center Facilities Master Plan, which has received Board approval. The first phases are underway, with appropriate tracking mechanisms to assure financial stability during all phases of the expansion. A comprehensive University-wide master planning exercise has begun and a review of student housing on the Columbus campus has commenced.

Talent and Culture

The new senior leadership team is operating very well, with particularly high marks for Provost Alutto. Searches for a senior vice president for health sciences, senior vice president and special assistant to the president, senior vice president for development, vice president for research, chief information officer, and chief investment officer have all been successfully completed and the positions filled.

To aid in the recruitment and retention of the best and brightest faculty and staff, the Academic Excellence Fund has been created, including a President's Strategic Initiative Fund for programmatic support.

President Gee has championed the transformation of University culture from one steeped in bureaucracy to a high-performance culture. The first phase of this culture transformation process has been completed, and phase two has begun. The President has also appointed leadership for a task force to review administrative streamlining within the university.

Outreach and Collaboration

Reconceptualization of the University's outreach and engagement has occurred through creation of a leadership profile for the position of senior vice president for outreach and engagement. The University, with this focus, will become a more important provider of services to the state and a stimulator of economic growth.

President Gee has built (and reinvigorated) positive relationships across the University, with civic leaders, the Columbus business community, state government, the legislature, alumni, and a variety of other stakeholders around the state. President Gee undertook significant personal effort to connect the University with the people of Ohio. In his first year, he completed a round of visits in each of the state's 88 counties amassing over 4,000 miles in that activity.

So with this background I want to move to the following Board actions. I have interviewed all trustees who were on the Board last year regarding President Gee's performance. In addition, the Board has had an opportunity to discuss the President's performance in Executive Session. I can report that as a result of those assessments, every Board member believes that President Gee has met or exceeded every goal established for the previous year, and accordingly, I would like to make recommendations for finalizing the terms of his employment agreement, the provision of a bonus for the preceding year's performance, and a base salary increase.

Salary Increase

As laid out in the terms of employment last July, we are implementing the final elements of President Gee's compensation. His salary will remain as outlined in the term sheet, with an increase for next year at the average of the University's compensation process. I am recommending that the Board approve a salary increase of 3.5 percent ($27,125).

Performance Bonus

The term sheet also specified the implementation of a bonus program; which we have defined to include a bonus opportunity of up to 40 percent of base pay. This plan is a key component of the board's pay for performance philosophy, and requires that specific, measurable goals be set each year, and then met for incentive awards to be paid. In future years, President Gee will be eligible for an additional 10 percent bonus when extraordinary outcomes and multi-year goals are met. Based upon President Gee's extraordinary accomplishments in this critical first year, I am recommending a performance bonus of 40 percent ($310,000)

Completion of Contract

To complete his employment agreement with the University, we are also supplementing President Gee's retirement package to ensure that upon retirement at age 73, he has appropriate retirement benefits for an academic leader with a full career of service. This supplemental retirement plan, added to the University's existing retirement benefits, would generally provide 70 percent of his final average salary during retirement. The supplemental plan is intended to be funded through private donations.

- a. The Board engaged the human resource consulting firm, Mercer, to evaluate and compare our terms with those of similar public and private institutions and to assist the trustees with our governance responsibility to ensure that President Gee's compensation program is reasonable and appropriate.

- b. Mercer concluded that this package is reasonable, given their assessment of competitive practices for the top research universities in the U.S., and considering the experience, goals and vision President Gee offers. Mercer's conclusions incorporate and frame President Gee's compensation as being among the top handful of public and private presidents nationally.
- c. As such, President Gee's compensation during his first year of presidency, including the bonus awarded today, totals approximately $1.4 million. With the addition of the Supplemental Executive Retirement Plan, his compensation for the coming year will approach $2 million from all sources.
- d. Establishing the Endowed Presidential Chair in the Academic Excellence Fund is an extremely important element of this compensation package. With the funding strategy being agreed today by this Board, nearly 1/3 of President Gee's total compensation, over his term of employment with Ohio State, will be funded by private funds. This strategy allows us to recruit and retain a president of the stature of Gordon Gee, compensating him appropriately, while limiting the use of public funds.

The Academic Excellence Fund, which this Board approved earlier this year, would be restructured to accommodate the collection of investment funds and private contributions to create a significant resource pool for the University. This Fund, which would consist of non-appropriated dollars, would accommodate not only a separate fund for the Board to use to subsidize the compensation of Ohio State University presidents in perpetuity, but its most significant purpose would be to provide for other separate funds that would be dedicated to the strategic advancement of the University's academic and operational needs. I will be calling for the Board to take up at its February meeting a new endowment description for the Academic Excellence Fund to provide for these expanded uses.

- e. Another element that is standard for academic leaders is a paid sabbatical. This one-year benefit accrues over the full term of his service to the University, and is also intended to be funded through private donations.

Based on this analysis, I am proposing that we implement the final elements of the president's compensation package as outlined in the terms of employment signed last year.

This compensation package, which is outlined in my memorandum to the Board, is based on sound market data, is designed for performance accountability, and includes elements that require President Gee to remain at Ohio State to achieve all of the benefits. I am confident that this is a sound, fair compensation package commensurate with President Gee's exemplary performance and experience.

Accordingly, I would ask for a motion to authorize the amendment of the president's term sheet contract, and gain your agreement for the bonus compensation I have recommended for this last year and a proposed base salary increase to be effective October 1, 2008.

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Dr. Cloyd:

At this point I would ask for and encourage discussion regarding these changes that I have outlined.

Ambassador Ong:

I think it is implicit in your comments, but I would like to focus on the fact that the compensation terms for the President based upon a set of performance goals and objectives are very carefully aligned with our whole strategy for the University. I think we should feel good about the fact that there is no disconnect in this situation, quite the contrary. There is good alignment and that is very important in terms of moving forward.

Mr. Marion:

Mr. Chairman, I am going to make my remarks today after a tremendous amount of reflection on this issue. I look around Ohio and the country and see an economy that many Ohioans would say is far less than ideal, and while many Ohioans and our very own students struggle to find necessary resources to have the quality of life that we all feel that we deserve, we look today at a compensation package that is rivaling any university president or chancellor in this country as I feel it should. With layoffs in our own state government and recent state budget cuts, about 4.25% across many areas of our state government, we find ourselves as a University in a position to consider idling and reverting back to mediocrity. Breaking our goals and backing down from our strategic direction which is to make Ohio State University not only the best university in the land, but to make us one of the best universities in the world. I will repeat that, one of the best universities in the world.

Now as I personally reflect on this compensation package and compare it with our peers, both public and private, because that is our true peer group, and with all the higher caliber institutions which we aspire to be more like, I am concerned about all of higher education's compensation packages for their senior leadership; however, I do truly understand the league in which we play in and to attract the top talent like Dr. Gordon Gee, and I mean the absolute top talent, unfortunately we have to pay the price. So the ultimate question I ask myself today is will we as a state, will we as a University, and will we as a Board, and will my fellow students get our return on investment? Will we get our return on investment? I believe we will, I really do believe that we will. I believe this as I have observed Dr. Gee interact with students on a daily basis and I will even throw in nightly basis and those all around Ohio in all of our 88 counties, while still actively attracting donors to our University, garnering more support for industry sponsored research, and while running the nation's largest University with a budget of over $4 billion. I believe we will get our return on investment because of Dr. Gee's recent record which the chairman just alluded to, and Mr. Chairman, I support the package with reservations about the CEO compensation across all of higher education with all of corporate America but Mr. Chairman I do understand the league in which we play in and I am not going to be able to solve the other dilemma I just alluded to. Even though we are in tough financial times we ought to and we must retain the best University president in America to steer our big ship through this storm. I appreciate your time for bringing this issue forward today.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you for those comments Jason. Are there other comments or questions from Board members?

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Mr. Shumate:

I was just going to emphasize the points that it was my privilege to chair the search committee; that we searched nationally, looking at private sector as well as public sector, as well as looking at business and industry. And just to emphasize your point that we were able to recruit the best president for Ohio State and the search committee, which as you know, was composed of not only Trustees but also faculty, administrators, and students, as well as members of our Foundation Board, who whole-heartedly supported the appointment of Dr. Gee. We set very high criteria and as you outlined very thoroughly, he has exceeded those expectations and those criteria. I just wanted to really emphasize the point that we are fortunate to have Gordon Gee as our president.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Shumate.

Mr. Wexner:

I appreciate your work Gil in benchmarking, goal setting and Gordon's goal achievement, and the whole thought that has gone into the process. It is a wonderful model for the University. I think there should be asymmetry in my view and the Board's view about leadership and academic leadership of the University and students that come here. We should never compromise. I do not remember the precise statistic on the amount of support we give to the best students in the state and the best students in the country, and so I think that notion of paying and helping great students who come to the University makes it great. The leadership, the University, and the academic leadership likewise has to be great, so I am absolutely supportive.

Ms. Kass:

As the newest member of the Board, I was not part of the search that Alex Shumate mentioned that he led, but I just wanted to say that I commend the Board's strategic decision to bring Dr. Gordon Gee to this University. Few university presidents, as we know, have Dr. Gee's experience and track record for transformation, leadership and development. We need his expertise now more than ever to really turn today's challenges into opportunities because our success at The Ohio State University has a positive ripple effect on not just our University, our city, our state and beyond. I am very much in favor.

Mr. Hicks:

Mr. Chairman, I just want to commend you for all the hard work you have done on this and again emphasize what Alex said about the alignment of strategy that has gone into this. This has been an interesting week of very, very important votes, and this is an important vote because it is a vote of confidence in our president. I think, as you said in your comments, it is not just a vote of confidence in Gordon as our leader, which he is, but it is really a vote of confidence in the team he has assembled. This is not a University run by one person, but it is a University that is run by a team. I will say that I think he has assembled an unbelievably talented team, in a very short period of time. I also think it is a vote of confidence in the strategy that we have set. In tough times as we are in, sometimes it is easier to hunker down and play defense, but we have a strategy to be a greater University than we are today. Thank you for your efforts on this, and thank you for the leadership that President Gee and the entire team has shown.

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Mr. O'Dell:

Mr. Chairman, first of all I strongly support this particular package and I have been really impressed with what Dr. Gee has done in his first year here, given the challenges that we face in the economy, stock market and in the country. I am just absolutely thrilled that we have such a strong leader in place to take us through those troubled waters.

Dr. Cloyd:

Other comments or questions.

Judge Marbley:

Mr. Chairman, thank you very much. I would like to second everything all my colleagues have said. This is an extraordinary week for me because I have had the opportunity to vote in a historic election, and I have had the opportunity to vote for yet another transformational figure in our President, Dr. Gee. We have the largest of the great state Land Grant universities and its only proper and fitting that we would have the best president to shepherd us through these difficult times. Difficult times require strong leadership, and I think that you are to be commended on the job that you have done in helping to select this extraordinary individual. More importantly, I would like to commend Dr. Gee for the extraordinary efforts that he has put in. I think it should go on the record that he has done this in the face of adversity. He has triumphed over personal tragedy. We all lived with him through the personal tragedy that he experienced with Rebekah. Through it all he never wavered, he was always steady at the helm of our great ship. It is a testament to the man and to his character and to his leadership. I think that it is important that he exceeded expectations through it all. I think that we should commend you, we should commend Alex for the great job that he did in bringing him back, and I wholeheartedly support what we have done today.

Mr. Schottenstein:

I also wanted to just echo in support of all the comments of my fellow Trustees. It is an honor to be part of this group at this moment. It is an honor to be here to be able to make this vote. I think if we look back a year ago and imagine, knowing full well that we had just hired who we believe to be the finest university leader in the country; and if we would have tried to imagine what we might accomplish during the next 12 months, I do not know that any of us, say even perhaps Gordon, would have thought the list would have been as long as the one you read. Gordon's list probably would have been longer because he is one to never rest on his laurels or be satisfied with his accomplishments. That is what makes him such a great leader. These are serious times, but this also is a time I think if you look hard, this is a great, great opportunity for Ohio State. Gordon said the day he walked in here, "this is our time." That resonates in this room right now, and I just could not be more supportive of this motion and it, as I said, is a time of honor.

Mr. Brass:

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. You know as I reflect on the comments everyone made today, I am reminded that our President also had a very difficult year personally, and still has been able to do what he has done so well. Early in my career I had a mentor tell me a little statement that I have never forgotten, and I am going to mention it today. It goes like this: "The smallest good deed is better than the grandest good intention," and our president has accomplished all the deeds that we could possibly ask for - so, nice job, Mr. President.

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Brass, any other comments?

If there are no other comments, I would call for a vote on the motion.

Upon motion of Dr. Cloyd, seconded by Mr. O'Dell, the Board of Trustees adopted the foregoing motion by unanimous roll call vote, cast by Trustees Cloyd, Davidson, Ong, Borror, Wexner, O'Dell, Shumate, Hicks, Fisher, Schottenstein, Brass, Ratner, Marbley and Kass.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you, Dr. Frantz. Accordingly, I would ask that the Secretary work with the University general counsel to prepare the appropriate addendum to the Board's term sheet contract with the president and take any other action as may be necessary to give affect to this Board action.

With that we are ready to go to the President's Report. Let me say personally, President Gee, it is very heartwarming to me to hear my colleagues' praise of you, which I certainly am strongly supportive of. We are indeed blessed to have the best university president in the United States. Thank you.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

President Gee:

I truly do appreciate that. I appreciate your leadership, I appreciate the vote of confidence I received today from your colleagues on the Board, all of them truly devoted service to this University, and as we are still recovering from the two-year presidential contest that might sound like a throw-away line, but it is not. Leading this remarkable University, let me just say to all of you in this room today, that leading this remarkable University is the greatest honor and calling in my life. As you know I left to take a tenure sabbatical in order to be able to come back and have this honor bestowed on me. I am grateful for it, I really am.

Your faith in me and the incomparable talent, creativity and passion of our faculty, staff and students really inspires me each and every day. Thank you for entrusting me with the leadership of this extraordinary University. I want to thank the people in this room, I want to thank my colleagues and the senior leadership of this institution because as I think Brian said well, it is the best of teams, and I really do believe that and I want them to know sometimes I am really hard on them and I ask a lot of questions, and I send them notes - why aren't we doing this. I love every one of them, I really do, and I want them to know that. To the faculty leadership over here, you know we have forged an extraordinary relationship with our faculty, and Dick and Heather and others who are here know that we have achieved remarkable things together. Without a world class faculty and without world class leadership we just would not be where we are. Dick, Heather, thank you very much, I really appreciate that.

Now before I move to my update of University activities and accolades I want to turn the spotlight on a couple of Board members for a moment. I want you all to know how deeply appreciative I am of this; let me thank Dr. Cloyd and his wife Susan for their generous gift which was announced yesterday. In establishing a new endowed scholarship for young people from Ohio, Gil and Susan are demonstrating, in the most powerful way I know, their great optimism about our future. They also have made a substantial additional gift to the Academic Excellence Fund, which supports areas of great academic promise. Through their strategic gifts of personal resources and through their devotion of time and talents, and he has an extraordinary amount of time - he just retired from P&G in order to be able to spend all of his time with the University - the Cloyds have really enriched Ohio State. I am deeply grateful to them and proud to call them my friends. They deserve a round of applause.

Now to our newest Board member, I am happy to report the Columbus Metropolitan Library is honoring Linda Kass tonight. She is being presented with the Julian Sinclair Smith Award, which recognizes service on behalf of education and learning. The award is an especially distinguished one. She joins former Board member, Judge Robert Duncan and his wife Shirley, who received the same award in 2004, so Linda, congratulations for a well-deserved recognition.

And just as our Board is filled with stars, so too is our faculty. For the past several weeks, Ohio State has been the target of scores of reporters seeking experts on all matters related to election law and politics. Truly it was impossible to read any major newspaper and not find our faculty cited as experts. Ned Foley of our election law program, John Powell of the law faculty and the Kirwan Institute, Paul Beck and Herb Asher in politics to just name a few. Their work has helped us and the world to better understand this uniqueness of our American democracy and the state's pivotal role in this great moment. Those lessons are important and lofty, but I will also admit to a small personal lesson in all of this. When the tidal wave of media tension first struck I practically had to climb over reporters and camera crews from around the world to get to my office. Now I am a man of some humility of course, but I was a bit chagrined to discover that I was not the target of the feeding frenzy. It was my old friend, Herb Asher in the adjacent office. Now my ego has healed and the fact that Herb's office is now in the basement, I mean in the garden level, is purely coincidental.

I want to acknowledge Rich Hollingsworth, this is his last meeting. Rich retires as vice president in December and leaves Ohio State much stronger for his 35 years of work here on behalf of students. Taking up the reigns in Student Life will be Dr. Javaune Adams-Gaston who joins us from the University of Maryland where she is presently executive director of the University Career Center. Dr. Adams-Gaston will begin her duties just after the first of the year and I look forward to working with her to make Ohio State the nation's most and best comprehensive collegiate environment.

I have one additional leadership move to mention this afternoon. Much to our good fortune, Alan Michaels has accepted the deanship of the Moritz College of Law. Dean Michaels who also holds The Edwin M. Cooperman Endowed Professorship assumed his duties last May when Nancy Rogers accepted the job of Ohio's interim attorney general. Dean Michaels is a very strong leader, an award-winning teacher and a superb legal scholar. We are fortunate to have him now at the helm.

We are equally blessed to welcome Nancy Rogers back to the law faculty. She performed her duties for the state brilliantly, and her students, faculty and colleagues will benefit from the wisdom of her experience downtown. I will be seeking the Board's approval on the amended personnel actions for these appointments in the consent agenda today.

Well ladies and gentlemen, so many awards and honors have come in during the past several weeks that I risk giving them short-shrift, but here are just a few of them. Glaciologist Lonnie Thompson has been named one of Time Magazine's 30 "Heroes of the Environment" for 2008. Dr. Carlo Croce, who chairs our department of Molecular Virology, Immunology and Medical Genetics has received the Leopold Griffuel Prize from the French Association for Cancer Research. The honor recognizes Dr. Croce's pioneering work in the genetic basis of certain cancers. Joan Herbers of our biological sciences faculty has been elected to lead the National Association for Women in Science. Her work also has earned her a substantial award from the National Science Foundation to increase the number of women faculty in the sciences. Ohio State's College of Nursing was named the nation's best nursing college for men for 2008 in recognition of its successful efforts in increasing student recruitment and providing a supportive educational environment.

We are succeeding locally and we are succeeding globally. Earlier this week I spent an evening with dozens of our own faculty and researchers from around the world who have come to work with them and here is a significant statistic I learned: during the current academic year, some 1,600 international scholars will join us on our campus. That is roughly twice as many as the previous year. The figure is tangible proof of the global eminence of our faculty. Other activities, earlier this week we celebrated the 10th anniversary, think about this, of Senator John Glenn's historic return to space. He was 76 at the time I might add. He is one of this nation's, without a doubt, greatest heroes and we are incredibly blessed to have his leadership and guidance at Ohio State.

Also last week Mayor Coleman, several community leaders and I dedicated the new Neighborhood Policing Center in the Weinland Park area. The center is a collaboration between the city and the University, and we will all benefit from the safer, healthier environment it will help to foster.

I was proud to serve as honorary chair of last month's Walk for Autism. Autism research treatment and education are areas in which Ohio State has strong leadership, and I was pleased to participate. Also last month I joined with Abigail Wexner to announce the expansion of "It's Abuse," the program she leads to combat domestic violence. Ohio State has been the test-bed site for programs targeted at young women and men, and the success here has been enormously successful. It has led to their adoption by several Central Ohio colleges and universities, and she and her colleagues are now going to take this nationally.

So I will end my report with a couple of student life notes. Last month's family weekend was a whirl of activity. Thousands of parents and family members joined us for creative programs – academic and social. Among the highlights were presentations by notable parents, including former Board member Tami Longaberger and Alan Zweibel, the Emmy-award winning writer from the original Saturday Night Life staff.

Finally, as we gear up cheering on our Buckeyes in Evanston tomorrow, I want to share some news about Tyson Gentry. As you will remember, Tyson was paralyzed in a 2006 spring scrimmage. Now a senior, he continues his studies and his physical therapy at the University. I am proud to report that he has been nominated for this year's FedEx Orange Bowl Courage Award, which recognizes exceptional bravery and indomitable spirit. Tyson's story is a moving one of both personal strength and the meaning of the word team. His nomination is surely well-deserved.

In closing, it seems fitting to comment on Ohio State's pivotal role in helping to turn around our current economic challenges. Now more than ever this University in Columbus, at our extended campuses and through our extension offices in all 88 counties, is called upon to fulfill its founding mission - to improve lives and enrich communities. In these difficult times we must draw on the talents of every single member of our University family. We must work together to foster innovative problem-solving, and we must extend more fully our collaborations with businesses, with the state, and with all of our neighbors. In doing so, Ohio State will be the great agent of change and opportunity for 11 million Ohioans, and we will fulfill President Lincoln's firm intent for us. About education, Lincoln said "I view it as the most important subject which we as people can be engaged in."

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

I submit to you that our challenges are large, but Ohio State's capacity is far greater. Let me end where I began, and that is that I am honored to lead this wonderful institution particularly at this pivotal time. Thank you Mr. Chairman.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you President Gee.

I would like to now move to student recognition awards.

STUDENT RECOGNITION AWARDS

Mr. Marion:

Thank you. Mr. Chairman and the members of the Board, today I have the wonderful privilege and opportunity to provide to you, the names of two of our University's top students, Ms. Renee Starkey and Mr. Ibrahim Bamba. It truly is a great opportunity for this Board to see first hand the fruits of our own student's labor, as well as our University's labor, and also to see what our University does best. I will first recognize Ms. Renee Starkey.

Renee Starkey comes to Ohio State all the way from Spokane, Washington. She is an honors student majoring in animal sciences in the College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences.

Renee is a student worker in OSU's meat lab, and Renee spent this past summer completing an internship with Cargill Corporation in dairy nutrition. She is currently second vice president of the Buckeye Dairy Club and she is also a college ambassador. She has served on the CFAES Banquet Steering Committee, and she currently is the vice chair of that committee. Renee was recently selected as one of the recipients of the Richard H. Kellogg Honors Scholarship for her honors project proposal, "Differentiation Affects of Effective Fiber Sources of Performance of Lactation Dairy Cows."

In addition to the Kellogg scholarship, this truly demonstrates Renee's very excellent scholar for being an undergraduate, this year Renee is also the recipient of the prestigious George B. Durell Memorial Scholarship as well as the Salisbury Memorial Scholarship. Joining today with Renee is our wonderful Dean, Bobby Moser.

Ibrahim Bamba comes to Ohio State from Cleveland. Beyond coming from Cleveland, Ibrahim also spent his childhood in the Ivory Coast and New York City. Ibrahim is a senior in Chemical and Biomolecular Engineering in OSU's College of Engineering. Ibrahim is a two time summer intern for Proctor & Gamble and Ibrahim improved stretch performance at P&G by developing a model for the Baby Care Pampers Research and Development Group. His work resulted in four internal publications for P&G and an increase in pant stretch performance of 20% while providing a cost savings of $0.50 per square meter of fill material.

At OSU Ibrahim has been heavily involved in undergraduate research studying hemoglobin based blood substitutes and working collaboratively with nanotechnology lab-on-a-chip to simulate cell cultures which truly is helping the scientific community understand fluid mechanics. This latter work regarding fluid mechanics resulted in a first place presentation.

Despite being very academically minded as evidence by his four scholarship awards, Ibrahim stays very socially and civically active. He is president of Iota Phi Theta Fraternity as well as Lambda Psi Engineering Honorary. Not just at the University, Ibrahim is also very active nationally. Mr. Bamba is social chair for the National Organization of Blacks in Chemistry and Chemical Engineering. Joining Ibrahim today is Dean Greg Washington.

Ms. Renee Starkey:

This is an amazing honor, and I am very, very proud to be representing the College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences. During my past four years at Ohio State I have had some amazing learning experiences. I was able to tour the Great Plain States through the tinted window of a 12-passenger van while representing Ohio State on the University's meat judging team. I learned the Dutch word cow in English, while studying the dairy industry in the Netherlands through Dairy Club's two-week study abroad program. This summer I moved to the heart of the Dutch Amish Country and worked for Cargill Animal Nutrition in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. For the past four years I have been recruiting perspective students to the world of agriculture at the greatest University in the country.

These are the events that have made my experience unique and special for me. Ohio State is more than just a learning institution. It is where dreams are made and lives are changed. This Wednesday at my college's career fair I had the sinking realization that my journey was coming to an end, and soon I would be able to say that I am a proud alumnus of this amazing University. Thank you so much for seeing my activities as something to applaud. I hope to go out into the workforce and to continue to represent this University well. Thank you.

Mr. Ibrahim Bamba:

I have to say this is my least favorite part of receiving awards, because I am a man of very few words. I think it is at least deserving for me to say thank you. Thank you to the Board and also thank you to Jason and Interim Dean Washington for recognizing me as an outstanding student in the College of Engineering. For me to hear from a man of his high stature, that I am an outstanding student, truly makes me feel really good inside. Also to receive an award of such high merit also makes me feel good inside. I think it also reassures that hard work does pay off. Every once and a while, after working so hard, sometimes you forget that you are working so hard, it feels good for someone to remind you or tell you and let you hear that you are doing great work. I definitely want to thank you all for letting me hear that. So thank you.

Dr. Cloyd:

Renee and Ibrahim, you make us very proud, and I do have to say, just as an anecdote, as someone that likes milk on their cereal, I know how important your research is, and Ibrahim, what can I say, anyone who is continuing to improve Pampers, is a star in my mind. Thank you very much.

At this time we will hear the committee reports and will begin with the report on the Agricultural Affairs Committee, and Ambassador Ong I guess you are going to present that report.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Ambassador Ong:

We had our meeting yesterday morning. It began with a short report by Dr. Moser on Hawk's Nest Golf Course, which is a recent acquisition of ATI. He was happy to report that for FY2008, the total revenue exceeded expenses by $7,249, which anyone knowing anything about managing a country club knows is an unusual feat.

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Also Hawks Nest has recently received the recommendation of 4.5 out of a possible 5 as one of the best places to play in the United States. More importantly to our academic mission, last year we had 66 students from the turf grass management program working at Hawks Nest and gaining invaluable experience. This autumn quarter we have three courses, two for turf grass management and one for construction management that are ongoing. So, Hawks Nest is being successful both in a sporting and an educational way.

Next the chairman challenged us to think about, for future meetings, whether there should be some expansion of the charter of the Agricultural Affairs Committee, and also to consider possible nominees to join the committee, assuming that we are able to have national trustees added to the Board on a non-voting basis by next year.

The bulk of the meeting, however, consisted of a presentation on the College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences' strategic plan, which is not in final form, but well along. Dr. Moser and Dr. Slack made that presentation. They began by reviewing some interesting statistics with us having to do with the viability and success of the college as it stands today. Their undergraduate enrollment increased 6.5% this year. Combined enrollment of the college and institute increased by 6.1%, undergraduate minority enrollment increased by a very healthy 10.6%, and transfer enrollment increased 14.1%. These are students transferred from ATI and some from other institutions outside Ohio State. The two most important statistics are that 93.9% of 2007 new first quarter freshman returned this autumn, and when the agriculture college graduates got their degrees last spring, 92.7% of them walked across the stage with a job safely in their pockets. I think that says something about the viability of the agricultural industry in the state of Ohio.

As far as the strategic plan is concerned, it is built around the three signature areas as they are known in the college, which the college considers to be the centerpiece of their academic and research activity. The first is food security, production and human health. The second one is environmental quality and sustainability, and the third is advanced bio-energy and bio-based products. I might say that the plan probably is going to define the opportunities in the future, a little bit more on the bio-based product side as opposed to the bio-energy side. Various examples of activities both teaching and research in these areas were reviewed with the committee, and the plan as was pointed out contains a substantial number of elements. There is a plan not only for financial support of the activities, but also a plan for talent, for obtaining the necessary resources. In other words it is a very integrated and very comprehensive document, which as I say is due to be completed and receive its initial review in the very near future. That was really the content of our meeting.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Ambassador, any questions?

You know I had the opportunity to sit in on part of the committee review, and I guess the one comment I would like to offer is, I think it is really impressive in their research programs with the outreach and network building that they have with various other institutions, agencies, the private world, to really enhance the opportunity to bring forward some important innovation. I guess Dean Moser, I had to leave, but I really commend them.

We will next have a report from the Committee on Audit and Compliance.

Mr. Schottenstein:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. The Audit and Compliance Committee met yesterday. All members were in attendance, and it was an uneventful meeting which is good news in terms of the Audit and Compliance Committee. I will say with the expansion of the name of the Committee and also its charter it is our custom now at each meeting to hear a report on compliance of one of the University's major business units. The compliance presentation for this meeting was on the Medical Center, and that presentation was made by Dr. Gabbe and Dr. Souba, and it was a very informative and enlightening presentation, primarily dealing with the LCME (Liaison Committee for Medical Education), which is a nationally recognized and the most authoritative accreditation agency or association in the country. It is worth noting that Dr. Gabbe has been associated with the LCME for many years, I believe currently chairs it, and suffices to say that the accreditation process is extremely robust. It takes approximately 18 months to complete for the LCME to come and complete their review. As Dr. Souba explained at the end of the review, a report is produced that is as thick as a phone book. Every one of these accreditation processes involves a site visit. There are 120 different standards that the LCME looks to, and in the event of any short falls or deficiencies the Medical School has up to two years to correct them. The major area of emphasis the LCME looks at is the admissions process. I should also note that their last site visit was in June 2006, and Ohio State received full accreditation. It is an eight year accreditation so we will next look for this to occur in 2014.

As to the admissions process, we have 810 medical students in the Medical School at Ohio State. All admissions standards must be made by a committee, and that process needs to be transparent, and one that is without political influence no dean or other individual can make the decision. This is LCME mandated. The student selection process here at Ohio State, and I will suspect that all top performing medical schools, is not just robust but very holistic, more than just your MCAT scores and GPA is looked at. Every single applicant to the Medical School at Ohio State is interviewed personally. Students participate in the process as well, and I think all the members of the committee were most impressed by the report of Dr. Gabbe and Dr. Souba.

The other item before the Committee involved the first reading of the Deloitte and Touche Audit for 2007-2008. We will formally approve that at our next meeting. The University once again received an unqualified opinion from Deloitte - no material weaknesses. In fact the representatives of Deloitte commented that since the last audit, by the way there were no material weaknesses then either, but the fact was there were a number of what would be called minor deficiencies at the last audit. For this audit the auditors commented that huge progress had been made, and they commended the University for its improvements and its systems. That concludes my report.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Schottenstein, any questions or comments?

We will next have a report on the Committee on Trusteeship.

Mr. Shumate:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. The committee met yesterday. Our agenda was focused on the follow-up to the recent conversations we have been having with our consultant Dr. Richard Chait. There were four items that we focused on in our meeting. Again our charge goal is to ensure best practices when it comes to our governance activities and our practices. First we looked at the development of the Compensation and Talent Committee of the Board. As you know we are attempting to align our committees with the strategic goals and priorities of the University. In conversations with Dr. Gee we are recommending that we establish the Compensation and Talent Development Committee, and that Committee would be effective based upon the vote. We are going to amend item one under the consent agenda and I do not know if any other members of the committee have any comments on this, but we think it is very appropriate and very consistent with the direction of the Board, as I said to have committees that in fact are aligned with our strategic goals. As we have heard throughout our meeting, talent development is critically important to the University, so that is our first item. I would recommend that be a part of the consent agenda item number one.

Secondly we had a full and lively discussion regarding the national and international trustee appointments. We have been discussing this as a Board believing that we could add expertise and perspective to our Board if we appointed national and international trustees to be part of our committee structure. They would not have a vote as we know, but would be able to help us again as we continue to focus on governance and best practices. I should note that this was just our first reading, Mr. Chairman. This is a draft and we had extensive discussion about what the appropriate name of this new trustee category should be, along with discussion about whether we should have the option of allowing Ohio residents as well as non-Ohio residents to be appointed to this category. There will be three positions, and this is something as I said that is still a work in progress. We have asked our secretary to follow-up with Dr. Chait as well as members of the Committee to bring forward a final recommendation. I don't know if any Committee members have any comments they would like to make at this point.

Dr. Cloyd:

There was some discussion within the committee about whether or not these trustees, whatever the final name that we would provide to the trustees, should have any geographic limitations. The way the plan is structured right now is that it limits participation for people who live outside of Ohio. While there is no legal prohibition of maintaining that type of geographic limitation, it was the sentiment of the committee that we feel that at least at the beginning that, it's the best way for us to begin this process. There is potential source for confusion and other things people raised during the discussion, so we felt this would be the best way, at least at the beginning, to start it.

Again, if any Board members have any thoughts as we are moving forward to February when we plan that hopefully the Committee on Trusteeship would have a final approach to provide us. I would encourage anyone to let us know of any additional inputs you may have so that we could factor that into the committee prior to the February meeting.

Mr. Shumate:

Also Mr. Chairman, we discussed an amendment to the bylaws of the Board of Trustees that would allow the option of election of officers at either the February or April meeting. There will be time for a smooth transition. The effective date of actually assuming office would still be at the end of the April meeting of the Board, but for flexibility purposes, we are recommending as part of the consent agenda, number one item that the February option be inserted into the bylaws.

Finally Mr. Chairman, we discussed the process for the selection of our next chair. There was certainly unanimous agreement among our committee that whoever assumes the chairmanship after you would have very big shoes to fill. A working group has been established. That working group will focus on developing the profile and description of the office of chair. Secondly the working group would focus on developing qualities, characteristics and experiences that we believe are important in the next chair of our Board of Trustees. Thirdly there would be a round of work around – what are the significant issues and priorities that we will be facing as a University and as a Board, and factor that in to ultimately a recommendation to the full committee, and then a recommendation to the Board. We should have a report at our February meeting.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Shumate, are there any questions or comments on any aspect of the report?

Mr. Wexner:

Alex, when you think about this and about our out of staters and how we think about areas where we need skill sets, it would be easy to find someone who is attractive, but does not necessarily match particular skills. I don't know when we have time for that discussion or input.

Mr. Shumate:

That is a critically important aspect to this appointment, and as you know we have been looking at that, and assessing the current Board with recommendations, experiences, and qualities that we have presented to the Governor as well, but as a part of the round of work that our Board secretary is going to do. He is going to canvas the Board on that issue as well.

Dr. Frantz:

Certainly we will keep that list of qualities that we are looking for updated with the addition of each Board member, so we will factor that in and I will certainly follow up.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you, any other comments or questions?

Before we go to the next report, an oversight, Mr. Boggs, I should acknowledge you. We work with you, our Director of the Ohio Department of Agriculture, and he was with us for our Agricultural Affairs Committee Meeting, but you may not be known to everyone in the audience. It is great to have you here with us today. Thank you. We will next have the report of the Medical Affairs Committee.

Mr. Brass:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. Good afternoon everyone. The Medical Affairs Committee did meet yesterday afternoon, and the very good news is that everything seems to be in really good shape at the Medical Center right now. Let me run through some of the things that we highlighted. Of course one of the main focus areas is the very large construction project that we are gearing up for. One of the things that went into place two meetings ago, at the Medical Affairs Committee, is an item called the Project ONE Scorecard. The intent of the Project ONE Scorecard is very simple, and that is – critical lines that are very important to this project being successful or monitored in a very simplistic way, red, green and yellow, but it is an early tracking system to make sure everything is on track. If in fact we see something going off track because of the size and complexity of this project, we have an early warning system. Rather than going into great detail, I am happy to tell you that we are all green with the exception of one yellow, which is in our development fund area, and that is because we have not started it yet, we are gearing up for it. I expect that to be green once we activate. Right now, I do expect that things will stay in green, but I will tell you that we are going to have both eyes on the ball here in light of the economy, the state and federal government. We are going into some rough water. We will be watching it. Good news, we are all green right now.

One of the things that we talked about, as part of Project ONE, is we started to take a look at some of the design elements that we have to deal with, and there are a number of them. At some point in the near future, that report will be brought back in its totality to the full Board, and we will be bringing it through the committee as we in fact progress. We talked a little bit about traffic patterns. We have some short-term and long-term issues we have to deal with. Just for information, some of you know this, I apologize if you have heard this once before, but it is important for you to get a feel for this. Fourteen percent of our traffic coming into the Medical Center is coming from the east, 35% from the north, 22% from the south, and 29% from the west. Our east is our Achilles heel right now, so one of the things we are looking at is how do we reestablish on some short-term basis, some traffic patterns from the east to improve things. In the long-term we will be taking a look at traffic patterns into the University Medical Center on a long-term basis as well.

The second thing that is of a very important criterion and that we in fact should focus down on, in this day and age, is patient traffic most of which is coming in with complex problems. You want the patient to get as close as possible to the building in which they in fact have to be at. So sight of mind is a very important principle we are working on as part of this project. The last thing that I want you to be aware of, as it relates to the new project itself, is that we have to be very focused on the budget. That is something we do not want to get out of whack coming out of the gate. So as we take a look at cost of construction, the good news and bad news. The bad news is the economy is hurting and the good news is when the economy hurts you should be able to shop more wisely. So we are going to be trying to do the best we can as we take on a project of this size.

The next thing was our financial report. Where are we financially? Very quickly without getting into great detail, but some, there are a few very critical things the Board as a whole should know. This year has been a very busy one for our Medical Center - that is good news. Our admissions are approximately 4% up over last year. Our average daily census is about 3% up over last year. We are running 1,120 beds at our Medical Center. Our occupancy is running at almost 81%. That is a very high occupancy level, so we are running very efficiently from the standpoint of utilizing that resource. Our surgeries are up 6.6%; our emergency room is up 11%. Good news - bad news: Our emergency room is up 11%, our uninsured is also up. We have got to be cognizant of that. We have a responsibility to take care of patients. We have a responsibility to maintain our finances, so we have to work hard on that to make sure we are efficient as we can be. Overall operating revenues are up 10%, expenses are down 8% - really good news. The team, Dr. Souba, Dr. Gabbe, and all the rest of the executive team are watching the efficiencies of operation. Remember the big scorecard; we have got to become more efficient. I think things are starting to work. Very good news, today's cash on hand has moved up again, $13 million more in the bank, the average daily cash on hand which is a very important issue.

I would like to turn our attention to something that is equally important in a Medical Center with the mission we have, and that is research. As it relates to research, I mentioned at the last meeting, I bring it to you again because we are focusing in on this. We are approximately 400,000 to 500,000 square feet short of clinical research space at our Medical Center. That is important when you think about recruitment and retention. Dr. Gabbe and Dr. Souba are recruiting nine chairs; you cannot recruit the best of the best without having quality clinical research space available. It is an important thing to put in the back of our minds. When we analyze the research space today, we have 450,000 square feet of space. The categorization goes as follows: 53% of our total research space that we have now is acceptable, 40% is very good, and 7% is very bad. So if you take a look at what we need plus what is very bad, that becomes our goal set. We do have availability in the Biomedical Research Tower, 72,000 square feet of usable space shelled in that we are focusing down on to try and figure out economically how to bring it online, and how to financially fund it so in fact it can carry its overhead, an important thing you will hear about as we go forward.

The two other things I want to mention to you today are exciting items. This happens to deal with expansion of our ambulatory care program, and the site is Gowdy Field. If you recall we basically approved already at a prior Board meeting, the Ambulatory Surgical Care Center, and the clinics, building number one I will call it, at Gowdy Field. After taking a hard look at that, the decision looks to me that this is going to be the right decision. That is to move ambulatory surgery, the Center for Women's Health Clinics, plastic surgery, ophthalmology, ENT clinics, some conference space, lab pharmacy, and some food service. Now why is that important? It is important because we need to unbundle some of the space we need on the main campus, and that site is adjacent, and the physicians that are moving over there, including the academic mission, are very excited now. They are in full support of this program, and I think that is very important for the Board members to understand.

Today on the consent agenda you will see building number two to go onto that site under a lease/purchase agreement. So we pick up the option to purchase. The James Care Breast Health Program, that site will house surgical and medical oncology clinics, comprehensive women's center, minor surgical procedures, chemotherapy, infusion center, imaging, pharmacy lab, rehabilitation, and research and clinical trials. Now I highlight the last because it is very important that we are bringing our academic mission over there also, not just patient care. It will not meet our needs if we just take a piece of this, we are taking the whole thing, education, research and clinical. On the consent agenda today Mr. Chairman we have the lease/purchase option going forward.

The last item I will bring to the attention of the Board is with the executive team of the Medical Center, Dr. Gabbe, Dr. Souba and others; we will be focusing down on two things, in addition to the new building structure. One, a complete ambulatory strategic plan for our community and regions that we serve so we can figure out where we need to place different programs off the clinical campus here and second, we'll be taking a look at the physician practice plan program to bring that forward as part of the integration of our long range strategic program. So with that Mr. Chairman, I will conclude my remarks.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much Mr. Brass.

Mr. Wexner:

I got lost in the numbers. How much research space do we need? At the last meeting I think you talked about how much we needed to get to. I lost order of magnitude.

Mr. Brass:

Les - good question. We have now about 450,000 square feet of space online. We should take our self up to 950,000 square feet. We have the ability to add 72,000 in shell space right now, so if you think about it we are still 400,000 square feet short after we do the 72,000 of shelled space - magnitude of 400,000 to 500,000 square feet of additional space needed.

Mr. Wexner:

That gets us to peer group size?

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Mr. Brass:

It does and the best medical centers in the country.

Dr. Gabbe or Dr. Souba would you like to add anything to that?

Dr. Gabbe:

We were at about 450,000 square feet at Vanderbilt in 2001. At that time we were only 24th in NIH funding, by 2008 we were at 1,000,000 square feet, we ranked 10th in NIH funding. We have grown faster than any other medical school in the country, and as Mr. Brass has said, you cannot grow your research programs, and you cannot recruit the best chairs and the best faculty unless they can move their research teams, and that is the way science is conducted today, teams, into the best space.

Mr. Brass:

One of the questions that is raised when you talk about shelled in space, 72,000 square feet, is how are we going to get to that point? Currently we are looking at that very carefully where we need to get the funding and the capital funding to do that. We are working with Bill Shkurti on that right now, and the second part is to make sure if we had the capital to bring it online. Are we sure we have the overhead covered, in light of our financial parameters, to make sure we do not go offline with our scorecard system. It is a two-way street that we are looking at. We are not ready to bring that forward. We have to be assured of both elements that will be covered. We are looking at, I expect at the next meeting, to be ready to talk a little more about that.

Dr. Cloyd:

Any other questions or comments?

We will next move to Development and Investment Committee.

Mr. Wexner:

I would like to have Jonathan and Peter report for their respective reports.

Mr. Hook:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. To summarize my report, I will just give four bullet points that really take care of much of what was discussed yesterday. The global equity in credit markets continue their downhill slide, and did through fiscal quarter one to depths not seen in recent history. Fiscal quarter two so far has not looked very promising, although credit markets are starting to calm down as a result of the various measures taken by treasury, the fed and their global counterparts. We should expect the portfolio returns to be negative for the entire year as we have a long way to claw back and the headwinds of recession continue to get stronger. We appear to have ample liquidity within the portfolio to meet funding obligations and we look to continue to reposition the portfolio by adding further diversification. To use the sports analogy, we are putting together a team that plays both offense and defense as we are looking to continue to reduce risk in the portfolio, as well as to be able to perform well in a declining or negative environment.

Mr. Weiler:

I first reported to the Committee our first quarter fundraising results for this year on a goal of $350 million which is a $50 million increase over this year's goal. We have raised $67 million or 19% of that goal which represents a 48% increase over the same time as last year. Second, the Power to Change Lives Campaign reached the $450 million mark representing 9% of that original goal of $500 million. However, in consultation with the volunteer leadership and Dr. Gabbe, we have decided to conclude that campaign early, on December 31, in order to prepare ourselves for the comprehensive campaign and the emerging important priorities for the Medical Center like Project ONE, so that campaign will conclude on December 31. In preparation for the campaign, the Foundation Board, at its October 24 meeting made a series of changes to its bylaws, and I will report on a few of those. The number of elected directors will be increased from 58 to 75. The committee structure has been reorganized including establishment of an investment advisory committee, the authorization of the Campaign Steering Committee, and modifications to both the Executive Committee and Nominating Committee. The board unanimously adopted a resolution outlining the philanthropic expectations of Foundation Board members in preparation for the campaign, specifically elected directors are expected to make an annual contribution of $50,000 or more, and a campaign commitment of $1 million or more during the life of the campaign. Lastly, Jonathan and I reported jointly on the new Investment Advisory Committee, approved by the Foundation Board. Its purpose will be to act in an advisory capacity to our chief investment officer, Jonathan, on matters related to the investment of the University's long-term investment pool. The committee will be comprised of five or more volunteer members who may or may not be directors of the Foundation, with the expressed written approval of the chief investment officer. And lastly the committee approved 23 new endowed funds totaling $2.7 million.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much, questions or comments?

I have one, maybe for Jonathan or maybe for you Bill.

You mentioned that where the portfolio is right now Jonathan, we can manage, if I understood correctly, the distributions that we need to make for this year. How much more reserve do we have if we think of where the portfolio is today, given the uncertainties of the market before you would say we have crossed the red line, and it is going to start affecting distribution?

Mr. Hook:

Mr. Chairman I do not have an exact number for you, but I would be very comfortable with thinking that we have a good three years, but I can certainly put together a number for you to be a bit more specific.

Dr. Cloyd:

Well that is fine, that is reassuring. I wanted to make sure we were not right at that tipping point, and do we have some reserve there, and from what you are saying, it sounds like for the near term we are still ok.

Next we will have the report from the Academic Affairs and Student Life Committee.

Ambassador Ong:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. At our meeting yesterday afternoon we were joined by Provost Alutto and by Martha Garland, vice provost for Enrollment Services and dean of Undergraduate Education. Vice Provost Garland gave us a very interesting report on efforts to increase and improve enrollment as we go forward from this point. She began by pointing out that Ohio State in 1986 began concentrated efforts to try to improve the quality of its incoming freshmen after selective admissions were authorized by the assembly. That effort beginning about 1995 became considerably more aggressive, and has been successful. The average ACT score has increased from 22.8 in 1995 to 27.3 today. The percentage of the incoming class from the top ten percent and the top quarter of their high school graduating classes has increased by 21% for the top ten, and 46% for the top quarter in 1995 to in 2008 54% from the top ten percent, and 91% from the top twenty-five percent of those high school classes. During this period, enrollment statistics have focused on recruiting increasingly able freshman classes, and it has had a decided and beneficial impact on the University over that period.

In the coming decade, she pointed out, it will be necessary to continue to focus on Columbus campus freshman, but also attention needs to be given to the number of graduate students matriculating, regional campus students and to transfer students coming in from other institutions. In addition part of the effort on enrollment has to include questions about program capacity and also program quality so that they continue to match the increasingly high profile of our students. There is emerging college specific and discipline specific issues which include very differentiated demand figures across our various colleges and departments which can often resolve in current instructional staffing patterns being increasingly misaligned with student demand, which places great pressure on those departments and colleges with the greatest demand.

Program quality, of course, has always been and continues to be very important. Today's better prepared students expect an academic product of higher quality than ever. Opportunities for curricular enhancement may be presented by a calendar conversion and by a closer budgetary integration of Arts and Sciences. Those are both things under consideration or under execution. Enrollment goals for our regional campuses, the vice provost said, is something that needs to be assessed. This is a new area of concentration. It will also be necessary to decide how aggressively the regional campuses should be used as feeders for the Columbus campus.

She also mentioned an issue dealing with transfer students. These students by and large come from community colleges of one kind or another, many from Columbus State, and they tend to be a little less well prepared academically than our Columbus campus incoming freshman, which can lead to instructional issues in classes. The committee suggested that attention be given to the entrance requirements for such students, and perhaps we could solve that problem or at least ameliorate it if we were a little more stringent, in terms of our entrance requirements.

Today's increased undergraduate academic challenge may call for shifting faculty investment from graduate to undergraduate teaching. One of the issues there is that it might be enhanced if we concluded that graduate student enrollment should be managed down somewhat. This would have to be done not on a universal basis, but rather on the basis of individual departments or individual Ph.D. programs. There is some feeling among the faculty that in certain areas we probably have paid more attention to the number of graduate students matriculated, as opposed to the quality of the scholarship and research being done by those graduate students. The committee was unanimous in reviewing the fact that with graduate education quality, should be the dominate consideration, and not numbers.

In planning enrollment strategies for the coming decade, Vice Provost Garland pointed out that economic access must also be kept in sight. She then reviewed some of the statistics regarding scholarships and regarding need for additional scholarship funding. I will not go into all of that, but simply to say that there is great concern about additional need based scholarships if we are to provide an Ohio State experience to every qualified student regardless of the family's economic circumstances.

The University has undertaken now, an affordability project. An examination of what it would cost to provide full tuition scholarships to a large segment of the undergraduate population to those whose families have an income of less than $65 thousand a year. To do that for in-state students, if we were to enact that today, it would increase our scholarship funding requirements by $9.1 million, and if we then did the same thing with out-of-state students there would be an additional $4.2 million on top of the $9.1 million.

In addition to scholarships there are some ambitious programs in the enrollment plan for improving quality over the next three years. Using a combination of targeted recruitment strategies and expanded merit scholarships, the University hopes to increase the ACT score average to 28.5 from the current 27.3 that I mentioned earlier. They also aim to move from 22,000 applicants, which was the applicant pool from this year, to a pool of 25,000 next year, and 30,000 the year following that. Also while doing that, while increasing the application pool, also changing the mix and increasing the number of out-of-state students from the current 19% to 25%, 5% of the 25% being international students. Initial analysis suggest that if we do all of those things by the end of the third year, we will need on top of figures I have already mentioned, an additional $20 million in scholarship funding.

Vice Provost Garland is about to appoint an ad hoc steering committee on enrollment management to continue to work on analysis of all of these issues. When she had completed her presentation there was a very lively discussion which went on for nearly an hour reacting to what she had laid before us, and I believe it is fair to say that, and I hope Provost Alutto would agree, that a number of interesting ideas and suggestions came forward from various members of the committee and I am sure will play a part in the future work of the ad hoc steering committee.

A question was raised by one member of the Committee during that discussion about what was happening in the scholarship area as a result of the recent financial economic difficulties that beset the country, and we were very pleased and impressed by the fact that she was able to present us with a memorandum that had been sent to the provost at the end of October assessing the impact of the current economic situation on scholarship recipients, and potential scholarship recipients, defining the potential challenges that could be posed by this, and then by undertaking a number of actions. I will not go into detail of those, but basically simply to say that the academic affairs office is very alert to this issue and has already made a number of moves to try to facilitate continued across the board scholarship support for needy students and for students who require merit support or who earn merit support, despite some difficulties with available funding, and in particular with private sector loan funding for students.

We then discussed briefly, I handed out to members of the committee, a suggested set of agendas for all our meetings between now and July of next calendar year, which I have prepared with the assistance of the provost. We asked members to get back to Joe or to me with recommendations for additions, or changes, whatever.

Finally the provost presented items on the approval of certain non-academic centers and various personnel actions.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Ambassador Ong, any questions or comments from the Board?

Mr. Marion:

I just want to make one comment, one point that I made in the Committee is that as we move forward with our enrollment strategies, we absolutely must consider the Chancellor and the Board of Regents' enrollment plans and their strategic plan. One of the other things we need to consider is the impact of our enrollment management strategies on not necessarily the diversity of just our University, but its reflection of the diversity of our own in-state students both economically and ethnically. I do commend Vice Provost Garland and others, including previous boards, for elevating the statue of our University through our comprehensive enrollment plans of the past, and our future ones, and also the very labor intensive full folder review they do for every incoming student at this University. It is not just an ACT or a GPA, they are actually looking at a wide variety of things, even reading the essays, and they get tens of thousands of applications, so I think that adds to the benefits of our incoming class.

Dr. Cloyd:

Ambassador, there were a number of important issues identified as you went through the report, and you mentioned this working group that has come in place. Do we have a projected time of when we would see some recommendations for dealing with the issues that you outlined?

Ambassador Ong:

I have given you an indication of some of the things that they have already decided upon, certain goals that they have set, but when this steering committee makes its recommendations, we probably will have additional discussion on this at the committee level. It is not clear when that will be, but sometime in 2009, sometime in the perusing calendar year.

Dr. Alutto:

I think that timeline is correct.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you, any other questions or comments?

We will move to the Fiscal Affairs Committee report.

Ms. Davidson:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. Yesterday at our meeting we had the annual and quarterly financial report review, and I think we have talked a good deal about the financial situation here. It certainly came up in relationship to Mr. Shkurti's report. Obviously some of our performance goals are impacted by our decrease in our investment earnings. Other than that all of the other factors are good including what Mr. Brass reported as far as the Medical Center is concerned. Mr. Shkurti gave us an interesting report on what the funding status and the expenditure status was at the University level last time the country experienced the type of financial situation and economic problems we are facing right now, which goes back a number of years. I think it set off a good discussion with committee members that we need to be prepared as we continue to face probably decreased revenues at the state level, I think were reported yesterday. We need to be ready to take any necessary steps that we have to control our expenditures. Mr. Shkurti is going to put together those recommendations for us, and bring us back the options we have to consider in the event that we do need to make those changes. We want to be very sensitive to that, and to be able to make those decisions if they need to be made in a very timely manner.

We had our annual efficiency report, which is a report we send to the Chancellor based upon their request that we reduce our expenditures in exchange for the additional funding that we received from the state, and are pleased to report that we more than exceeded the goal of $94.2 million, mostly coming from collaborative purchasing agreements, and also from some savings on employee benefits. We had an update on the Lincoln Tower renovations. You may remember at the last meeting we decided not to move ahead with the final step for the construction authority of those renovations. It has been recommended that we continue this pause while we put together additional information to show what the impact will be of taking that move right now, what is the cost per bed going to be, so that we are going to pause in that final decision, but want to be sure that the Board realizes some factors that will result in that pause. One is that we will go back to the original date when those renovations were to be completed, which would be 2011 rather than 2010. We will not do any additional move outs from Lincoln Tower for offices that were going to be relocated to facilitate those renovations we will be in a holding pattern there that will save us some money. This will delay the beginning of the renovations of the south campus dorms, but we will also move ahead in getting what design work needs to be done for repairs that need to be made on deteriorating bridges and the lower level of Lincoln regardless of what decision we make in the future of moving ahead.

We had a very quick review, and I will not cover this much because Alan Brass has already covered it on our ambulatory care strategic plan. We had a report on the lease/purchase agreements that we have worked out in relationship to the existing building. We gave that authority for lease or purchase, we still have that option open for purchase up until February. If we find that we have the debt capacity to do that and additionally also what Mr. Brass reported on going ahead with a lease/purchase agreement to move our James Care Oncology Center into a site that will be developed for use on Gowdy Fields.

There is before you also some action to be taken on some design contracts which really all deal with infrastructure changes and needs that need to be made to accommodate the improvements and the expansion at the Medical Center. These have all been moved by our planners to be sure we are not taking any actions on these infrastructures that will force us to make some decisions we do not want to make as we look at our master planning, and Sasaki has agreed that it is not a problem to move ahead on this. There is one construction contract, and that is for the renovation of Jones Tower. Jones Tower is housing for our graduate and our professional students. It would be closed down for a year for renovations which are typical renovations on a building that was built, I believe, in 1969 that will deal with heating, air conditioning, electrical and some improvements of the other systems in there, and that is an $8.4 million construction we are asked to authorize today.

Finally there are some amendments to our policies that you will notice on the consent agreement. One amendment to the policy really deals with the issue of how we have a review of what contracts we let out and contracts that come to the Board for review. Right now there are certain contracts over a certain dollar level that come to us for review, and we are amending that to also include performance contracts which are new to the University, to be sure that we cover that. We also have an amendment that will deal with a plan that we have right now that Larry Lewellen explained to us. It is a tax benefit plan and the way we make payments for the retirement benefits to OPERS or STRS, but now we have some expanded retirement plans available to our faculty, and we are including them under IRS regulations.

We had a very good report that received a lot of discussion on the issue of our energy and green build policy, so that in the future the design and construction of our buildings on campus will need to take into consideration their energy efficiency, and I think we received some input from the Fiscal Affairs Committee members, from Ms. Bellini on the fact that the direction that they are going with their plan is the right direction we want to move. We want to move as closely as we can to get a silver LEED qualification for most of our buildings. It may not be possible on some of the medical buildings, but where we can move to that, would be our goal. We think that is a responsibility of the University, obviously to be energy efficient, and I am pleased to report that on our review of quarterly projects for major capital improvement projects, they are all on time and on budget.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much. Are there any questions or comments?
Yes, Jason.

Mr. Marion:

Is there a Senate Bill or is there University policy that requires us, when we build new buildings to get LEED certification?

Ms. Davidson:

There is a provision, it is called House Bill 251 that has some requirements on us to prepare a plan and to submit it to the Chancellor, a 15 year plan that has some requirements, but we intend to exceed those requirements because we do think it is responsible. We think our students would expect us to do that, we think that it is just good policy for the University to move in that direction. The plan that we are preparing would exceed those requirements. They do not require, they are less than LEED requirements on the 251 requirements, Jason.

Mr. Marion:

One more comment of follow up. As we consider moving forward with some of our other capital plans, we as a University though do not have any policies requiring us to do LEED certification on our future buildings, I am not for sure, or if that is just a standard practice that we have because of our leadership and the consensus of our Board at the time.

Ms. Davidson:

I think the plan that has been submitted by Mr. Shkurti and Ms. Bellini has been submitted to the administration for their consideration and review before it is being submitted to the Chancellor. If we submit the plan as it is drafted, it would exceed the requirements that we have, and it would make us very close to the Silver LEED requirement, Jason, in our construction in the future. There will be certain buildings that are exempted from that because certain medical buildings cannot meet that requirement to be able to do that, but other buildings would be required to do that.

Mr. Marion:

Excellent, thank you very much.

Dr. Cloyd:

Any other questions or comments?

The Consent Agenda is now before the Trustees and I call on President Gee to present it to the Board.

RESOLUTIONS IN MEMORIAM

L. Carlton Brown

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on September 9, 2008, of L. Carlton Brown, Professor Emeritus in the Department of Physics, College of Mathematical and Physical Sciences.

Professor Brown graduated in 1937 from Henderson State University with an A.B. degree in physics, and taught science in Pulaski County Schools from 1937-39. He then joined the Arkansas Highway Department of Highways as an assistant engineer from 1939-42. He worked as an engineering aide with U.S. Engineers until 1943, when he began serving with the U.S. Army Air Forces until 1946. This included service in the China-Burma-India Theater of WW II with flights out of Nagpur over "The Hump." Post-military service included two years with the Veteran's Administration and three years (1948-51) as an assistant engineer with the Arkansas Highway Department.

Carlton resumed formal study of physics at Florida State University in 1951, receiving his M.A. degree in 1952 after research on angular shift of transmitted x-rays. He came to The Ohio State University as a research fellow in 1952 and received his Ph.D. degree in 1955 with research on the radiofrequency absorption spectra of crystalline solids.

Born in 1915, Professor Brown was the quintessential 20th-century physicist. Research efforts required being an electrician, an electronic expert in the days of thermionic vacuum tubes, and a plumber for cooling magnet coils, along with many other skills that Carlton possessed. He was a superb teacher at all levels and truly a mentor to his research family. Quality, not quantity, was high on his attributes as he worked with some 20 graduate students in nearly 30 years, directing research on electron spin resonance and nuclear magnetic resonance.

Unknown to many was his tremendous musicianship; for many decades he carried his union card as a professional musician when one had to do so to perform with a band. His forte was the saxophone. Carlton also collected maps from throughout the world.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Emeritus L. Carlton Brown its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

J. F. Buckley

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on September 6, 2008, of J. F. Buckley, Associate Professor in the Department of English at the Mansfield campus.

Professor Buckley attended Kent State University and Bryant and Stratton Business Institute. He earned a Bachelor of Science degree in business and public relations in 1986 and a masters degree in English in 1988, both from the State University of New York at Fredonia. In 1993, he earned a Ph.D. degree in English from The Ohio State University.

In 1995 he moved to Mansfield, Ohio, to teach early and 19th-century American literature, literary theory and criticism, and film. He is the author of the book, Desire, the Self, the Social Critic, and articles on Herman Melville, Ernest Hemingway, Rebecca Harding Davis, Transcendentalism, and the pedagogy of teaching GLBT literature. At the time of his death, he was working on a book-length examination of 19th-century women authors of sentimental and domestic fiction.

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

In 2005 J. F. received The Ohio State University College of Humanities Diversity Enhancement Award, as well as an OSU Mid-Career/Senior Faculty Teaching Enhancement grant. He was very active in providing service to the Mansfield campus as a member of the Executive Committee for five years, as president of the faculty, and as chair of the Diversity Committee. In addition, he served on the Convocation Planning Committee, and for 13 years served as a referee for the campus' Writing Across the Curriculum program.

He was a member of a Teacher Inquiry Group on the Columbus campus, working with professors and graduate students in the School of Teaching and Learning, and with secondary school teachers in the Columbus area. He was respected by all and strongly encouraged his students to be passionate about life. Over the years, Dr. Buckley's students consistently praised his classes for being challenging and thought-provoking.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor J. F. Buckley its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Robert J. Lynn

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on August 15, 2008, of Robert J. Lynn, Professor Emeritus in The Michael E. Moritz College of Law.

After graduating from high school, Professor Lynn attended The Ohio State University and received a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration degree, majoring in accounting. He then served in WWII in the U.S. Army Air Corps, where he was a crew chief for a B-24 bomber. When the war was over, Bob took his GI bill to the University of Chicago to study law. However, graduate students were forced out of the university dorms and faced a housing shortage, and he returned to Ohio State. While a law student in Columbus, he taught commercial law at the College of Commerce and Administration, but he already knew that he wanted to teach in a law school. After his graduation in 1948 from Ohio State, and taking the advice of some of his teachers, he went to Yale University where he received his doctorate in law in 1952.

Professor Lynn began teaching law at OSU in 1951, and was chosen Outstanding Professor four times during his career at the College of Law. He was the author of three books, and many articles that were published in some of the profession's most prestigious journals: Yale, Chicago, Stanford, Duke, and Pennsylvania, among others. His research and writing focused on trust and estate law. In that area, he was one of the country's experts. He was appointed to The John Deaver Drinko – Baker & Hostetler Chair in Law in 1987.

During his tenure at Ohio State, Professor Lynn served as a visiting professor at Yale, UCLA, and Illinois. He was a member of Beta Alpha Psi, Beta Gamma Sigma, the American Bar Association, and the Ohio State Bar Association.

Bob remained an important part of the College of Law community after his appointment as Professor Emeritus in 1989. In appreciation of Professor Lynn's outstanding contributions to legal education, his former student, Michael Moritz, established The Robert J. Lynn Chair in Law in 2001. Bob also continued to participate in College events and celebrations throughout his life, with the result that his wonderful spirit was well-known to faculty who joined the College many years after his retirement. Though his extraordinary presence and impact will endure at the Moritz College of Law, he will be missed greatly.

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Emeritus Robert J. Lynn its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Robert J. Nordstrom

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on September 7, 2008, of Robert J. Nordstrom, Professor Emeritus in The Michael E. Moritz College of Law.

Professor Nordstrom was born (in 1924) and raised in Michigan. His education at Western Michigan University was interrupted by the Second World War, during which he served as a bombardier in a B-17. He earned his degree and Phi Beta Kappa key after the conclusion of the war, and went on to the University of Michigan law school, graduating second in his class and Order of the Coif in 1948. Along the way, he found time to play a few games of minor league baseball.

Bob practiced law in Providence, Rhode Island, until the autumn of 1951, when he joined the faculty of The Ohio State University College of Law. He quickly became one of its leaders. He was an extraordinary teacher – learned, exciting, and rigorous. He engaged his students and led them to ways of thinking that many report have been of particular service throughout their lives as practicing lawyers.

Professor Nordstrom was an original and productive scholar. He was the author of many law review articles; of path breaking teaching books on sales, secured transactions, and commercial paper (books which played a leading role in the introduction of the problem method of law teaching); and of a much referred to and frequently cited treatise on the American law of sales.

He was also a talented administrator, serving for several years as associate dean and briefly as acting dean of the College, and initiating a number of the policies that still obtain today. And he was a citizen of the broader University, serving on various University committees and chairing the Governing Committee of the Mershon Center. Throughout his academic career he helped, in quiet and unheralded ways, countless students and colleagues surmount difficulties and achieve their potential.

In 1973, Bob began a second career as a partner in what is now the Porter, Wright, Morris, and Arthur law firm. He continued at the College of Law on a part-time basis until 1977, when he became a full-time practitioner. Like his academic career, Bob's practicing career was outstanding. He was a leader in Porter, Wright's practice and administration, counseling his clients and his partners in accordance with the highest intellectual and ethical standards. In 2002, the firm's Ohio State law alumni honored him by establishing The Robert J. Nordstrom Designated Professorship in Law.

On behalf of the University Community, The Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Emeritus Robert J. Nordstrom its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Norman J. Uretsky

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on September 20, 2008, of Norman J. Uretsky, Professor Emeritus in the College of Pharmacy.

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Professor Uretsky received a Bachelor of Science in Pharmacy degree from Columbia University and a Doctor of Philosophy degree in pharmacology from the University of Chicago. Professor Uretsky was a U.S. Public Health Service postdoctoral fellow in pharmacology at the University of Cambridge, United Kingdom, from 1968-70. He was an assistant professor in pharmacology and neuropathology at Harvard Medical School, Boston, from 1971-77.

Dr. Uretsky joined the College of Pharmacy at The Ohio State University in 1977 as associate professor of pharmacology. He taught pharmacology courses to pharmacy students and graduate students, and received numerous teaching awards during his career. He was the recipient of the annual Miriam R. Balshone Teaching Award from the College of Pharmacy in 1983, 1986, 1992, 1995, 1999, 2002, and 2003. He also received the 1997 Alumni Award for Distinguished Teaching from OSU. He is remembered by his students for his outstanding teaching skills and his devotion to pharmacology and pharmacy education.

Professor Uretsky's research and scholarship focused on neuropharmacology, neurotransmitters, and studies on the pharmacological actions of drugs of abuse. He published over 100 peer-reviewed research publications, served as major advisor to 14 Ph.D. students, and trained five postdoctoral fellows. His research activities were continuously supported by funds from the National Institutes of Health from 1971 through 2001. From 1978-97, he served on the editorial advisory board for the Journal of Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics.

Professor Uretsky was an active member of the University community and served on numerous College and University committees. He was valued for his commitment to service, his collegiality, his concern for others, and his effective quiet leadership. He served as chair of the Division of Pharmacology in the College of Pharmacy from 1995 to 2002. He retired in February 2004 with the title of Professor Emeritus. He continued to be involved in teaching pharmacology to pharmacy students on a part-time basis from 2004-06.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Emeritus Norman J. Uretsky its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Marguerite M. Warren

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on September 10, 2008, of Marguerite M. Warren, Assistant Professor Emeritus at the Ohio State University Extension.

Professor Warren was born in Nallen, West Virginia. She received her Bachelor of Science degree in 1937 in home economics from Marshall University. She continued her education at the University of Cincinnati, Xavier University, Colorado State University, and the University of Arizona.

Marge began her Extension career in Hamilton County Ohio in 1961 as a county extension agent in home economics. She retired from this position with the title of Assistant Professor Emeritus in 1979.

Professor Warren's contributions in providing Extension educational programs during her career proved that she was truly dedicated to her career in Extension. She worked with many local committees and agencies to provide leadership for the numerous home economics programs in the Cincinnati area, including the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program for low-income and poverty-stricken clientele. She conducted Food Safety Forum Workshops, and worked with the Metropolitan Home and Family Life Program.

She also participated in statewide workshops for home economics and kept abreast of current subject matter in this field. She was a member of the Ohio Cooperative Extension Agents' Association, the Ohio Home Economics Association, the American Home Economics Association, and the National Association of Extension Home Economists.

A phrase that was repeated often about Marge was "her greatest attribute was that of unselfishness." She was always giving to others and wanting to make their lives better.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Assistant Professor Emeritus Marguerite M. Warren its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to her family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

SALARY REDUCTION PICK-UP PLANS

Synopsis: The Ohio State University will pick-up the contributions to The Ohio State University Retirement Continuation Plan (RCP) (f/k/a The Ohio State University Supplemental Qualified Retirement Plan), The Ohio Public Employees Retirement System (OPERS), and The State Teachers Retirement System of Ohio (STRS Ohio) (each sometimes hereinafter referred to as a Plan or, collectively, the Plans) for the employees of Ohio State pursuant to Section 414(h)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code), and subject to the provisions under each Plan.

WHEREAS pursuant to federal and Ohio laws, federal and state income taxes on a portion of the wages or salaries of the employees of Ohio State will be deferred to the extent that Ohio State "picks-up" (assumes and pays) the contributions for covered employees (Pick-Up Contributions); and

WHEREAS other resolutions and/or actions may exist with respect to one or more of the Plans; and

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

WHEREAS to the extent that such other resolutions and/or actions are consistent with these Resolutions, these Resolutions do not invalidate any such prior resolutions and/or actions; and

WHEREAS Ohio State established the Plans on or before August 28, 2006, and has since operated the Plans with the intent of complying with the relevant laws, rules, and regulations and subject to the terms of each respective Plan, such that Ohio State contributes pick-up contribution amounts directly to a Plan on behalf of an employee and, once a pick-up contribution has been designated, an employee may not elect to receive such amount directly; and

WHEREAS Ohio State has provided employee communications regarding the operations of each Plan, including the pre-tax nature of the irrevocable employee salary reduction contributions; and

WHEREAS pursuant to Revenue Ruling 2006-43 and under the authority of Code Section 7805(b)(8), the Internal Revenue Service will not treat any Plan that, on or before August 28, 2006, included designated employee contributions that were intended to be picked up as employer contributions pursuant to Code Section 414(h)(2) as failing to meet the requirements of such section prior to January 1, 2009, if Ohio State (1) took contemporaneous action evidencing an intent to establish a "pick-up" plan, (2) has operated the Plan accordingly, and (3) a duly authorized person takes action in writing on behalf of Ohio State prior to January 1, 2009, with respect to future contributions to provide that the contributions on behalf of covered employees, although designated as employee contributions, will be paid by Ohio State in lieu of employee contributions; and

WHEREAS Ohio State will not incur any additional costs in the picking up of such pick-up contributions:

NOW THEREFORE:

BE IT RESOLVED That effective November 7, 2008, the full amount of the pick-up contributions to a Plan shall be withheld from the gross pay of each person within any of the classes established and shall be "picked up" (assumed and paid to a Plan) by Ohio State. Pick-up contributions shall be designated as public employee contributions and shall be in lieu of contributions to a Plan by each person within any of the classes established. No person subject to this "pick-up" shall have the option of choosing to receive the pick-up contribution amount directly instead of having it contributed by Ohio State to a Plan or, if applicable, excluded from the pick-up contribution. Ohio State shall, in reporting and making remittance to OPERS or STRS Ohio, report that its contribution for each person subject to this "pick-up" has been made as provided by the statute. Therefore, pick-up contributions, although designated as employee contributions, are deemed employer-paid, and employees do not have the option to receive such contributions directly. All pick-up contributions are paid by Ohio State directly to a Plan.

BE IT RESOLVED, That pick-up contributions provided by this resolution shall apply to all persons that are employees of Ohio State who are or become participants or contributing members under one of the Plans (each a Participant and, collectively, Participants).

BE IT RESOLVED, that Ohio State's method of payment of salary to Participants is hereby modified to the extent necessary in order to provide a reduction in salary of each such Participant for pick-up contributions.

BE IT RESOLVED That the total salary to each Participant shall be the salary otherwise payable under Ohio State's policies (Total Salary). The Total Salary of each Participant shall be payable by Ohio State in two parts: (a) deferred salary, and (b) cash salary. A Participant's deferred salary shall be equal to the percentage of that Participant's Total Salary that is required or designated irrevocably to be paid as an employee contribution by that Participant, and shall be paid by Ohio State to a Plan on behalf of that Participant as a pick-up contribution and in lieu of that Participant's Plan contribution otherwise payable. A Participant's cash salary shall be equal to that Participant's Total Salary less the amount of pick-up contributions for that Participant, and shall be payable to that Participant subject to applicable payroll deductions. If required, Ohio State shall compute and remit its employer contributions to a Plan based upon a Participant's Total Salary. The total combined expenditures of Ohio State for each Participant's Total Salary, payable under applicable Ohio State policies and the pick-up provisions of this resolution, shall not be greater than the amounts it would have paid for those items had this provision not been in effect.

BE IT RESOLVED, that the treasurer and/or the Office of Human Resources and the Office of Legal Affairs, in consultation with the Senior Vice President for Business and Finance, in carrying out this resolution, is hereby authorized and directed to implement the provisions of this resolution to institute the pick-up contributions to the Plans for Participants so as to enable them to obtain federal and state tax deferments.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much. There is another reason this is a very special day today, and I would like to call on President Gee to provide us with some background on the special announcement.

President Gee:

Thank you Mr. Chairman, and I must say it is rare the University president gets to make such a pleasurable announcement as I do today. It is my pleasure to formally announce the creation of a new partnership between The Ohio State University and the world-renowned Royal Shakespeare Company (RSC). This international partnership is unique, the first of its kind ever undertaken by an American university with the Royal Shakespeare Company. Together we are creating a premier program for the study, teacher training and production of Shakespeare. We will expand the reach of Shakespeare's beauty and truth to school children, teachers and our own students and faculty. The collaboration will extend more fully into our community with the creation of a young people's Shakespeare Festival. This partnership comes at a moment when our institutional power and passion are focused on improving the lives of Ohioans in very tangible ways, and we are deeply committed to that work, yet enriching lives and bringing human expression and creativity to the fore are surely equally important public purposes.

To our great good fortune Ohio State has the ability and the drive to pursue all of its missions with equal vigor. Our collaboration with the Royal Shakespeare Company is an especially robust one, drawing from Ohio State's great academic strength and breadth. Included in the partnership are the College of Education and Human Ecology, several departments in the College of Arts and the College of Humanities, and the Wexner Center for the Arts. Our participation is being coordinated by the University's new office for Arts and Culture, lead by Associate Vice President Karen Bell. I am grateful to her for her efforts, and I want to thank the members of the Royal Shakespeare Company who are with us today, Michael Boyd, Vikki Heywood, Jacqui O'Hanlon and Lady Susie Sainsbury. I look forward, of course, to our work together and it is now my pleasure to turn things over to Karen Bell.

Dr. Karen A. Bell:

Well we are thrilled that this is happening, and I think all of us in this room have read Shakespeare in high school, but very few of us in this room have embodied Shakespeare, with our bodies, our hearts, our minds, and our souls. That is what we want to do for hundreds, which will turn into thousands of school children in the state of Ohio. So the plan is, we are starting out working with the Metro School and its affiliated stem schools, and there are schools here in the county, and throughout the state that we will be working with. We are going to be bringing teachers over, we will take about 20 teachers over this summer to Stratford to do the training in this Stand-Up for Shakespeare, this do it on your feet Shakespeare, experience it early Shakespeare. We are also, as Gordon said, working with our colleges and the

November 7, 2008 meeting, Board of Trustees

Wexner Center, so this is one of our very strong transinstitutional initiatives. I am not going to talk very much, what I would like to do is to let all of us hear from the Royal Shakespeare Company themselves. Michael Boyd has been with the Royal Shakespeare Company for a very long time, but has been the artistic director since 2003. Vikki Heywood is the executive director, has been with the company as executive director since 2004, and Jacqui O'Hanlon, the director of education has been with the company since 2003 as well. I would like to send the mic to the three of our guests, and then we will have a chance to see a very brief, but exciting video that I think you will all enjoy, and then we have a tea reception out in the atrium after this. Thank you, and Michael is first.

Mr. Michael Boyd:

Well this is very exciting, thank you for having us. Theatre is the most quintessentially collaborative art form, so I think it is fitting that as an arts organization we are looking for partnership, and we are very proud to be associated with The Ohio State University. I would like to say a special thank you to Karen Bell and to David Frantz who came over and searched us out and looked us over and approved, and won our hearts as an organization, and convinced us in the first place that this would be a very good idea to form a relationship with your great institution. At the heart of the relationship are two people, our education director, Jacqui O'Hanlon, and Brian Edmiston who is a tremendous leader on your staff in the field of theatre and education. The selfish gene of this relationship from our point of view, is we know this is going to make our Stand Up Shakespeare Campaign better, we know it is going to make our work with kids in the UK stronger still. I think working with a great research institution like Ohio State is also hopefully going to give us some hard evidence for the future to use back in the UK and hopefully you will be able to use it here as well to help teachers understand how this work is perhaps not only of use in Shakespeare classes, but will have an impact on the learning confidence of kids throughout the curriculum. We have a very strong belief that this is the case, but we want hard evidence, and I think this is going to help us.

We as an arts organization have been committed now for the past five years to reinvestigate the art of the ensemble. Of working together over a long period of time in an artistic community of actors, directors, writers and designers, in the belief that that kind of long-term deep inquiry together, day and night sometimes, will produce work of greater depth or the more robust inquiry into what it is like to be a human being. We are very much looking forward to sharing this with you, and if we want to be true to our spirit of inquiry, then where best to start than with a great institution like Ohio State.

I would like to introduce Jacqui O'Hanlon, our Education Director who can give you a little more of a breakdown of what Stand Up Shakespeare really means. Once again thank you for shaking hands with us.

Ms. Jacqui O'Hanlon:

Just to say how excited we are in the education department to have this opportunity to work with The Ohio State University, in order to expand our thinking about what is possible to achieve when we work with children and young people and teachers in education and through Shakespeare. I think that through Shakespeare is a really important way of thinking about the work we are doing. Of course we will be learning about Shakespeare and his plays, but it is the opportunity those plays give us to learn through them that is the most exciting opportunity as an educationalist I think. What I was particularly struck by in coming to work at the RSC was when we talked to children and young people about what they thought about Shakespeare, they would say it was boring, and it is irrelevant to us in our lives, and yet when we worked with children and young people in a particular way with Shakespeare, when they were up on their feet doing Shakespeare, when they were seeing it live, when they were starting work with Shakespeare earlier, they had a completely different reaction. Actually what happened was they began to think about themselves and the world in a different way, probably because what Shakespeare's plays do is present a multiplicity of view points. He is incapable as a playwright of presenting only one point of view, and that richness of viewpoint is a really healthy thing for a young mind. Also something happens when children and young people engage with the language, because of the richness of that language, it is not just something physical that happens when they say Shakespeare's words, but what they have to do is really dig deep down to find an eloquence to begin to talk about what happens to them when they engage with that language, or when they engage with those plays. What they find, released in themselves, is an articulacy that they did not know they had. There are lots of very exciting things that happen with children and young people when they start engaging with Shakespeare.

Another really important thing that happens is the increase in confidence in children and young people because of the iconic status that Shakespeare has, the fact that you can do Shakespeare means something, so you begin to think of yourself differently as a learner in education, and that has an impact on how you might be in math or science as well as how you are in English.

So what we are going to do in working with Ohio State is create a program for teachers. That might seem ironic, I have spent a lot of time talking about children and young people, and now we are going to be working with teachers, but that is because we share a commitment. The RSC education work and Ohio State University share a commitment to working with teachers because we know when we work with teachers, actually the impact we can have on thousands and thousands and thousands of young people is really there. What Ohio State teachers will do is they will come and work with us in Stratford each year over the next three years, and they will come and work with the education staff, with the artists in the RSC and obviously bringing the expertise that Brian Edmiston has in their teaching and learning school. So they will work and look at what kind of impact working in Shakespeare has in the classroom. They will do some research on that, because as Michael says, one of the key things for us is creating an evidence base about what happens when we work in this way with Shakespeare. The other thing we are going to do is to work with the teachers to create, we hope, a festival of young people's performance work in 2012, which will be part of the bicentennial celebrations here. We are really looking forward to all of that, and at this time next year, maybe we will be coming to report back to you on our progress and how we have got on with our first cohort of teachers, and maybe they will be here as well, I do not know. We look forward to that moment, thank you very much.

Dr. Bell:

That is the end of our program. I want to again thank you all very much, and Lady Sainsbury who is the deputy chair of the Royal Shakespeare Company, and the chair of the RSC in America, for taking the time to come, and I am sure it was not just for the election, you came here for us. Thank you all very much for being here. Now if we can see the video.

[VIDEO PRESENTATION]

Thank you very much, and we are delighted that this could be our office's first big initiative. We are honored.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much Karen. This is really a very special day here at Ohio State and we are really very privileged to enter this partnership. Michael, Vikki, Jacqui and Lady Sainsbury, I appreciate very much you coming here today to help us celebrate this partnership. It is great to have you here and it is obvious as Dr. Frantz and I have been talking about, over the last day, this is really a different paradigm I think, from how most of us think about Shakespeare. It moves beyond an art form. This is really getting at some of the opportunities to really understand learning education, behavioral science, social science, it is very different, and I for one find it a really paradigm buster. I would probably go up and ask Mr. Shakespeare for his autograph too now. That is just terrific. We really look forward to this interaction. It will be very beneficial to our University.

If there is no other business to come before the Board, this meeting is adjourned. The next meeting of the Board will take place on Friday, February 6, 2009 at the Faculty Club. Committee meetings will be on Thursday, February 5, at the Fawcett Center. Thank you.

TOPIC: Approval of Facilities Improvement Projects, Planning Studies and Real Estate Transactions

CONTEXT:

Facilities improvement projects were approved by the Board of Trustees at the February, 2008 meeting.

Changes have been made to the existing policy that incorporate the following:

1. Clarification regarding annual reporting (policy item #6)
2. Clarification regarding study approval amounts (policy item #8)
3. Clarification regarding real estate transactions (policy item #13)
4. Policy regarding Energy Saving Contracts, including Performance Contracts (policy additions #15 – 21)

The proposed changes clarify policy points, and incorporate important components of HB 251. Changes are highlighted and underlined in the attached document.

RECOMMENDATION:

Adopt attached changes to the policy regarding the Board and the University review and approvals required for facilities improvement projects, planning studies, real estate transactions, and energy saving contracts, including performance contracts.

(Revised November 7, 2008)

Policy for Board of Trustees Review and Approval of Facilities Improvement Projects, Planning Studies, and Real Estate Transactions

Facilities Improvement Projects

This policy is intended to provide flexibility for the University to undertake projects in an expeditious manner, while preserving the authority and ability of the Board of Trustees to review and approve major projects as the Board determines. This policy is not intended to limit Board review of any project or action as the Board determines appropriate. In interpreting this policy, the University shall provide for Board review in any case in which the provisions of this policy are unclear or subject to varying interpretation.

For the purposes of this document, Facilities Improvement Projects are defined as any initiatives undertaken on behalf of the University that improve the physical environment in support of the academic mission. Projects covered under this policy would include, but may not be limited to activities that involve land acquisition, construction, reconstruction, renovation, demolition, landscaping, roads and grounds improvements/maintenance, building and systems repairs/replacements, client-specified projects, major emergency responses and any capital improvement project. This policy excludes items which would appropriately be directed through the procurement process and subject to the University's procurement policies and guidelines.

1. Any facilities improvement project estimated to cost less than $1M shall follow all applicable University and state procurement guidelines regardless of funding source.
2. Any facilities improvement project estimated to cost more than $1M but less than $4M shall require specific project authorization by the Senior Vice President of Business and Finance. This approval constitutes complete authorization for the project, including site selection, design, construction and any services needed, except as specifically noted in the authorization resolution.
3. Any facilities improvement project estimated to cost $4M but less than $10M shall require specific project authorization by the Board of Trustees. This approval constitutes complete authorization for the project, including site selection, design, construction, and any other services needed, except as specifically noted in the authorizing resolution.
4. Any facilities improvement project estimated to cost $10 or more shall require specific project authorization by the Board of Trustees that may include site determination, design work, and construction management services, except as specifically noted in the authorizing resolution. For these projects, separate Board authorization shall be required for construction unless specifically included in the project approval resolution.
5. Once a project of $4M or more has been approved by the Board, the University shall not increase the project costs (including costs for design, construction, construction management, or other services) presented to the Board at the time of authorization without specific Board approval except as follows:
 - a. For projects under $4M, with the prior written approval of the Senior Vice President for Business and Finance, the University may increase individual project contracts or the total project budget as long as the increased project budget does not exceed 10% of the total project budget and funding for the increase is provided by the requesting department or other source and an appropriate report is made to the Board regarding the increase.

- b. For projects of $4M or more, with the prior written approval of the Senior Vice President for Business and Finance, the University may increase individual project contracts or the total project budget cumulatively by no more than 10% of the total project budget or $1M, whichever is less, so long as funding for the increase is provided by the requesting department or other source and an appropriate report is made to the Board regarding the increase.
6. The University shall report annually to the Board, at the first meeting of the calendar year, on all facilities improvement projects estimated to cost $4M or more that were completed during the previous year. The report will include determination as to whether the project was on time and on budget. The report will also include a summary of all facilities improvement projects greater than $50,000 completed by Facilities Operation and Development and auxiliary units during the calendar year. The report will be presented according to established annual reporting guidelines.
7. The University shall report quarterly to the Board on the status of each major facilities improvement project of $20M or more that meet the reporting point's criteria, and annually on any other facilities project as required by the Board. The report will include determination as to whether the project is on time and on budget and include appropriate metrics.

Planning Studies and Project Siting

8. Any planning study (including any feasibility, technical, siting, or other planning study) estimated to cost $250,000 or more shall require Board of Trustees authorization (either separately or as part of the facilities project recommendations). Any planning study originally estimated at less than $250,000 that goes over that amount shall be submitted to the Board for authorization. Any planning study estimated to cost less than $250,000 and more than $25,000 shall require Senior Vice President for Business and Finance approval.
9. Any proposed changes to the approved University Master Plan, Regional Plans, District Plans, and Sub-District Plans shall be subject to review and approval by the Senior Management Council and Board of Trustees.
10. Requests for use of a site for any facilities project or any change in activity or program shall be subject to review and approval by the Senior Management Council and Board of Trustees if not in compliance with the approved University Master and District Plans, as determined by the Department of Facilities Operations and Development.

Real Estate Transactions

11. Any easement, other than an easement for street, roadway or highway purposes, to be granted to another party for use of University property for a term of not more than 25 years shall be subject to review and approval by the Senior Vice President for Business and Finance.
12. Approval of replacement (renewal) easements for existing agreements that benefit the University and that were previously approved by the Board of Trustees as outlined in item #11, may be granted for a like term by the University through the written approval of the Senior Vice President for Business and Finance.

13. Any sale or purchase of real property in the name of the Board of Trustees or the University, or acceptance of the gift of real property, shall be subject to the review and approval of the Board of Trustees.
14. The lease of real property by the University for any total term of ten years or more or with a total lease value greater than $1M shall be subject to review and approval by the Board of Trustees.

Energy Saving Contracts, including Performance Contracts

15. Any request for proposals for energy saving contracts that are exempt from the applicable competitive bidding requirements shall follow the requirements of section 3345.65 of the Revised Code.
16. Proposals shall be analyzed considering the cost estimates of each proposal, how qualified each party submitting a proposal is to implement its proposal, and the institution's ability to pay for each with current revenues or by financing the cost of each.
17. The proposal most likely to result in the greatest savings may be recommended for contract, when the cost of the proposal is compared to the reduced energy and operating costs that will result from implementing the proposal.
18. No contract to implement energy saving measures shall be awarded unless one or both of the following circumstances exists, as applicable:
 - a. In the case of a contract for a cogeneration system described in division (B)(8) of section 3345.61 of the Revised Code, the cost of the contract is not likely to exceed the amount of money the board would save in energy and operating costs over no more than five years;
 - b. In the case of any contract for any energy saving measure other than a cogeneration system, the cost of the contract is not likely to exceed the amount of money the board would save in energy and operating costs over no more than ten years.
19. Any energy saving contract estimated to cost less than $4M shall require specific authorization by the Senior Vice President of Business and Finance. This approval constitutes complete authorization for the project including site selection, design, construction and any services needed, except as specifically noted in the authorization resolution.
20. Any energy saving contract estimated to cost $4M but less than $10,000,000 shall require specific project authorization by the Board of Trustees. This approval constitutes complete authorization for the project, including site selection, design, construction, and any other services needed, except as specifically noted in the authorizing resolution.
21. Any energy saving contract estimated to cost $10M or more shall require specific project authorization by the Board of Trustees that may include site determination, design work, and construction management services, except as specifically noted in the authorizing resolution. For these projects, separate Board authorization shall be required for construction unless specifically included in the project approval resolution.

Campus Electric Capacity, Phase 2 (New Substation)

OSU-081042

Requesting Agency(s): FACILITIES OPERATIONS AND DEVELOPMENT

Location(s): Unidentified Utility, Col.

ASF/0 GSF Age:

Description/Scope:

This project will construct a new electrical substation that is necessary to meet current and future campus electrical needs. An initial study has been completed (currently in final draft) recommending the station be located near the new AEP feeder to campus along Kenny Rd. The recommendation on location is also based on a coordinated review of current identified campus growth and projected future growth over the long term. Final siting will be determined as part of this project, in coordination with other campus planning efforts.

Campus electrical demand will exceed the capacity of the OSU substation within the next five to eight years. Energy conservation will off-set a portion of the growth but will not eliminate the need for a new substation.

Once operational the substation will be the primary source of power to buildings west of the Olentangy River, reducing the demand on the existing substation and providing for growth on the main campus. The new substation will also be designed to provide redundancy to the existing substation to improve electrical reliability in support of business continuity and risk management planning.

The electrical duct bank and electric vaults will be constructed as part of the John Herrick Drive Rebuild projects.

How does this project advance the Academic Plan? This project will advance the Academic Plan by improving campus infrastructure to provide reliable service to campus buildings and improve service efficiency.

Logistics: Campus growth currently in process and in the future with the Medical Center will reach/exceed the capacity of the OSU substation. This will be coordinated with the underground transmission line being installed by AEP, and loads will be shifted to allow for required capacity.

Risks: Failure to coordinate the design of this project with AEP's installation of their third distribution line to campus risks excessive future installation costs to complete the connection of the new substation to this line. Proceeding now insures coordination with the AEP project to facilitate the tie-in point for the new substation and offers the potential to complete this during the AEP installation work period. Designing this project in parallel with AEP insures alignment and offers potential construction savings estimated in the range of $200,000 to $750,000. Also, if the project is delayed too long, the campus may be unable to provide power for any future campus expansion after 2013.

Energy and Sustainability: This project will meet the requirements of HB 251, as applicable.

Description/Scope:

This project includes full depth replacement of deteriorated roadway from Woody Hayes Drive to Olentangy River Road. This project will also include the electrical duct bank and electric vaults required for the Campus Electric Capacity, Phase 2 (New Substation) project. The roadway will be under construction during the warm weather months of 2010 to 2011.

How does this project advance the Academic Plan? This project advances the Academic Plan by improving campus infrastructure.

Logistics: Two-way traffic will be maintained on one side of the roadway while the other side is under construction.

Risks: This project is installing the electrical duct bank and electrical vaults required for the Campus Electric Capacity, Phase 2 (New Substation) project. A delay in this project will adversely affect the timing of the new substation which is required to meet current and future capacity for the campus, including the Medical Center expansion projects.

Requesting Agency(s): FACILITIES OPERATIONS AND DEVELOPMENT

Location(s): Unidentified Street-Col.

ASF/0 GSF Age:

Description/Scope:

This project includes full depth replacement of deteriorated roadway from Glentangy River Road to Cannon Drive and 12th Avenue (not including the intersection of Cannon Drive and 12th Avenue). This project will also include the installation of electrical duct bank and electric vaults for the Campus Electric Capacity, Phase 2 (New Substation). This project may include intersection realignment.

The project will be under construction during the warm weather months of 2012 to 2013.

How does this project advance the Academic Plan? This project advances the Academic Plan by improving the campus transportation and utility infrastructure.

Logistics: Two-way traffic will be maintained on one side of the road while the other side is under construction.

Risks: This project is installing the electrical duct bank and electrical vaults required for the Campus Electric Capacity, Phase 2 (New Substation) project. A delay in this project will adversely affect the timing of the new substation which is required to meet current and future capacity for the campus, including the Medical Center expansion projects.

Energy and Sustainability: This project will meet the requirements of HB 251, as applicable.

Deferred Maintenance/Renewal: This project will address approximately $4M in deferred maintenance.

Steam and Condensate Distribution System Upgrades Phase 2

OSU-081060

Requesting Agency(s): FACILITIES OPERATIONS AND DEVELOPMENT

Location(s): Unidentified Utility, Col.

ASF/O GSF Age:

Description/Scope:

This project will replace deteriorated steam lines and failing condensate lines in the campus steam distribution system in order to ensure reliable steam capacity and increase condensate return. Deteriorated steam and condensate distribution lines will be replaced with larger sized lines to increase capacity, which is needed to support the Medical Center projects. The phase one project is replacing a failed steam line; the steam line replaced by phase two is currently the sole source of steam to the Midwest campus until phase one is complete.

In addition to increasing capacity and reliability, the replacement of failing condensate return lines will result in fuel and water treatment cost savings.

How does this project advance the Academic Plan? This project advances the Academic Plan by improving campus infrastructure and efficiency and ensuring reliable service to campus buildings.

(APPENDIX XX)

SALARY REDUCTION PICK-UP PLANS

TOPIC: Ohio State's retirement contributions for covered employees.

ACTION REQUIRED: Adoption of the resolution for Ohio State's salary reduction "pick-up" plans to ensure IRS compliance.

BACKGROUND:

- Pursuant to federal and Ohio laws, federal and state income taxes on a portion of the wages or salaries of the employees of Ohio State will be deferred to the extent that Ohio State picks up (assumes and pays) the contributions for covered employees (pick-up contributions).
- The IRS has declared, through IRS Revenue Ruling 2006-43, that any public employer who remits tax-deferred employee contributions is required to approve specific written documentation about their pick-up plan(s).
- In February, 1999 a Board of Trustees resolution was adopted to establish The Ohio State University Alternative Retirement Plan (ARP), which indicated that contributions to this plan would be picked up by Ohio State.
- For each of the following, Ohio State also contributes pick-up contribution amounts directly to the Plan on behalf of an employee: The Ohio State University Retirement Continuation Plan (RCP) (f/k/a The Ohio State University Supplemental Qualified Retirement Plan), The Ohio Public Employees Retirement System (OPERS), and The State Teachers Retirement System of Ohio (STRS Ohio); and thus, written documentation needs to be established for these plans as well.
- Ohio State will not incur any additional costs for picking up such contributions.
- Possible repercussions of a noncompliant plan are:
 - Additional tax liabilities for the employee and employer;
 - Corrected W-2 forms to employees; and
 - Amended income tax returns.

REVIEW:

- OPERS and STRS Ohio have reviewed and approved this resolution language as satisfying.

RECOMMENDATION:

- Seek adoption of the resolution from the Board of Trustees establishing the remaining plans as "pick-up" plans.
- Update employee communications to indicate the plans are considered "pick-up" plans, and thus, eligible for a pre-tax deduction.

LONG-TERM LEASE/PURCHASE

JAMES CANCER HOSPITAL AND SOLOVE RESEARCH INSTITUTE
JAMESCARE WOMEN'S AMBULATORY
ONCOLOGY CENTER
739 WEST THIRD AVENUE
COLUMBUS, OHIO 43212

Background

Location and Description

The proposed JamesCare Women's Ambulatory Oncology Center will be located within one mile of the James Cancer Hospital and Solove Research Institute (the James) at 739 West Third Avenue in Columbus, Ohio 43212. The Center will provide all-encompassing women's oncology services including complete diagnostic services, immediate answers, far-reaching expertise, continuity of care, convenience, comfort and support. This location will satisfy the growing demand for ambulatory oncology care and access to clinical trials in central Ohio. Patients also will benefit from access to therapeutic clinical trials, a high-risk breast cancer clinic, the leading-edge research of the James, and access to specialized oncology services. The business plan for this Cancer Center demonstrates positive contribution and is self sustaining.

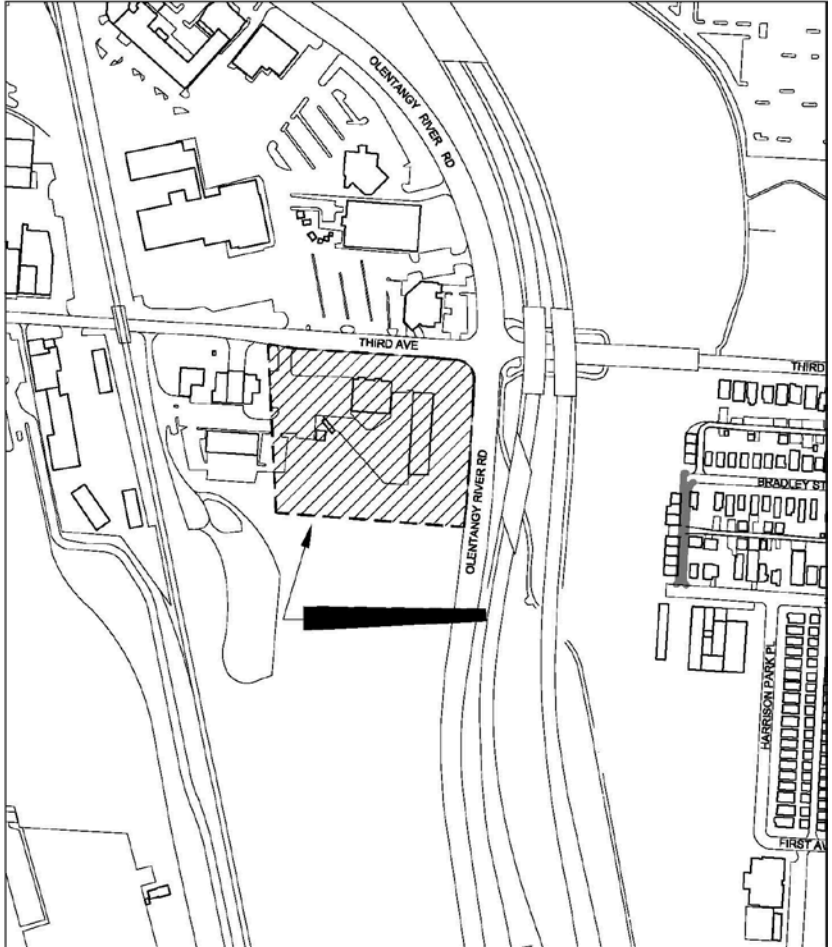

The proposed site, which is visible from SR 315, has excellent access from SR 315 and from the James. The proposed medical office building will contain approximately 103,500 square feet. The new building will be constructed for multiple clinical specialty uses per approved plans and specifications and will provide space for future expansion as programs develop, along with adequate parking. This facility will be leased to the University for a term of 20 years with negotiated renewal options and a purchase option. All costs including lease payments and operating costs will be the responsibility of the James Cancer Hospital and will be paid from operating revenue generated at the location. Proposals for facility development were solicited through a competitive bid process and the selection of the final lease was based on the superior location and finances.

The site, approximately 4.7 acres, currently is owned by the City of Columbus and used for a police heliport. Gowdy Partners III LLC has an option to purchase the site. Gowdy Partners III LLC will exercise that option and construct the building.

Terms of Lease

The initial lease term shall be for a period of 20 years with two five year renewal options. Purchase options at different times during the lease will be negotiated. The proposed average annual base rent, including estimated amortized tenant improvement costs and operating expenses, during the first ten years of the lease are estimated to be $3.3 million. The lease will be market conforming, competitively negotiated, and will be business plan compliant. Final terms and conditions of the lease will be negotiated in the best interest of the James, OSU Medical Center, and the University.

Dr. Cloyd:

In order to conduct the business of this meeting in an orderly fashion, I would ask that everyone make sure that the ringers on their cell phones are turned off, as well as other communication devices, so we can conduct the meeting in an orderly fashion, and also ask you to observe rules of decorum proper to conduct the business at hand.

Onto the next item on the agenda, before I introduce President Gee to provide his report I would like to wish him a belated happy birthday. I think it is very fitting that your birthday is on Groundhog's Day. Happy birthday, President Gee.

All of you have had an opportunity to see the wonderful gift that President Gee provided in his scholarship for students. This is really a very significant step on your part President Gee, and very consistent with the mission and vision of this great University to provide high quality education to everyone in the state, and beyond and that is very much appreciated. Thank you very much.

President Gee, there is also one other gift I would like to acknowledge at this time, which I think is really rather extraordinary. President Gee often talks about the positive passion that people have for Ohio State University, and we have a real example of that in our Development Fund report today. Dean Gifford Weary, who is dean of Social and Behavioral Sciences, has created a $2 million chair in the department of Psychology. I do not believe she is here today, but we will recognize her even without being here. It is an extraordinary gift in its own regard, but it also fits with what President Gee says is the type of loyalty and dedication we see across our University, and in this case by one of our deans and faculty members. Even though Dean Weary is not here, I would ask all of you to join me in giving her a round of applause for this gift.

Thank you very much, and now I will turn to President Gee for his report.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

President Gee:

Thank you very much. I appreciate your kind words. You will not see as much of me in the future because I will be taking to Washington on Saturdays and Sundays to pay for the damn thing. I am as optimistic as ever, and how could I not be?

Last week Governor Strickland unveiled a budget proposal that builds upon two years of unprecedented support for higher education in Ohio. Other state supported universities around the country are laying off and furloughing staff. Thanks to our Governor and our bipartisan legislature and their firm commitment to higher education, we are better positioned than Ted Koppel's toupee.

Truly I am deeply grateful to the Governor, our elected leaders and Chancellor Fingerhut. Higher education will pull us out of this economic tailspin. I truly believe that, so the ball is now in our court.

For my part, I discussed with the Board today my goals for the next five years. The document is still a work in progress, but I like it because it goes well beyond the usual high-level, purely inspirational amorphous kinds of statements. The goals have specific strategies and milestones to be met along the way. It is a buck-stops-here approach, and I firmly believe that raising the stakes will help us move very quickly to realize our full potential.

Not surprisingly, perhaps, students have kept me busy. We have been to basketball games, parties, food festivals, and hockey games. They even sang happy birthday to me on Monday - by the way I did go out early in the morning, saw my shadow and went back to bed - and they sang happy birthday until I told them to get back to class.

In the past two months I have met with our future dentists, our future journalists, our future educational leaders, and I hope with all of them future Buckeyes. No, when I say that I am not talking about Marcus Hall or Jamaal Berry. This is recruiting season for honors, scholars, and Maximus students, and we have brought thousands of them to campus to convince them to commit to Ohio State next fall. These are the best and the brightest high school students from around the country, and like Angelina Jolie, Ohio State wants to adopt them all.

A couple of weeks ago I spent an evening with doctoral candidates in our educational policy program. The conversation was lively and engaging. They asked me anything and everything. In fact, one student from South Korea asked me, and this is absolutely true, a very reasonable and perceptive question. He said with all the available talent out there, why on Earth did Ohio State hire me twice. He is on his way back to South Korea.

Our students' Solar Decathlon project belongs in a science-fiction novel. It brings together students from architecture, engineering, political science, some 20 majors in all. They are designing and creating a 700 square foot solar powered house of the future that will be part of a national competition in Washington, D.C. next fall. Other students are taking technologies developed in Ohio State laboratories and creating new companies out of them. NanoMed is one of them.

Born in an Ohio State classroom, NanoMed produces genetically modified cells for gene therapy, and it is irrefutable scarlet and gray proof of the entrepreneurial spirit of our students.

Clearly these students are learning much from our faculty. The American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) is the gold-standard of academic achievement. This winter 18 Ohio State faculty members were inducted into the AAAS, assuring that our faculty remains the largest contingent of AAAS fellows in the country. They are making the news in other ways, and more often than even the Governor of Illinois.

Since we last spoke Ohio State experts have been featured in The New York Times, Newsweek, CNN and even Jay Leno's monologue. His show is post-prime time, so the theme was not exactly G-rated. Let us just say it involved the world's oldest profession and new evidence that when you touch something you are more likely to buy it. But easy double-entendres aside, our faculty have made news with ingenious ideas to protect soybean crops, calculate the cost of food borne illness, solve the mysteries of the solar system, and develop a vaccine for Alzheimer's. Their leadership in reaching out to our communities also was recognized recently. In December, the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching recognized the University for its extensive outreach and engagement efforts – everything from watershed management to the arts.

I am delighted to report that we have recently appointed Christine Poon, dean of the Fisher College of Business. She is a veteran of the pharmaceutical industry and a global-force in business and commercialization of research. Dean Poon, whom many of you met in January, will take the helm this spring, joining the ranks of Joyce Beatty and Javaune Adams-Gaston, who hit the ground running last month. Together these leaders will enrich our University whose stock is on the rise.

In December, The Wall Street Journal named the Fisher Executive MBA program the third best investment in business education. Several weeks ago, we announced the new Students First program. Through the program, we seek to ensure that students caught in the economic tsunami are able to complete their degrees. Students First doubles the amount of money available for short-term loans, while reducing interest rates and guaranteeing that if tuition rises, financial aid will rise with it.

A complementary new fundraising initiative will help in even more substantial ways. All of us at this University are redoubling our efforts to fuel Ohio's economic resurgence, and we are more aggressively telling our success stories. Last week, I sent to elected leaders and others the first of a series of one-page stories about University programs that are creating jobs and kick-starting our economy. They include business incubators in Piketon, telescope construction in Columbus, and sensor-technology development in Dayton.

What all of these programs underscore is that now is not the time to hunker down. Ohio's future, I believe, lies in the development of new ideas, innovative thinking, and the application of our best and brightest minds to our toughest global problems. Realizing the enormous promise of our great state requires partnerships of all kinds. And partnerships with alumni and friends have never been more important. It is my honor to announce one of the largest single gifts ever given to the University, and the largest from an individual donor to the Engineering College.

Bill and Ernie Lowrie have committed $17 million to chemical and biomedical engineering at Ohio State. Their gift is remarkable for its extraordinary size, but more so for the ways in which it will advance the works of students and faculty for generations to come. The Lowries are supporting faculty members at various stages in their careers through the creation of targeted endowed funds. They are devoting substantial sums to the construction and support of a new laboratory building.

For many decades, Ernie and Bill have been two of the University's firmest friends. They have given their time and talents to so many areas of Ohio State, and Bill's strategic guidance on our Foundation Board is absolutely invaluable. In recognition of Bill and Ernie's uncommon generosity and steadfast friendship, the Board today will approve the naming of the William G. Lowrie Department of Chemical and Biomolecular Engineering. The Lowries have to leave soon, but would they please join me at the podium so that we might properly express and show our gratitude?

Ladies and gentlemen, Bill and Ernie Lowrie.

Mr. William G. Lowrie:

I did not know I was going to be invited to speak, but I will be brief. We are extremely pleased to be able to do what we are doing. It is something we have given a lot of thought to. I know it is referred to as a gift, but as I have told other people, in my opinion, what is taking place in the Department of Chemical and Biomolecular Engineering over the last couple of decades is growing it and making it stronger, and making it much more powerful; they have earned this and they have earned the right to step forward and continue to grow, and the gift we are making. I am confident will give them the facilities to recruit and bring in high talented students and faculty. I will promise you, although I am not going to be able to control it, that they will continue to create and will create a department that is going to be world class in this area of study. It is our pleasure to do this, and thank you very much for the recognition you have afforded us. We appreciate it.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you President Gee. I would now like to call on Jason Marion to present the Student Recognition Awards.

STUDENT RECOGNITION AWARDS

Mr. Marion:

Thank you Mr. Chairman.

Today we have the opportunity to recognize two of Ohio State's most outstanding students, and being outstanding in an institution such as Ohio State is quite a feat. This is my favorite part of the actual meeting, because we have two examples of what we as a University are all about.

Our first student, Laura E. Kenkel, a Cincinnati native, comes to The Ohio State University from Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana, where she was a National Merit Scholar earning top honors while working on two bachelors degrees, one in chemistry and one in psychology. She later earned a masters degree in physiology at Ball State, and she is currently a fourth year medical student in our College of Medicine.

Dean Souba identifies Laura as "the embodiment of intellectual experience, compassion, and altruism." Her record demonstrates this. At OSU she has earned four merit and service scholarships, demonstrating her academic excellence and outstanding service to others. Her service is commendable, both to the University and to the community. She has worked well over a hundred hours for the Columbus

Suicide Hotline, she has created and facilitated a support group for medical students with depression and anxiety, she served as an executive member for the Psychiatry Interest Group and currently she is co-chair of the Gold Humanism Honor Society. It is absolutely no surprise she was awarded the Mallory Scholarship in the Medical Humanities for commitment to the medical humanities and community service. In addition, while in medical school she has received honors on four occasions and received five letters of commendation. Laura has also been an outstanding instructor with Professional Pathways in Health and she continues to be an exceptional mentor and educator to OSU's premedical undergraduate students. Laura's selfless nature and her ability to help others will surely make her an outstanding doctor and she is highly worthy of recognition by the Board. Laura will you please stand to be recognized.

In a moment Laura will address the Board and we will also have an opportunity for some photos.

Our second student, Tada A. Yamamoto is a senior pursuing a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration and majoring in Business Logistics and Operations Management at our Fisher College of Business. Tada comes to us from West Chester, Ohio, another Cincinnati student. I had nothing to do with the selection of these awards.

A two-time intern for General Mills and a one-time intern for Energizer Holdings, Tada has done everything from assembling the viability of Yoplait's flex capacity to maintain 99% customer service, to training full time Energizer employees at corporate and Asheboro plant offices to use the Red Prairie Transportation Management System.

At OSU, Tada has been setting a strong example for his peers, from earning 1st place in the 2008 TLA-Dow Chemical Case Competition to being in the top 2% of the Fisher class. Tada continues to grow from his firm freshman foundation at OSU, where he literally came into this institution sprinting, earning the Outstanding First Year Student Award. Just last year, he was named the 2008 Most Outstanding Junior Award recipient in the Fisher College of Business.

Despite being very academically minded as evidenced by being in the Honors Cohort Program, all the previously mentioned awards and many other accomplishments I have not mentioned, Tada stays socially and civically active serving as president of The Logistics Association and chancellor of The International Fraternity of Delta Sigma Pi. These are two very important and time-consuming roles, especially the fraternity responsibility. Amazingly, Tada still finds time to serve as a Fisher peer tutor, and this spring we will see Tada walk across stage at commencement, where he will become another strong addition to OSU's world-renowned Alumni Association.

Tada, will you please stand and be recognized?

Laura and Tada please join us at the podium to make a few remarks to the Board. They are interested in hearing about your experience.

Ms. Kenkel:

First I would like to say, thank you President Gee, Chairman Cloyd, and the Board of Trustees for this award. I would also like to thank Dean Souba, and the rest of The Ohio State University's College of Medicine's administration for their continued support for both my academic and service endeavors. Last but certainly not least, I would like to thank my parents, and the rest of my family, who are sitting over there: my mom, dad, grandma and sister. They have always been very supportive in my academic and professional pursuits. I do not know if I would have been able to accomplish even half of what I have been able to do without their love and support.

I came to OSU roughly four years ago, and began medical school, one of the last steps in fulfilling my life long dream to become a physician. As these four years have gone by, I have grown my medical knowledge and skills and become invested in the areas of humanism and professionalism of medicine. I have developed those attributes one truly needs to succeed in medicine, love of learning, compassion and a conscientiousness that helps me to see each of my patients as individual and unique. At any other school in the country, I probably could have garnered the knowledge and skills necessary to be a competent physician; however, I do not know if I would have developed such compassion and professionalism at any other school.

I have been continually amazed by the wonderful administration, faculty and staff at OSU's College of Medicine. The people at the College of Medicine make it the great college that it is, a place that both challenges and nurtures its students. This also reflects a positive light on the University at large, as such a place as our College of Medicine can hardly exist without the support of the University's leadership, and their support of our college and its students. Those leading OSU identify themselves in fellow believers in the importance of professionalism, humanism and compassion.

Sadly, my time at OSU is likely at an end, at least for now. I have just completed interviewing at some of the best psychiatry programs in the nation, including ours here at OSU, and come match day in March, I will start preparing for the next leg in my journey as a physician. Without OSU and the College of Medicine I do not believe I would have been such a successful candidate for residency; needless to say such a well-rounded and professional physician. I am grateful for the time I have had at OSU, it will always have a special place in my heart. For me it will always stand out as an example of a progressive, humanistic and compassionate institution which passes those values on to its students. In my case as well as many others, produces a physician of which I hope and believe the University can be proud. Thank you.

Mr. Yamamoto:

I would first like to thank the Board for this award. I really appreciate this award coming from a group that drives the University to become something that is second to none in my heart. My father always used to tell me that no award of value is really worth anything to represent the individual and his or her accomplishments, but rather a community that has fostered this individual. Each award is actually recognition of the community's ability to bring out the best in each individual, and I really feel as if Ohio State has brought that out in me. From sponsoring me in various things I have been able to do and travel to case competitions, travel internationally, and seeing the interaction with this highly diverse group, Ohio State really has collected everything I could possibly need to become the person I am today.

I keep one quotation next to my bed every night that reads similar to a John D. Rockefeller quotation, saying that "every scholarship implies a promise, every award a commitment and every honor an oath." So while I thank you again for this award, I take with me today an oath that I must pass forward everything and all the opportunities that have been presented to me through the past four years, so I can contribute both financially to the University, but also in my daily activity and coming back to the University in my professional life to provide mentorship to the same students that I had the opportunity to be mentored by professionals. So with that again, I would just like to say, thank you very much, and thanks to this Board who has made this community, which has made me the person I am today.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Dr. Cloyd:

At this time we will move to our Committee Reports. I would like to begin with Audit and Compliance Committee.

Mr. Schottenstein:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. The Audit and Compliance Committee met this morning. First we received a status report on internal controls, which was really a follow up to a lot of the streamlining measures that were recommended by PriceWaterhouseCoopers, pursuant to their operational audit which they undertook nearly two years ago. A lot of progress has been made in pursuing a number of those initiatives, and Mr. Shkurti provided us with an update.

We then received a presentation on the manner in which we account for gift receipts so that we could understand how those appear on our statement from an accounting standpoint. The compliance presentation at this meeting was entitled "Research Compliance Program Overview" presented by Dr. Todd Guttman. It was a very good report. Just for this Board's information, there are roughly 5,400 current research projects being undertaken at the University today. The oversight required to assure compliance with the enormous maze of federal and state regulations is quite impressive. I started to count the number of federal and state regulatory bodies that deal with our research and I stopped at 20. There were still quite a few more. Based on the report and the information that we were provided, that dealt with extent to which we comply, it appears that we deserve an A grade for our compliance. There are no problems that I need share with this Board, and that is a good thing.

We then had a brief review by Mr. Shkurti of our planned calendar of audit reviews for this year, and also a brief review of the mid-year financial report that I believe was also given in more detail at the Fiscal Affairs Committee. Finally we voted on an amendment to the Code of Regulations for one of the Affiliated Entities, Managed Health Care Systems, Inc., which will be on the consent agenda.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Schottenstein, any questions or comments on the committee report?

If not we will now move to the Committee on Trusteeship report.

Mr. McFerson:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. On behalf of the Committee on Trusteeship, I would like to state some of the following.

First we considered, yet again and for the final time, a resolution for Charter Trustee(s) as item three on the consent agenda. This will allow the Board to elect up to three non-voting members of the Board. They will be able to serve for two-three year appointments if they so choose. It was the recommendation of the Committee that these appointments not be made until after the governor makes the two regular appointments this spring.

Secondly, as you recall at the last meeting of this Board, the Board voted a change in the bylaws to allow the election of a chair-elect, at this February meeting. Our thinking was that this would allow for a smoother transition of leadership which takes place at the end of the April Board meeting. The Committee on Trusteeship is charged with overseeing this chair election process, and to that a working group was established, comprised of our Chairman Gil Cloyd, Jo Ann Davidson, John Ong and myself. We met a few times, talked on the phone, worked back and forth, interacted with every member of this Board, just talking about a variety of things, and came up with three documents that we discussed in our meeting today. First is a description of the position of the chair of the Board of Trustees, second is a listing of the key qualities that we believe to be desirable in a Board Chair, and third a listing of the key challenges facing the University in the next few years, and we have talked about that.

We believe a process is now in place that can be used in subsequent years and will not have to be developed again. I hope that you all agree with that. In light of that conversation, and our discussion, the Committee on Trusteeship reviewed and discussed these documents, and agreed as to their pertinence for the task we have at hand. The responsibilities, the attributes and challenges of the individual that we would like to recommend to be our next Board Chair.

The Committee on Trusteeship unanimously recommends Leslie Wexner to be our next chair, to take effect after the end of our next meeting in April. This will provide for a two-month, approximately 60-day transition with Dr. Cloyd. It is the collective opinion of the Committee that Mr. Wexner possesses the attributes desirable for the next chair and has demonstrated them throughout his service to the Board and the University over several decades. He certainly meets the attributes that we have discussed and is extremely well qualified to meet the challenges that we face as a University in the next two to three years. This is a critical time in the history of the University, we all know that, in higher education and the financial pressures that we face, and the list goes on and on. We clearly are in some interesting and uncertain economic times in our nation's history. Mr. Wexner's business experience, his insistence on the kind of strategic thinking necessary to focus the efforts of the Board, and his unique ability to combine vision and reality, all speak to his exemplary qualifications for this position. Thanks to the extraordinary leadership this Board has enjoyed from the chairmanship of Judge Duncan when the make-up of the Board was expanded, and through the carefully reshaping of the Board Committees and operations most skillfully orchestrated by Dr. Cloyd, who has been a fabulous chair, this Board is now fully prepared to support the institution and the inspirational leadership of Mr. Wexner as well, working very closely with President Gee.

Mr. Wexner's staunch support of the implementation of the new governance practices this Board has enacted over the past three years, that we have come to call the Statement of Expectations, that has been approved by this Board well over a year ago, as well as, I have said, his leadership and experience makes him uniquely qualified to lead the Board at this time. On behalf of the Committee on Trusteeship, Mr. Chairman, I make a motion that Mr. Wexner be elected our next Chair, and we will turn it over to you for a second and for discussion.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you, Mr. McFerson. Is there a second?

Mr. Brass:

Mr. Chair, I would like to second Mr. McFerson's motion, and I would move that we by acclamation vote Mr. Wexner in as our next chair.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much. Let me just note and comment that I want to thank the Committee on Trusteeship for some excellent work here and I think you have presented a very thoughtful candidate, a wonderful candidate, in that regard. I move that we have a voice vote. All in favor of accepting the recommendation from the Committee on Trusteeship that Mr. Leslie Wexner will serve as our next chair, seconded by Mr. Brass, all in favor please say aye. Opposed? It is unanimous, Mr. Wexner, congratulations.

February 6, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Mr. Wexner, I can't tell you how happy I am to have a man of your vision, your skill, your experience and also very, very importantly passion for this University, chair this Board. I know you will be a key leader as we move from the excellence to eminence goal that President Gee has identified, so congratulations.

That concludes the work on the Committee on Trusteeship. I would now like to move to the Medical Affairs Committee.

Mr. Brass:

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This morning we had a very full agenda as it relates to the Medical Affairs Committee. Dr. Steve Gabbe brought us up to speed with the number of awards that are continuing to be given out to our faculty. It is really neat what is happening within our Medical Center. I want you to be aware of a couple of major thrusts that we are embarking on. One is a comprehensive ambulatory care study for our entire Medical Center throughout our community. We currently operate 40 ambulatory care sites. We have engaged McKenzie as it relates to helping us develop this ambulatory care site. You will be hearing more about that as we proceed with that program.

The second major thrust that we are working on and we will continue to work on over the next few months is taking a look at The Ohio State University's Physician Practice Plan, as to how we make sure that it is fully integrated into the Medical Center. There are a number of subcommittees that are working under Dr. Gabbe and Dr. Souba to help us with this.

We concentrated on quality, safety and patient satisfaction indexing. Under the direction of Steve Gabber, the Medical Center has reorganized a new cabinet for decision making, made up of 16 individuals, to streamline the decision making process, and I think that is very important.

Just recently we opened up a 20-bed unit in our emergency room. Normally I would not highlight something that small, but this is very critical. It basically gives the physicians and staff the opportunity to hold the patient and evaluate whether or not they really need to be admitted or not. It will decompress the tremendous load we have on the inpatient house as it relates to making sure we have a process that is reasonable for the patient.

Dr. Chip Souba highlighted five major recruitments that are underway right now, and we as a Board should be made aware of those; Radiation Oncology, the Nisonger Center, Anesthesiology, Pharmacology and the Neurosurgery area. I am happy to introduce today our latest recruit to The Ohio State University Medical System, Dr. Jason Calhoun, our new Chair of Orthopaedic Surgery, who joined us as of January. Welcome aboard. We have a double-win since his wife Karen, has joined us in the Department of Otolaryngology as an ENT surgeon as well. So welcome both Jason and Karen to our family.

We then discussed the scorecard. The scorecard as you know is tracking ProjectONE, one of the largest, if not the largest project the University has undertaken. I am happy to tell you the scorecard is looking good, even with these difficult economic times. I do not want us to get too optimistic because we are headed into some rough water yet, but the scorecard looks good.

The three things that we are really tracking are our days cash on hand, EBIDA, and our debt service coverage which are all green lights. That is good, and I tell the Board that Dr. Gabbe and others on the team are watching this very carefully and doing a very diligent job for us. I am also happy to tell you that in light of what is happening across the country in healthcare, our University is holding well on numbers. Now what do I mean by that? When we take a look at admissions, surgeries, ambulatory visits, and inpatient admissions, all of our numbers are up. That is important. We are now almost at the point of one million ambulatory visits a year; emergency running an excess 100,000, and admissions an excess of 55,000. Tremendous pressure is coming on our Medical Center, and that is why our new project is so important. We have to stay focused on that.

We also have to be very focused. The down side to that is in tough economic times, the indigent case load might go up, and we have a responsibility to take care of patients. We will continue to meet that responsibility, but we have got to watch our finances.

There are three items that are being brought forward. Three very exciting items that were approved today by the Medical Affairs Committee that were moved through the Fiscal Affairs Committee and are on our consent agenda today, and I would like to briefly discuss those.

The first one is the true beginning of ProjectONE taking off. It is the beginning of the beginning. In July, Means Hall will be demolished. It will start in July by removing asbestos and other things such as gasses that need to be removed from the building, and by the fall that building should be down. That is an important first step.

The second one is the very large MRI that is right next to Means Hall. It will be removed and is going to be preserved to be reused for research. In and of itself that does not sound like too much except when you hear the statistic - 32,000 tons of steel have to come out of the ground and be replaced somewhere else. It is a big project. The last is that South Cannon Garage will be coming down. That is the first of two projects that are on the consent agenda today, all of which are in the budget, all of which are in the scope.

The second project is one of magnitude, and that is the electrical service relocation project. A tremendous amount of utilities have to be moved and relocated. That project is also in the budget and is scheduled to start in July as well.

The third item on the consent agenda, which I believe is the one that will help us to continue to move upwards as it relates to the national prestige that our Medical Center is bringing to this University as a whole, is to complete the last three floors of our Biomedical Research Tower. Right now we have 450,000 square feet of research space for our Medical Center. This will add approximately 100,000 square feet of research space and will complete that building itself. We still will be short 300,000 – 400,000 square feet of space which we will have to continue to work toward as we continue to build the system. Today's consent agenda has $3 million in it to begin the design of those three floors, so that we can finish that project. Then the Medical Center will be bringing back the final recommendation for construction after the design and estimation is finished. Three very important projects coming forward today, and Mr. Chairman, that completes my report.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much Mr. Brass. Any questions or comments on the report?

Next we will have the report from the Development and Investment Committee.

Mr. Weiler:

I reported to the Committee our progress against our FY09 goal of $350 million. As of December 31, we were at $167 million in total activity or 48% of our goal. Our progress compared to last year at this same time, in overall activity, is 2% ahead of last year. Of note, we are 18% behind in cash receipts, mostly as a result of fewer gifts from foundations, which makes sense given the market conditions and what is occurring in our own endowment. Conversely, however, I reported that we are ahead in pledges or new commitments by 45%, mostly as a result of some significant new gifts, some of which were reported here today, including the wonderful gift by the Lowries. I did also report on a new fundraising initiative to support the President's commitment to our students and the University's Students First program for the next 18-24 months. We will have very targeted solicitation, both annual gifts and major gifts, to support the Students First program.

Finally the Committee approved three program funds, three research funds, nine scholarships, three named funds and five revisions to funds totaling $2.69 million. That concludes my report.

Mr. Hook:

Thank you Mr. Chairman and the Board. We had a spirited and lively discussion about the long-term investment pool during our meeting, in which we discussed the performance for the fiscal year; we are down 26.7% year to date. This places us right about at the average of the university and foundation world. It is unfortunately not an environment in which any one is doing well but we are working through it, and I think we are making changes as we go which are going to prove as very good and positive changes for the endowment as we move forward. We have continued to work toward adding additional diversification and to de-risk the portfolio by making changes. We are working on different strategies and themes in the portfolio that will benefit us as we go through this bottoming process and even possibly further deterioration in the market as opposed to hoping for the markets just to get better on their own. Many of our peer institutions are faced with severe liquidity problems at this point, and they have the inability to fund their contractual obligations, and those who have budgets that are dependent upon the endowment for 30% and 40% of the total budget are in much worse shape than we are. Not to take any celebration from that, but I think to say that we are in relatively much better shape than many of our peers, and we will continue to work toward that to make sure we continue to be in that position. Our liquidity management is taking a great deal of time and effort to make sure that we do not get caught without enough cash, without enough wherewithal to fund the things that we need to on the schedules we need to. We are very mindful of that.

We then went to a first reading of the new Asset Allocation Model, which we will be discussing with the Development and Investment Committee at the next meeting. It is a model that is designed to provide us more risk management, more liquidity management, and also the ability to be opportunistic, to find the good new opportunities as they come, and there are some even in this environment.

Lastly we also discussed a plan to combine the two endowment pools. Right now we have two separate pools, one that pays out at 4.5%, and one at 4%, and the concept of combining the pools and merging to one unified payout rate of 4.25%. Doing that at the same time that we do not inertly harm the recipients of the funds, and that we can make sure we continue to focus on taking care of those who need the money now as well as those who will be recipients in the future. That will end my report.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much. Any questions or comments from Board members on either the Development or Investment Committee Reports?

February 6, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Next I would like to have a report from the Academic Affairs and Student Life Committee.

Ambassador Ong:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. At the Committee's meeting in December 2007, Provost Alutto reviewed with us his plans for a comprehensive, bottoms-up strategic planning effort starting at the departmental and program level and going on to the college level and then to the level of the University as a whole. Today, a little bit more than a year later, the provost returned to give us a status report on that process. He began by reiterating that this is a completely new, different planning process that features more coordination and more analytical input than any planning process that has ever been part of the University in the past. He specifically reiterated that this process explicitly requires the aligning of the University Board of Trustees, college and departmental goals, so that our whole strategic planning process, top-down and bottom-up is consistent. All of the college strategic plans will have five components: facilities; fiscal resources; technology resources; development resources, which is to say funding; and talent components, having to do with the retainer and attraction of talented faculty. These components are to be driven by strategic initiatives that are clearly articulated from the plans, and those initiatives in turn are to be shaped in light of President Gee's well known six overarching goals for the University. The provost explained the thorough review and endorsement process that is required for each college plan. That process at the end of the day requires the sign-off not only of the college dean but also of the college fiscal officer, something that was not required in past planning processes, in order to assure the alignment of strategies with resources. All the plans should be ready for endorsement by the end of winter quarter which is not very far away. The provost provided updates on the progress that each college has made toward putting its strategic plan in final shape. The health sciences college's plans are almost complete at this date with work in some of the professional and arts and sciences colleges but the provost indicated that he was highly confident, that while the whole process is a little behind schedule, that it is being done well. In accordance with the rules of the game established at the outset, a number of University level initiatives including the academic facilities planning process, the chief information officer's strategic plan, and the Capital Campaign will influence the final version of these college plans. There are a number of other University-wide initiatives that support the planning processes, among these are the doctoral and undergraduate program quality assurance process, which our committee reviewed last year; the development of the new centers for innovation and innovation groups; and the evolution of the Federation of the Arts and Sciences Colleges.

Following that report Mr. Kaplan introduced Dr. Javaune Adams-Gaston - who has been, for the lengthy term of one month, Ohio State's new vice president for Student Life. She already has a vision of Student Life, and this initial presentation on her part indicated to the committee how she saw her job and what she intended her priorities to be, so that we could make input. She made a very impressive presentation to us, emphasizing that she is going to concentrate initially in four areas. One, providing a seamless quality experience for students, something that will require her to carry out extensive dialogues with students across every college in the University. Secondly, she is going to work on preparing students for civic leadership, including state, national and world-wide as their careers develop, including intensive effort on her part to establish internship programs both here in the United States and, she hopes, eventually abroad. She feels that there needs to be a careful look at the metrics for student achievement in leadership capacities, and she is going to try and develop a metric framework for that purpose. Thirdly, she wants to create experiences for the students that embrace diversity and, as she said, include not simply emphasizing tolerance, but appreciation for diversity. Finally she wants to spend a lot of time on expanding career development experiences for students, striving to find the right niche for them and to encourage them to identify their interests and to assess their potential for careers. These areas of concentration are going to allow for additional focus on second-year students, we all know about sophomores, greater integration of international students, emphasis on living, learning kinds of environments throughout the University, and broader opportunities for students to consider career, graduate and professional school opportunities.

The balance of our agenda had to do with the various items under the auspices of our committee that are in the consent agenda for this meeting. I did ask the Provost to talk specifically about one of those items, which is the approval by this Board of two reports that The Ohio State University needs to submit at the request of the University System of Ohio, or the Board of Regents, later this year. Both reports require Board of Trustees approval, but because the deadlines fell between our meetings in the fall and this meeting of the Board, action is being requested today.

The two reports are among your papers. They are responsive and accurately responsive to the questions and requirements of the Board of Regents. However, as the provost reviewed with us we have certain concerns about the merit of the metrics that are being chosen about the relevance of some of the information, and we assured the Committee that as our dialogue with the chancellor continues, we will be airing these problems on our part in the hopes that we can persuade him that some alteration in the requirements for these reports will be allowed in the future.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much Ambassador. Any questions or comments for the Ambassador on the Committee report?

Thank you very much. We will now have a report from the Fiscal Affairs Committee.

Ms. Davidson:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. The Fiscal Affairs Committee has a series of reports that come to us on a regular basis, so we try to track capital projects and expenditures and where we are on line financially. That was the case at this particular meeting. You all have copies of those reports in your Trustee book, but I am just going to briefly run through some highlights of a couple of those reports.

The first was the Mid-Year Financial Report. Frankly it was a pretty good report considering where things are in the world today. Our enrollments were up 1.5%. There is a little bit of concern on the Newark Campus, and obviously we have touched base with them. Their enrollment is down somewhat. It appears to be impacted by students transferring much more quickly from the Newark Campus to our campus here which would affect obviously their enrollment numbers.

On to the Medical Center report... you already heard the good news from Alan Brass and his report. In regards to State support and looking at the current fiscal year that we are in, FY 09, obviously we have had the tuition freeze and that commitment has been made by the state, there are some of our line items that were impacted by two cuts, and we have been working to try to resolve those problems. Other than that we will just be cautious as we finish out this fiscal year from now to June 30.

President Gee already reported the good news about the Governor's proposal as far as funding for the next biennium budget in the state of Ohio which would be a freeze for the 2009 year in a voluntary tuition limit on our part at 3.5% for the following year. There will still be line items that will be impacted in the budget, there will be some decreases in, and so we will be following that. Two cautions on the budget as always is that it must be adopted by the legislature, and secondly that it is based upon about $3.4 billion of the Federal Stimulus Package, that is not yet finalized at the congressional level.

Investments, obviously along with everyone else, we took a loss of about 27% in our long-term investments. I know the Development and Investment Committee was discussing that today. We keep an eye on where our auxiliaries are. Obviously Athletics and the Blackwell are both down, somewhat, and are both taking steps to address that particular issue. Wonderful news regarding the bond sale: a 20-year long-term bond sale at 3.72% interest rate. Congratulations to our people in the Treasurer's Office who helped to negotiate that. That is really good news. Overall, looking at this report, you would have to say that at the mid-year our financial report is stable for the University.

Bill Shkurti mentioned some things that we need to keep an eye on out there, and where we want to focus. First, obviously number one, are on our students, to be sure they are not negatively impacted and that they are still able to keep up with their studies here; continue to monitor the Health System, which we are doing obviously under Alan's leadership; preserve our liquidity, which is very important for the University right now; restructure our investment portfolio which you heard Mr. Hook speak about. These are our remaining 2009 concerns until we finish out this fiscal year and then obviously focusing on the next fiscal year. We will give a report back to you in April on the timeline on each of those particular issues.

I think that the bottom line on that is something that I underlined because I think it is something we always need to think of, and that was the report, as sound financial management is more important than ever.

We also had an annual financial benchmark report where we benchmarked the University against those universities that we normally benchmark against, but this year it was also benchmarked against the Board of Regents who put together a group of Universities that they benchmark. They are significantly different because there are different factors that go into developing those lists of benchmark institutions, but our revenues per student at Ohio State on the benchmarks that we normally use, is 14.8% below those benchmark universities for the Board of Regents - it is 4.8% below. I think one of the things that we want to stress here, is what a great value Ohio State is. We are ranked 41st in the nation. We are ranked first in the state of Ohio. Obviously our tuition is extremely low and the only thing that you can conclude on that is attending The Ohio State University is a great value right now and has always been a great value.

We had a capital projects report, where we go through and look at all the projects to see if they are on time and on budget. We made some changes a year ago in this process of what we bring to the Board, what comes to us for approval, so many of our projects are below $1 million, and they do not have to come to the Board now. Those that are over $10 million come to us, but what we have been able to do is to get those projects moving much more quickly because we do not need to plan time around a Board agenda when we can get each thing on the agenda. We have been able to complete 25% more projects in calendar year 2008; 1253 projects were completed on this campus in FY08. On the four major projects that we are looking at right now, the Library, the Student Union, the Student Academic Services Building and the Lane Avenue Parking Garage are all on time and on budget. I think it is good to report that for the Library the $30 million commitment that was made to be raised in outside funds has been realized and a great thank you to our Athletic Department for helping that take place. Overall, on all of the budget items, all of the capital projects that were over $10 million, 100% of them were on budget, and 83% of them were on time. I think that is a pretty good record. Bill Shkurti briefly spoke about how, just for the sake of transparency here, we will be changing over to a new student information services system. It is going to make a little bit of difference in the calculation of per credit hour fees. They will fluctuate a little bit as we move into that for fall quarter. It is not going to make more than a dollar or a dollar and a half difference to the fee structure, but since we made a commitment on fees at the beginning of the year, he wanted to be sure the Board was aware of that.

Mr. Chairman, we have three items on the consent agenda, the first item really is mostly composed of what Alan Brass reported, and that is moving ahead with the demolition of Means Hall and the South Cannon parking garage, and MRI removal, and some of the other beginning site preparation things that are necessary for Phase One of the Medical Center's ProjectONE.

The second one is the purchase of three pieces of property at Neil Avenue and West 10th. They are in our South Campus acquisition area.

The third was the increase in football, basketball and golf course fees, which Gene Smith presented to us. There would be $1.00 fee increase on football tickets, $1.00 increase on basketball tickets and very minimal increases for the golf course. I know you like to have comparison numbers, but they are very difficult to give you now because of the way some universities are pricing their tickets differently on premium games, but basically it would move us up somewhat to the top of the list in our own conference, in the Big 10 Conference, but in particularly in football, and in basketball it would bring us up to be tied with where Illinois is, and in the golf course fees, we are at the bottom rung of the ladder, so really that is a good comparison. If you have questions, we can get you a more detailed comparison of where we are. The Committee is recommending the adoption of those three items.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Ms. Davidson. One question I have just for clarification on the last item. The raise in the ticket prices are still just for non-student tickets, is that correct?

Ms. Davidson:

I should have mentioned that, no increase in the student fees. It is just for the non-student.

Dr. Cloyd:

Other questions on the Committee's report.

I want to make one comment before we move to the consent agenda. Ms. Davidson, I really do appreciate what your Committee has been doing and the overall administrative management of the University here in this very difficult time. No one can avoid any external difficulties, but to understand that the largest campus in this country continues to move ahead on all of its strategic priorities and has a good financial outlook, as good as what can happen in this case, does not happen without a lot of dedicated quality work by people, so thank you very much, and congratulations to all of you. Let's give them a round of applause.

I will now call on President Gee to present the Consent Agenda to the Board.

President Gee:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. I would like to second what you said, and that is the fact that we have had, and the Board would agree, and certainly from my perspective, have had an extraordinary several days together in which we have talked about the future of this University, in all of its aspects, in the most constructive, positive, and most strategic way. The folks that sit out here make all of this happen, and I am grateful to them, and I am grateful to you. The partnership that we have forged with this Board is an extraordinary one, and I feel very privileged to serve this University and to serve you. With saying that, we have 15 resolutions on the revised consent agenda. Item number 15 has been removed for further review, so we are seeking the approval for the following:

RESOLUTIONS IN MEMORIAM

Jean S. Bowers

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on November 29, 2008, of Jean Spooner Bowers, Professor Emeritus in the Department of Consumer Sciences.

Professor Bowers held a Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Idaho, a Master of Science degree from the University of Iowa, and a Doctor of Philosophy degree from the University of California-Davis. Professor Bowers was a professor of consumer economics in the Department of Family Resource Management (now the Department of Consumer Sciences) for 28 years. She also served the College of Home Economics as associate dean for research.

Dr. Bowers is most remembered for her leadership in developing a major in consumer services to prepare students for effective advocacy for consumers in the private and public sectors. Students from the consumer services major were sought after as interns in Ohio congressional offices. The Ohio House of Representatives marked her retirement from The Ohio State University with a special commendation of her leadership in preparing students and in consumer advocacy. She was an enthusiastic and effective teacher who expected much from her students and who provided strong support long after they completed their study at Ohio State. Her students continue her legacy of leadership in roles such as dean of a top-ranked college, director of a university research institute, faculty at leading institutions, and executive leadership in the private sector. Professor Bowers was also a revered mentor of young faculty in her department.

Professor Bowers was well-known as a leader in the field of consumer economics. She served her profession at the highest level. She was elected to two terms as president of the American Council on Consumer Interest; she provided leadership through a period of transition and growth and was recognized as a distinguished fellow of the organization. Professor Bowers' knowledge and experience in consumer advocacy and market interactions led to her election to the Board of Directors of Consumers Union.

February 6, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Jean S. Bowers its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to her family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

William W. Davis

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on November 1, 2008, of William Wiant Davis, Clinical Assistant Professor Emeritus in the College of Public Health.

Professor Davis pursued his undergraduate education at Marietta College and the University of Michigan and his medical degree from Vanderbilt Medical School. He worked as a pediatrician in Beckley, West Virginia, before entering the U.S. Army in December 1940. Upon termination of active duty in 1946, Dr. Davis practiced in Oak Hill and Parkersburg, West Virginia, until 1952. At that time he entered a residency at OSU in occupational health. He practiced in occupational health in the private sector until his retirement.

He also served as clinical assistant professor of preventive medicine at Ohio State, retiring with emeritus status in December 1981. Former students still remember Dr. Davis as a marvelous clinician and teacher.

Dr. Davis was active in the Army Reserve from 1952-69 as commanding officer and brigadier general of the 2291st General Hospital, and was awarded the Legion of Merit on retirement.

Dr. Davis was very involved in medical professional associations. He was past president of the Franklin County Heart Association and a member of the Columbus Academy of Medicine, Ohio State Medical Association, American Medical Association, and the Candby Robinson Society. He was also a fellow of the American Occupational Medical Association.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor William W. Davis its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Arline M. Rollins

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on November 11, 2008, of Arline M. Rollins, Assistant Professor Emeritus in the University Libraries.

Professor Rollins joined The Ohio State University as an instructor in 1971. Born in Louisiana in 1924, she earned two degrees at the University of Minnesota, first in English in 1950 and then in library science in 1951. Her professional career included positions as a librarian at Michigan State University, at Fisk University, and at Miami University before she came to The Ohio State University.

While at OSU, Ms. Rollins served in the position of head of the West Campus Learning Resources Center in Pressey Hall. She took special interest and satisfaction in working with undergraduates and had a position of leadership there until the Center was consolidated with the Undergraduate Library in Sullivant Hall in 1986. Until her retirement in 1990, Professor Rollins contributed much to the planning and the teaching of classes in OSU's Library Instruction Program, one of the leading programs in the country in educating students in using library resources for academic success.

February 6, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

As a professional librarian, Ms. Rollins served on committees of the OSU Libraries and was active also in the American Library Association and the Association of College and Research Libraries (ACRL). There, she was a member of a committee that developed "Guidelines for Audio Visual Services in Academic Libraries." Her contributions to scholarship in librarianship included co-authorships of Index to Black Newspapers; an article concerning OSU's Library Instruction Program in the Journal of Academic Librarianship; and a book-length bibliography, Single-Parent Children, the Growing Minority: A Research Guide.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Arline M. Rollins its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to her family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Morgan E. Shipman

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on December 4, 2008, of Morgan E. Shipman, Professor Emeritus in The Michael E. Moritz College of Law.

Professor Shipman earned his A.B. and J.D. degrees at the University of Texas. Graduating first in his law school class, Professor Shipman practiced as an associate at Covington and Burling in Washington, D.C. from 1958-63 and again from 1968-69. He served in the Office of Program Planning of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission from 1963-65 and as an assistant professor of Law at Harvard Law School from 1965-68. Professor Shipman joined the faculty at The Ohio State University College of Law in 1969, where he served as the John W. Bricker Professor in Law, a title that he held until his retirement in 2004. He continued to teach at the College as an Emeritus Professor until his death.

An extraordinary teacher, Professor Shipman was selected on five different occasions as the "Outstanding Professor of the Year" by that year's graduating class. Upon his retirement in 2004, the Student Bar Association renamed the award the Morgan E. Shipman Outstanding Professor of the Year award. The Ohio State University honored Professor Shipman, in 1971, by naming him a recipient of the University's Distinguished Teaching Award.

Professor Shipman's scholarship and teaching focused on business law. During his career, he taught courses in Business Association, Torts, Corporate Finance, Securities Regulation, Accounting for Lawyers, and Tax. He also played an important role in legislative reform of business law, particularly in Ohio.

Professor Shipman was a vibrant member of the College community, serving on numerous committees, and served from 1980-97 part-time counsel to the Columbus law firm of Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Morgan E. Shipman its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Eugene J. Watts

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on November 11, 2008, of Eugene J. Watts, Associate Professor Emeritus in the Department of History.

February 6, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Professor Watts was born in October 1942 in St. Louis, Missouri. He graduated from Knox College in 1964. He received his M.A. degree from Emory University in 1965 and his Ph.D. degree in history from Emory University in 1969. He taught at Indiana University for a year before coming to Ohio State in 1972, where he taught until he retired in December 2000.

Professor Watts introduced to Ohio State courses on "Quantitative Methods in Historical Research and Analysis" and "The History of American Police and Criminal Justice." He also regularly taught a course on recent U.S. history. These were also the areas of his research, which bore fruit in the publication of numerous articles in prestigious journals and a monograph, The Social Bases of City Politics: Atlanta, 1865-1903 (1978). At the time of his death he was researching a book tentatively entitled "Damn Good Copper: The St. Louis Police in the Twentieth Century." In recognition of his scholarship, Professor Watts was the recipient of fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the American Council of Learned Societies.

In 1984, Professor Watts successfully ran as a Republican for the Ohio State Senate from the 16th District. He was continuously reelected to the office until 2000, when he was no longer eligible to run because of term limitations. During these years, Professor Watts adjusted his position with the University to part-time to accommodate his Senate duties. Many a day when the legislature was in session, he could be seen darting out of the classroom at the sound of the bell to rush downtown for a debate or vote. As a state senator, Professor Watts did much to promote Ohio State, and highlighted his ties to the University with his yearly challenge to his state senatorial counterpart in Ann Arbor. Whichever senator represented the losing side in the Ohio State vs. Michigan game had to publicly sing the opponent's fight song. Professor Watts timed his retirement from the University to coincide with his departure from the Ohio Senate.

Professor Watts served in the U.S. Army in Vietnam and rose to the rank of captain. He was subsequently active and held leadership position in several veteran organizations.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Eugene J. Watts its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Sidney E. White

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on September 6, 2008, of Sidney E. White, professor emeritus in the School of Earth Sciences.

Professor White earned his Bachelor of Science degree in geology from Tufts University in 1939, and his Masters degree from Harvard University in 1942, before joining the U.S. Navy. During WWII, he served as a photographic intelligence officer on numerous aircraft carriers in the Pacific Ocean. Following WWII he worked with the U.S. Geological Survey and later taught at Tufts University before receiving his Ph.D. degree from Syracuse University. He joined The Ohio State University faculty as an assistant professor in 1951 and retired as professor emeritus in 1985.

Professor White was known for his well-prepared and interesting classroom presentations and his considerate rapport with students. He was "...so inspiring a source of encouragement and intellectual stimulation that many undergraduates made a special effort to enroll in his section of Introduction to Geology." He received the OSU Alumni Award for Distinguished Teaching in 1966 and in the same year he was recognized as an outstanding teacher at the University of Colorado where he had been a visiting associate professor. It was not uncommon for OSU alumni in central Ohio who had taken Dr. White's introductory course to praise his teaching many years after he had retired.

Dr. White was raised on the glaciated landscapes of New England where he began his quest to understand the nature and development of landforms, first at Tufts University under Robert Nichols and later at Harvard with Kirk Bryan. His knowledge of geomorphic features was enhanced during service in the U.S. Navy and, although his research began in glacial geology and geomorphology, he expanded his interests to glaciers and periglacial landforms and processes after participating in OSU expeditions to the margin of the Greenland Ice Sheet in 1953 and 1955. Dr. White's research on glacial geology, glaciers, and rock glaciers took him to volcanic terranes in Mexico and Colombia, to Swedish Lapland, the Swiss Alps and the Colorado Rockies between 1949 and the 1980s. Professor White truly loved the mountains, which were his primary laboratory. In 1957 he began a long association with the University of Colorado and its mountain research station, where he spent many summers.

He was a member of both the Institute of Arctic and Alpine Research at the University of Colorado and the Institute of Polar Studies (now Byrd Polar Research Center) at OSU. He held several offices in the Geomorphology Division (Quaternary Geology and Geomorphology) of the Geological Society of America and was a co-founder and officer of the Eastern Section, Association of Geology Teachers in 1950 which later became part of the National Association of Geology Teachers. In addition to his research papers and reviews, his contributions to USGS publications, and his editorial role with the Journal of Arctic and Alpine Research, he contributed to The McGraw-Hill Encyclopedia of Science and Technology and was a consultant to publishers of pre-college textbooks. He continued to contribute to educational and scientific publications many years after retirement.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Sidney E. White its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT AND PROVOST

Dr. G. Gil Cloyd, Chair
The Honorable John D. Ong
210 Bricker Hall
CAMPUS

Dear Gil and John:

Enclosed are two reports requested by the Board of Regents. Both require action by the Board of Trustees.

The deadline for the first document, the university's Institutional Accountability Report, was November 30, 2008. This report—and the concerns raised in it—require formal Board of Trustees approval. Because of the Regents' deadline, the report was submitted without Board action. In my November 26 cover letter to Chancellor Fingerhut, however, I make it clear that the report will be brought to the Board for appropriate disposition at its February 5-6, 2009, meetings.

The second enclosure is a report on the condition of Ohio State's facilities and technology infrastructure. As was the case for the Institutional Accountability Report, the Board of Regents has once again required a report with a deadline—here, December 31, 2008—that does not allow for Board reaction prior to submission. As you will see, I explain in the cover letter that the Board's next meetings will take place on February 5-6, 2009, and that amendments may well follow.

With your concurrence, I will forward this preliminary version of the facilities and technology infrastructure report to the Board of Regents by the December 31 deadline, along with that caveat.

I propose that we place both reports on the February 5 agenda of the Academic Affairs and Student Life Committee, with copies to go to the full Board for inclusion on the February 6 consent agenda. Please let me know if this process strikes you as appropriate.

Institutional Accountability Report,

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT AND PROVOST

November 26, 2008

Mr. Eric D. Fingerhut, Chancellor
Ohio Board of Regents
30 East Broad Street, 36th floor
Columbus, OH 43215-3414

Dear Eric:

With this letter, I am submitting The Ohio State University's Institutional Accountability Report for the University System of Ohio Strategic Plan. As instructed, we have included our main and regional campuses in our projections.

The numbers we have provided represent good faith estimates based on past trends, our ongoing strategic planning efforts, and the current economic climate. Several sets of projections in particular require some additional explanation:

- Metric 6: Improvement in actual graduation rate over expected graduation rate

Student ability is the primary component that predicts the expected graduation rate, and institutional effort is a factor that accounts for much of the difference between the expected and the actual graduation rates. Ohio State has admitted increasingly better prepared students over the past decade, and we have provided support to help them graduate. Our success in this arena is documented by U.S. News and World Report's "America's Best Colleges," which reports Ohio State to have an actual graduation rate seven percentage points higher than our expected rate.

The USO calculates the expected graduation rate differently, taking into account the institution's current efforts to help their students graduate. Improvement in this metric thus measures an institution's additional efforts over the next six years. For institutions such as Ohio State that are currently making significant efforts and are recruiting better and better prepared students, thus raising the expected rate, maintaining the current difference between actual and expected rates will take considerable work. The projected improvement levels of zero percent additional difference between our expected and actual rates understate Ohio State's commitment, effort, and success to helping our students graduate.

- Metric 8: Percent of facilities in satisfactory condition or needing only minor rehabilitation

Based on existing data in the OBR Higher Ed Information System (HEI), Ohio State's Educational and General (E&G) space in satisfactory condition or needing only minor rehabilitation, as of fall 2006, is 70.7%. This existing baseline number, derived from data that the university has reported to OBR, is based on informal building evaluations and information on recent renovation projects in specific facilities.

The university is currently engaged in an Academic Facilities Plan (AFP) initiative, which will provide building assessment information allowing for a more accurate, data-driven baseline building condition value. Based on preliminary data from the AFP study, the university is anticipating that our baseline percentage for facilities in satisfactory condition or needing only minor rehabilitation will decrease. With this preliminary data in mind, we are making the assumption that Ohio State's existing facilities condition baseline is no better than the University System of Ohio average of 64%.

Since, in about a year from now, the final results of the AFP study may yield a different baseline number, we would like to reserve the option to update the university's baseline at that time.

- Metric 9: Total size of endowments and foundations per FTE (Annual)

While calculating size of endowment per FTE can be helpful in linking endowment-building success at the system level to success in the same arena at the institution level, looking at this metric over time at a single institution can be misleading. Current students, which make up the FTE of the denominator in this equation, rarely - if ever - have an impact on the size of a university's endowment.

Ohio State's endowments and foundations per FTE drop from the baseline level to our projection in 2008-09. This is not due to a drop in total endowments and foundations, but rather to our increased success in retention of our students, and thus a higher FTE. As we project for the six-year period and anticipate a major fundraising campaign, the endowments and foundations per FTE climbs and then passes the baseline.

- Metrics 10 and 16: Federally and industrially financed research spending per capita-national rank

With regard to these particular metrics, we are concerned with the USO per capita national rank targets, rather than with our own institutional goals. Based on the 2006 per capita funding for the states that are at the levels the USO has targeted for Ohio, and holding activity in all other states constant, federally financed research spending in Ohio would need to increase by 19% in five years and by 51% in ten years to achieve the USO targets. Industrially financed research spending would need to increase by 57% in the first five years and by 93% in ten. We suggest that the USO work with a task group of senior staff from research and institutional research offices to identify states where dramatic increases may have occurred, and to see if there are lessons to be learned from any such states.

I have discussed this report with the chair of our Board of Trustees, and it will be on the agenda for our next Board of Trustees meeting, February 5-6, 2009. I look forward to discussing our projections with you. Please let me know if I can provide any additional information.

Sincerely,

Joseph A. Alutto

Technical Notes to the Accountability Report for The Ohio State University

Projections for several of the metrics included in the USO Institutional Accountability Report for The Ohio State University are best understood in light of the following information:

- Metric 5: Percent of total degrees awarded to Black and Hispanic students
Below are listed the projected numerator and denominators for this metric:

Baseline Level	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14
1175	1232	1244	1293	1307	1361	1413
14,291	14,039	15,079	15,209	15,379	15,549	15,699

- Metric 6: Improvement in actual graduation rate over expected graduation rate
Student ability is the primary component that predicts the expected graduation rate, and institutional effort is a factor that accounts for much of the difference between the expected and the actual graduation rates. Ohio State has admitted increasingly better prepared students over the past decade, and we have provided support to help them graduate. Our success in this arena is documented by US News and World Reports "America's Best Colleges," which reports Ohio State to have an actual graduation rate seven percentage points higher than our expected.

The USO calculates the expected graduation rate differently, taking into account the institution's current efforts to help their students graduate. Improvement in this metric thus measures an institution's additional efforts over the next six years. For institutions such as Ohio State that are currently making significant efforts and are recruiting better and better prepared students, thus raising the expected rate, maintaining the current difference between actual and expected rates will take considerable work. The projected improvement levels of zero percent additional difference between our expected and actual rates understates Ohio State's commitment, effort, and success to helping our students graduate.

- Metric 8: Percent of facilities in satisfactory condition or needing only minor rehabilitation
Based on existing data in the OBR Higher Ed Information System (HEI), OSU's Educational and General (E&G) space in satisfactory condition or needing only minor rehabilitation, as of Fall 2006, is 70.7%. This existing baseline number, derived from data that the University has reported to OBR, is based on informal building evaluations and information on recent renovation projects in specific facilities.

The University is currently engaged in an Academic Facilities Plan (AFP) initiative, which will provide building assessment information allowing for a more accurate, data-driven baseline building condition value. Based on preliminary data from the AFP study, the University is anticipating that our baseline percentage for facilities in satisfactory condition or needing only minor rehabilitation will decrease. With this preliminary data in mind, we are making the assumption that OSU's existing facilities condition baseline is no better than the University System of Ohio average of 64%.

Since, in about a year from now, the final results of the AFP study may yield a different baseline number, we would like to reserve the option to update the University's baseline at that time.

- Metric 9: Total size of endowments and foundations per FTE (Annual)
 While calculating size of endowment per FTE can be helpful in linking endowment building success at the system level to success in the same arena at the institution level, looking at this metric over time at a single institution can be misleading. Current students, which make up the FTE of the denominator in this equation, rarely - if ever - have an impact on the size of a university's endowment.

Ohio State's endowments and foundations per FTE drop from the baseline level to our projection in 2008-09. This is not due to a drop in total endowments and foundations, but rather to our increased success in retention of our students, and thus a higher FTE. As we project for the six-year period and anticipate a major fundraising campaign, the endowments and foundations per FTE climbs and then passes the baseline.

- Metric 12: Tuition and fees weighted average of bachelor's degree offered on a community college or university regional campus
 We have projected the tuition and fee expense of completing a four year degree at OSU-Lima, OSU-Mansfield, OSU-Marion, or OSU-Newark. These projections do not include the cost of completing a degree at ATL.

Graduating:	Baseline:	2008-07	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14
Fees Yr 1		4416	5310	5884	5884	5964	6039	6435
Fees Yr 2		4977	5884	5884	5964	6039	6435	8553
Fees Yr 4		6240	6240	6540	7011	7431	7876	8352

The above shows the cost of a four-year baccalaureate degree earned on a regional campus. The numbers assume that the degree is granted in the year listed, beginning with 2008-09. It assumes that students receive the Access Credit of 576 per year for two of the four years, and that the Access Credit does not increase.

- Metric 14: Percentage of first time enrollees below age 21 with equivalent of one semester or more of college credit earned during high school*
 Below are listed the projected numerator and denominators for this metric:

Baseline Level	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14

8383	8960	9160	9160	9160	9160	9160

- Metric 15: Percentage of bachelor's degree recipients with at least one year of credit from a community college*
 Below are listed the projected numerator and denominators for this metric:

Facilities and Technology Infrastructure Report,

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT AND PROVOST

December 30, 2008

Ms. Donna Alvarado, Chair
Mr. Bruce R. Beeghly, Vice Chair
Mr. James M. Tuschman, Secretary
Ohio Board of Regents
30 East Broad Street
36th Floor
Columbus, OH 43215-3414

Dear Ms. Alvarado, Mr. Beeghly, and Mr. Tuschman:

Enclosed is The Ohio State University's preliminary response to your November 7, 2008, request for information on our institution's facilities and technology infrastructure. Our Board of Trustees will not meet until February 5-6, 2009, and will act on the report at that time. If amendments are requested, I will forward a revised copy of the report as soon as possible after the Board's action.

Meanwhile, I would like to draw your attention to four conclusions in this preliminary report that I believe are especially compelling.

- As the state's national research university, Ohio State bears a special responsibility to educate for leadership in the STEM disciplines at all levels of the university curriculum. At the present time, however, our facilities do not optimally support this state objective, despite a considerable investment of university resources. Though we do not anticipate a need for additional facilities going forward, we do have demonstrated need for better facilities.
- Our capital planning efforts are challenged by the absence of facilities assessments and deferred maintenance metrics that are verifiable and consistent with general industry standards. Capital planning is further compromised by Ohio's requirement that a multi-prime model be applied in facilities construction.
- The need for new technologies—critical to Ohio's educational, workforce development, and research goals—has increased the cost of classroom space.

- To fulfill the goals detailed in the Board of Regents' Strategic Plan for Higher Education, Ohio State may need the state's largest investment in facilities and technology because of our comprehensiveness and our land grant mission.

I hope the enclosed document responds to your needs as you prepare the Second Report on the Condition of Higher Education in Ohio. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have questions or require additional detail. I will be back in touch with you following the February meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Introduction.

As Ohio's national research university, Ohio State serves the needs of our state in all matters of post-secondary education, including traditional higher education, continuing education, and workforce development. Accordingly, Ohio State is committed to leading the changes necessary to accomplishing the goals in the Board of Regents' Strategic Plan for Higher Education. As is the case for every college and university in Ohio, opportunities for and challenges to our contributions to the strategic plan are conditioned by a growing number of factors, including the need for facilities enhancement, the budgetary implications of facilities upgrades, and the expansion of our technology infrastructure. Our local conditions are a microcosm of State of Ohio conditions. Based upon our comprehensiveness and land grant mission, however, Ohio State may require the largest investment in these three areas to fulfill the Regents' objectives.

This report highlights these areas of opportunity and challenge at The Ohio State University.

1. Condition of Facilities.

The Columbus campus and four regional campuses collectively house 864 buildings. The replacement cost of these facilities' 33 million gross square feet is estimated to be $6.7 billion. The average age of Education and General buildings (as defined by POM and the State of Ohio) is nearly 38 years. From experience, Ohio State expects its facilities to have a 67-year life cycle. (See Figures 1 and 2 for data on facilities usage.)

Based on data in the OBR Higher Ed Information system, as of fall 2006 Ohio State's Education and General space in satisfactory condition or needing only minor rehabilitation was 71 percent. This baseline number is based on informal building evaluations and information on recent renovation projects in specific facilities. Ohio State is currently engaged in an Academic Facilities Plan initiative that will provide data-driven building information that is more accurate than both our earlier assessments and the State of Ohio's estimates. This initiative provides for a condition assessment and a building functionality/utility assessment of every building. Based on preliminary data, Ohio State anticipates that its baseline percentage for facilities in satisfactory condition or needing only minor rehabilitation will decrease, thus indicating that more of our buildings need major repairs than suggested by the baseline. When this study is concluded in 2009, we will have far more precise knowledge of the condition of our facilities. For now, however, we are assuming that Ohio State's existing facilities condition baseline is no better than the University System of Ohio average of 64 percent.

These statistics reveal that, today, our facilities do not optimally support Ohio's higher education objectives. This is critical to an institution that produced more than 4,700 STEM graduates in 2006-07, a number that is projected to rise to 5,500 by 2013-14. Our unique role as the state's national research university calls on us to enhance STEM education for leadership in these crucial disciplines. Accordingly, Ohio State is focusing not only on undergraduate, but on Master's, PhD, and professional education. We are training the faculty of the future, just as we are training Ohio's future scientists. Nearly 700 of our PhD graduates from the past ten years are faculty or postdoctoral researchers at an Ohio institution of higher education.

Indeed, Ohio State is not planning to increase its Columbus campus undergraduate student enrollments substantially. Demographic realities underlie that decision: while the number of high school graduates increased by 9 percent from 2006-2009, that number is projected to fall by 10 percent over the next decade. This calls on all higher education institutions in Ohio—including Ohio State—to optimize the graduation success of their students.

The increase in the total number of enrollees and the largest improvement in Ohio State's graduation rates will come from our regional campuses, especially in light of the regionals' opportunities for workforce development and their focus on degree completion. Approximately 55 percent of students who start at our regional campuses complete a degree in the state. Efforts are under way to boost that percentage substantially.

It is also important to note that Ohio State is already contributing to the Board of Regents objectives with improved graduation and retention rates.

- Over the past ten years, the percentage of Ohio State freshmen who were retained to their sophomore year increased from 83 percent to 93 percent.
- Over the past five years, the percentage of Ohio State students who graduated within six years increased from 62 percent to 73 percent, and we are focused on further improving this graduation rate to 95 percent.

We would also like to point out that more Ohio State faculty are recognized by the nation's most prestigious scientific associations than any other university in Ohio. Some 130 current faculty members are members of the Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS), while 23 are members of the National Academy of Science, the National Academy of Engineering, or the Institute of Medicine.

Our increasingly well-retained undergraduates, our graduate and professional students, and our eminent faculty are often not well served by Ohio State facilities. To ensure that our teaching and research spaces are appropriate to all these users, such spaces must be maintained at a high level. We therefore do not anticipate a need for additional facilities, though there is demonstrated need for better facilities. The state's investment in capital facilities has eroded significantly over the past five biennia. The result is that our facilities are in less than optimal condition, despite a considerable investment of our own resources. Improving the quality of our teaching and research space will require still more significant capital investment.

2. Financing Facilities.

The State of Ohio capital decisions are biennial-based. Over the past two biennia we have begun planning in six-year cycles. The academic facilities studies that we have undertaken will enable us to develop scenarios for 15 to 20 years. While we will continue to project on a six-year cycle, such scenarios will provide sufficient long-term perspective to allow us to be responsive to changing conditions and priorities.

Due to years of decline in state funding, Ohio State now self-funds 80 percent of its capital construction, with some 20 percent of our capital funding provided by the state. To meet Ohio's goals of educating more students and increasing research and workforce development, Ohio State's rate of spending for new construction (building replacements and total building renovations) over the next 20 years is estimated to be at least $130 million per year. The rate of spending for facility renovation (not including total building renovations) over the next 20 years is estimated to be $92 million per year.

We are presently funded at a level of about $43 million per year for custodial, maintenance, and renovation and repair of facilities. Funding for roads and grounds is not included. Our rate of spending is approximately 20 percent higher than FY09 funding. As a result, Ohio State's rate needs to increase to $52 million per year and to be adjusted for inflation annually.

Utilities spending at present is approximately $66 million per year for purchased utilities. This rate must be adjusted annually to cover fuel cost increases for inflation. In addition, the Medical Center expansion and our plans to house increasing numbers of students on campus will increase the amount of conditioned building space on campus. A corresponding increase in purchased utilities is to be expected. All new construction and renovation will meet campus and state goals for energy efficiency and sustainability and will exceed HB 251 requirements.

As noted above, undergraduate enrollments on the Columbus campus are not expected to increase substantially. Therefore, the existing educational and general component of the physical plant will remain relatively constant in size. As facilities efficiencies increase with building renovations or replacements, energy usage is anticipated to diminish.

To reach the goal of "greener" buildings, Ohio State has committed to spending an additional 5 percent for new building and building renovation projects to ensure that energy and sustainability enhancements are included. This additional 5 percent is built into the estimated annual rate of spending for new buildings and renovations. Moreover, all future construction projects exceeding $4 million will be eligible for and will secure LEED Silver certification.

Primary challenges to Ohio State's capital planning efforts include:

- a lack of facilities assessments and deferred maintenance metrics that are verifiable and consistent with general industry standards; this challenge is particularly important because deferred maintenance liabilities may range upwards of $3 billion—this as a result of inconsistencies in standardized state metrics; and
- the Ohio requirement for constructing facilities using a multi-prime model, which costs taxpayers an additional 10 to 20 percent premium in construction costs.

Ohio State's current facilities focus must be on the elimination of deferred maintenance and on renewal and/or reuse to improve the quality of the university's teaching/learning and working environments. A major step in that direction would be the elimination of the multiple primes inefficiency. Allowing the university to choose the most cost-effective project delivery model would accelerate our effort to reduce the university's deferred maintenance backlog and provide facilities appropriate to the teaching/learning and research needs of our students and faculty members.

Still another solution to providing facilities that meet the state's goals of educating more students and increasing research and workforce development would be the selective allocation of state capital dollars to only those universities with demonstrated and validated plans to optimize the use of their current facilities. Such plans would be based on academic facilities analysis and strategic planning principles, including:

- prioritizing adaptive reuse
- addressing renewal and deferred maintenance liabilities
- address energy and sustainability issues
- enhancing trans-disciplinary collaboration
- promoting innovative teaching supported by the creative use of facilities
- ensuring academic and social integration

3. Technology.

Technology is relevant to Ohio's educational, workforce development, and research goals in numerous ways. For example:

- Webinars, webconferencing, video and voice annotation, and media-rich, socially-networked messaging will increasingly provide alternatives to face-to-face communication while creating archivable records of events.
- eLearning can enable educational goals—whether it is just-in-time training for technicians in the field or a degree program, training course, or professional certification program for adult learners extending their credentials.

- Recent advances in remote lab experimentation and telemedicine expand the availability of expertise that was formerly location-bound.
- Broadband technologies leverage economies of scale and help address economic divides by providing access where none previously existed.
- Expert systems can help learners plan their educational paths by providing means to simplify degree audits, course credit transfers, and matriculation agreements across state institutions. Similar systems can support career planning, referral, and placement.
- Advances in data analytics technologies can improve workforce trend analysis and forecasting at the state level.
- Social networking enables individuals to look for work, enhances recruiting, expedites reference checks, and enables the sharing of information across organizations.

Virtual classrooms, in combination with public spaces such as libraries, could be a powerful tool for expanding the education and skills of Ohioans. For example, virtual classes on household financial and records management, infection control, or even such routine information as how to properly read a prescription bottle could help build a more educated Ohio. Course management systems, learning outcomes assessment-related portfolios systems, inter-state university/college broad-band connectivity, and the World Wide Web can all support educating more Ohioans and expanding workforce development and research.

The Ohio State University has aggressively pursued technology-enhanced education as a way of extending its expertise to learners throughout the state. To cite but one example, the Fisher College of Business offers a technology-supported general business degree to the four regional campuses.

New technologies, of course, add new dimensions to the issue of academic space. First, the cost of classroom space has increased because today's classrooms require connectivity and projectors, interactive whiteboards, configurable furniture, etc. Hybrid courses move a portion of course contact hours into an eLearning format, reducing the number of face-to-face class meetings per course. The institution may then reclaim classroom space for other course sections or purposes. However, implementing a hybrid course model may bring its own costs and floor space requirements, such as new media production and personnel space to support course creation. In addition, technology-based learning has enhanced the desire for collaboration among students. Much is done virtually, but students also want to work together in small groups. So, while basic needs for classroom space change little, demand for additional small group space increases. Moreover, each of these "breakout rooms" should be provisioned with technologies to foster file sharing and collaborative work.

Technology impacts space in still other ways:

- Library stack space may be reduced or consolidated as access and preference for digital resources increase;
- Office space may be recovered as records and resources move from paper to digital formats and high-fidelity communication platforms expedite telecommuting; and
- Space dedicated to housing servers may be reduced through virtualization, cloud computing, and centralizing server support into high performance data centers.

Consolidating common services, shared development, and joint purchasing can be a means of using funds effectively and efficiently. Current examples of combined IT systems at Ohio State, statewide, and in the CIC demonstrate the value of centralization. At Ohio State, negotiated purchasing agreements with key vendors, server and application hosting, virtualization, and an increasingly centralized application infrastructure have provided economies of scale to the institution. The Third Frontier Network, OhioLINK, the Ohio Supercomputer Center, and purchasing agreements brokered by IUC stand as examples of particularly effective state-wide IT collaborations that have brought service and scale to all participating institutions. The shared digital repository currently under development in the CIC demonstrates the value of regional cooperation.

Conclusion.

The condition of our facilities, the financing of those facilities, and the need to expand our technology infrastructure are critical issues, especially in today's uncertain economic environment. The questions asked by the Regents for the Second Report on the Condition of Higher Education in Ohio are pertinent, and consistent with issues we are tackling at The Ohio State University.

Recognizing, for example, that our capital planning process was too narrowly focused and neither holistic nor visionary, we have made significant changes to that process. In the past, we traditionally renovated or constructed one building at a time in response to the needs of a particular college. We have now abandoned this college-centric approach because it leads to duplication, is inefficient, and reduces the impact we can have with today's limited funds.

Our capital resources, already diminished by a 40 percent decline in state capital dollars over the last ten years, are being further stressed by staggering inflation in construction costs and the end of life expectancy for infrastructure and building systems. Such a fiscal climate calls on us as never before to leverage our state and local funds as well as our development opportunities. To ensure that we use these leveraged funds most effectively, we have developed a comprehensive capital planning strategy that

In this new planning process, our facilities and technologies needs must be aligned with our colleges' strategic plan goals for programs, recruitment and enrollment targets, and cooperative initiatives. Those needs must also be aligned with our president's objectives with those of the vice presidents. As a result, the new planning process will allow us to provide adjacencies that increase interdisciplinary opportunities and better utilize current space. Projects deemed to be critical will be those that have a high academic priority, address major facility conditions, and improve space functionality and use. It is important to note that Ohio State has implemented a performance enhancement strategy to assess and evaluate the success of university leadership in achieving their planning objectives.

Overall and in the long-term, these new approaches will redefine how Ohio State manages its resources and, so will promote sustainability. They will also lead to a more responsible stewardship of our resources, allowing us to provide our students, faculty, and staff with the most appropriate facilities in optimum condition, and with the technologies that will support the goals of educating more Ohioans and expanding workforce development and research.

AMENDMENTS
OF
(MHCS)

SUMMARY

The MHCS Board of Directors has approved the proposed changes to the Code of Regulations, which is subject to the approval of the University's Board of Trustees. These changes are intended to expand the breadth and depth of expertise represented on the Medical Advisory Board.

In MHCS's effort to better serve its client base of faculty, staff, and students and potential new customers, these changes are intended to increase the representative knowledge of its membership which will help provide the best in the management of health care services by strengthening the opportunities for further collaborative partnerships.

The changes also would delete the additional requirement that changes to the MHCS Regulations and Articles of Incorporation must be approved by the Board of Trustees. This change is consistent with the plans to position MHCS to operate more effectively. In accordance with the Policy on Affiliated Entities adopted by this Board in 2008, there will be a memorandum of understanding between the University and MHCS. Therefore, it is appropriate that the change to eliminate the additional requirement for this Board to approve changes to the MHCS governance documents would take effect upon execution of that MoU detailing the relationship between the two entities.

This document contains amendments to the Code of Regulations as requested by the Office of Human Resources and the Board of Managed Health Care Systems, Inc. The amendments were formally approved by vote of the MHCS Board at the May 2008 meeting.

These amendments are respectfully submitted for approval by the Board of Trustees.

PURCHASE OF REAL PROPERTY

THREE PARCELS
NE CORNER NEIL AVENUE AND W. TENTH AVENUE
COLUMBUS, OHIO 43201

Location and Description

The University is presented with the opportunity to purchase real estate located at 1618-1624 Neil Avenue, 1630 Neil Avenue, and 250-252 W. Tenth Avenue, Columbus, Ohio 43201. The properties are located on the east side of Neil Avenue north of W. Tenth Avenue, adjacent to other properties owned by the University. The parcels are contiguous to Student Life's Younkin Success Center. The properties are located in the South Campus Acquisition Area.

The property being purchased contains three parcels having 78' of frontage on Neil Avenue with an average depth of 150', containing 0.3 acres, improved with a two-story leased commercial building containing approximately 13,000 SF. The properties have been appraised by two MAI appraisers, Ralph Berger & Associates and Nash-Wilson Associates, with their appraisal reports indicating values between $3,116,000 and $3,125,000. The negotiated purchase price for the property is $3,150,000. The properties are owned by Nurtur Property Holdings, LLC, Nurtur Property 1630 LLC, and Nurtur Property 252 LLC, all related entities.

Use of the Property

It is the intention of the University to acquire this strategic property and continue to lease the building to its current tenant, AVEDA Institute, for the five years remaining on their lease. Rental income from the property will be applied to principal and interest payments needed to amortize bonds until a thorough assessment of University needs can be completed. Eventually, the longer term plan would be to remove the structures to provide for new construction to meet the University needs.

(APPENDIX XXIX)

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY BOARD OF TRUSTEES
FISCAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

February 6, 2009

TOPICS: Football and Men's Basketball Ticket Prices
Golf Course Membership and Daily Green Fees

CONTEXT:

OSU's Department of Athletics is fully self-supporting and does not receive a University subsidy. The Department is facing increases in operating costs for next fiscal year, including utilities, financial aid and travel. A ticket price increase is necessary to meet these increased costs and remain financially stable. These proposed rates have been reviewed by the Athletic Council and the University.

Approval is requested today in order to meet printing deadlines for sending out donor ticket applications and golf course membership renewals at the beginning of March.

RECOMMENDATION:

- For Football Tickets – 2009 season – an increase of $1 per game for all ticket groups, except student season tickets. The student price will not increase.
- The $1 per game increase for all other ticket groups will be an increase of between 1.4% and 2.0%. (See Attachment 1)
- For Men's Basketball Tickets – 2009-2010 season – an increase of $1 per game for all ticket groups except student tickets. This is an increase of between 3.7% and 6.7%. The student price will not increase for 2009-2010. (See Attachment 1)
- For Golf Course Memberships and Green Fees – Calendar Year 2009 – a 5.7% increase is proposed for faculty/staff and alumni/affiliates membership dues. Student memberships and dues for children of members under 13 will increase by 1.8%. Members' children, 13 and over, will remain at the same price as last season. Daily green fees for all groups remain unchanged. The food and beverage minimum increases from $10 to $20 per month for six months of the year. A new annual tournament fee of $30 per member is proposed to fund membership tournament events during the year. (See Attachment 2)

CONSIDERATIONS:

Football Tickets:

- The student ticket price remains unchanged from the 2008 season and is at the target of approximately 50% of the public ticket cost.
- The proposed single game ticket price average is near the top of the Big Ten Conference, however, it remains below the premium game prices charged by other conference institutions.

Men's Basketball Tickets:

- The student ticket price remains unchanged from the 2008-2009 season and is at the target of approximately 50% of the public ticket price.
- Proposed single game ticket prices are in line with the top basketball programs at benchmark universities.

81 Golf Course Fees:

- Alumni/affiliate and faculty/staff membership fees are currently less than 60% and 55% respectively of the average 2008 membership for similar public courses in this area.

REQUESTED OF FISCAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE:

Approval.

Yvette McGee Brown

Yvette McGee Brown is president of the Center for Child and Family Advocacy at Nationwide Children's Hospital in Columbus.

Prior to her current role, she served as a judge in the Franklin County Court of Common Pleas, Division of Domestic Relations and Juvenile Court from 1993 to 2002. She was the first African American and the second woman to be elected to this court. As judge, she founded programs that continue to assist area young people today: SMART, a truancy and educational neglect prevention program, and the Family Drug Court.

A 1985 graduate of Ohio State's Moritz College of Law with an undergraduate degree from Ohio University, Judge McGee Brown has had a distinguished career focused on improving the lives of young people. As president of the Center for Child and Family Advocacy, she leads an effort that serves as a national model created to break the cycle of child abuse and family violence.

A collaboration between Nationwide Children's and the Columbus Coalition Against Family Violence, the center brings together police, prosecutors, child welfare social workers, prevention specialists, domestic violence advocates, and Nationwide Children's medical and therapeutic staff. As president of the center, Judge McGee Brown is responsible for the child abuse and behavioral health services at Nationwide Children's Hospital.

Her community commitment extends to many organizations. She is currently the chair of The Ohio State University Alumni Association Board of Directors and serves on the boards of directors of M/I Homes, Inc., Fifth Third Bank of Central Ohio, the Columbus Coalition Against Family Violence, and the Ohio Network of Child Advocacy Centers. She is the former chair of the United Way of Central Ohio and YWCA Columbus board of directors.

A native of Columbus, Judge McGee Brown is a 2008 inductee to the Ohio Women's Hall of Fame. She has been honored for her community service with the 2005 Distinguished Service Award from The Ohio State University, the William Oxley Thompson Alumni Award from The Ohio State University Alumni Association, the 2007-08 Moritz Public Service Award from Ohio State's Moritz College of Law, the Medal of Merit Alumni Award from Ohio University, the Champion of Children Award, and the YWCA Woman of Achievement Award.

RECIPIENTS OF HONORS

Charles K. Brain

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE

One of the world's leading paleontologists, Charles Brain is emeritus curator of the Transvaal Museum in Pretoria, South Africa. He served as director of the museum from 1968 to 1991, leading it to international recognition as the country's premier natural history museum.

Dr. Brain received BS degrees in geology and zoology in 1950 and a PhD in geology in 1957 from the University of Cape Town. During his subsequent career, his research moved across the disciplines of earth sciences, paleontology, biology, anthropology, and zoology. He is best known for his pioneering work on taphonomy—the study of the processes of death, deposition, and fossilization.

He directed the paleontological excavation at Swartkrans Cave in South Africa, which ran for 35 years, producing 240,000 fossils. Through his meticulous documentation of each fossil, he determined that the earliest hominid ancestors of humans had not been powerful hunters, as previously thought, but ended up as prey of predatory leopards and saber-toothed cats. The cave also yielded evidence of the earliest use of controlled fire ever found, going back more than a million years, indicating that humans were evolving into increasingly intelligent creatures. His 1981 book Hunters or the Hunted? An Introduction to African Cave Taphonomy is considered a classic text in the field of paleoanthropology.

The author of some 200 publications in his fields of study, Dr. Brain continues in his retirement to study the origin and evolution of the earliest animals, searching for fossils of ancestral invertebrates in limestones of Namibia. In 2006, he received the South African National Research Foundation's Top Award for Lifetime Achievement. His many other recognitions include election as a Fellow of the Royal Society of South Africa and numerous honorary degrees. He currently serves as a research associate at the Bernard Price Institute for Palaeontological Research and as chief scientific advisor to the Palaeontological Scientific Trust (PAST), which raises money for paleontological research and education on an Africa-wide basis.

Jules Pretty

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE

Jules Pretty is professor of environment and society in the Department of Biological Sciences at the University of Essex in the United Kingdom. He served as head of the department from 2004 to 2008.

He holds a BA in biology from the University of York (UK) and an MSc and DIC in environmental technology from the Imperial College in London. He joined the International Institute for Environment and Development (IIED) in London in 1986 as a research associate in the Sustainable Agriculture Programme, becoming associate director and then director in 1991. During his 10 years at IIED, he helped shape the emerging field of sustainable agriculture.

Internationally recognized for his work on sustainable agriculture practices in more than 50 countries, he works to balance environmental integrity with the competing demands of economic growth and modernization. He has written more than 150 scholarly papers and authored, coauthored, or edited 16 books, including This Luminous Coast, published this year; The Earth Only Endures; The Earthscan Reader in Sustainable Agriculture; The Pesticide Detox; and Agri-Culture. He is chief editor of the International Journal of Agricultural Sustainability. A popular invited speaker, he has made more than 250 presentations at international conferences, universities, government agencies, and local groups.

Professor Pretty is a member, advisor, or trustee of numerous research and development organizations in the United Kingdom and abroad. He is a fellow of the Institute of Biology and the Royal Society of the Arts and deputy chair of the British government's Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE). From 2001 to 2007 he served as A.D. White Professor-at-Large for Cornell University.

A regular contributor to local and national BBC and World Service radio networks, he was presenter and writer of a two-part radio series, "Ploughing Eden," for BBC Radio 4 in 1999, co-writer and presenter in a BBC TV Correspondent Series, The Magic Bean, in 2001, and a panelist for Radio 4's The Moral Maze in 2007.

He is the recipient of a 1997 international award from the Indian Ecological Society and, in 2006, received the Officer of the Order of the British Empire (OBE) award for services to sustainable agriculture.

RECIPIENTS OF HONORS

John G. Thompson

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE

John G. Thompson is Rouse Ball Professor Emeritus of Pure Mathematics at Cambridge University and Graduate Research Professor of Mathematics at the University of Florida.

Born in Kansas, he received his BA degree from Yale University in 1955 and his doctorate from the University of Chicago in 1959. After a year as an assistant professor at Harvard, he returned to Chicago, serving as professor of mathematics from 1962 to 1968. He joined the Cambridge University faculty in 1970, serving until 1993 when he moved to the University of Florida.

Professor Thompson's revolutionary ideas, first published in 1963 with Walter Feit, transformed the field of finite group theory, providing the intellectual fuel for a monumental project that culminated in 2004 with the classification of all finite simple groups. This has had an enormous impact not only in all areas of mathematics, but also in the chemical theory of crystals, the physical theory of quantum mechanics, and the national security field of cryptography and encryption in which several of Thompson's students and colleagues have played leadership roles.

As an internationally renowned mathematician, Professor Thompson has made further contributions to the Galois theory, representation theory, coding theory, and the theory of finite projective planes. He was awarded the 2008 Abel Prize by the Norwegian Academy of Science and Letters for his "profound achievements in algebra and in particular for shaping modern group theory."

In 1970, he was awarded a Fields Medal for his work in the theory of finite groups. The Fields Medal, awarded every four years at the International Congress of Mathematicians, is the highest recognition that can be bestowed for mathematics research and is considered the equivalent of a Nobel Prize in this discipline.

He was also the recipient in 1965, along with Feit, of the Cole Prize from the American Mathematical Society. His other awards include the Senior Berwick Prize from the London Mathematical Society, the Sylvester Medal from the Royal Society, the Wolf Prize, and the Poincaré Prize. He was elected to the National Academy of Sciences in 1971 and the Royal Society of London in 1979. He was awarded the National Medal of Science in 2000.

George W. Paulson

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD

George W. Paulson is emeritus professor of neurology and founder and former chair of the Department of Neurology at The Ohio State University. He served as chief of staff of University Hospital from 1993 to 1995.

Dr. Paulson received his BS in zoology in 1952 from Yale University and his MD in 1956 from Duke University. He joined the Ohio State College of Medicine staff in 1967 as an associate professor of neurology, earning a reputation as an expert clinician, teacher, and investigator, particularly of movement disorders. He was voted Teacher of the Year in 1971 by the graduating medical school class. That same year, he left the university to go into private practice, where he led a number of programs at Riverside Methodist Hospital in Columbus and continued to teach medical residents.

In 1983 he returned to Ohio State to lead the new Department of Neurology, serving as chair until 1991. He was named holder of the Kurtz Endowed Chair in Neurology in 1983, a position he held until his 1999 retirement. He played a leading role in attracting a National Parkinson's Foundation Center of Excellence to Ohio State. He has published more than 250 articles, many editorials and abstracts, and six books.

Throughout his career, Dr. Paulson has won equal eminence as a historian of medicine and medical events at Ohio State and in Ohio, including works on deafness in people in Perry County; on William Thornton, MD, designer of the U.S. Capitol; the function and demolition of the large state hospital that stood on Sullivant's Ridge on Columbus' west side; a study of Ralph Fanning, an Ohio State professor of art history; and a biography of Arthur G. James. He was the principal moving force in the development of the Medical Heritage Center in Ohio State's Prior Health Sciences Library, and he helped develop and continues to teach a popular course on the history of Ohio State in the College of Humanities.

Dr. Paulson has served on a number of university and community committees, including the Rare Book Committee at Ohio State, and is former chair of the Medical Library Board at the university's Medical Center. He is currently president of the board of the State Library of Ohio.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you. So that we are able to conduct the business of this meeting in an orderly fashion, I would ask that the ringers on all cell phones and other communication devices be turned off at this time, and I would ask that all members of the audience observe rules of decorum proper to conduct the business at hand.

I would like to now call of President Gee to provide his report.

President Gee:

Thank you very much Mr. Chairman. Ladies and gentleman, welcome. We are honored to have you all with us today. First I want to express my deep gratitude to Dr. Cloyd for his service as chairman of our Board. His leadership, dedication, and steady hand have strengthened the Board and the University in tangible and enduring ways. I am grateful to him for all the leadership he has provided.

I am thankful to him as I am also thankful to Dimon McFerson and Deb Van Camp, our other outgoing Trustees. Working with you and Deb has been such an enormous pleasure, I want you to know that, and our chairman is very special as we all know. Of course I look forward to working, once again, with Les Wexner as our new Board Chair. I am reminded, by the way, Les, of the Bill Murray movie "Groundhog Day," here we go again. In it, as you remember, Murray re-lives the same day over and over again until he gets it right, so I'm going to try that again. Like Murray, I'm going to keep trying!

Only eight weeks have past since my last report, but the pace of change here on campus and in the world at large is hectic, as we all know to say the least. While the daily headlines are troubling, it is reassuring to know that just a couple of weeks ago Ohio State unleashed 1,800 new graduates. As I told them at commencement, the world needs them, and I believe that very seriously. Their energy, their enthusiasm and their creativity as the world needs our 62,000 students now more than ever. The faculty who have helped to refine the talents of those students are themselves, as we all know, a very talented bunch. In fact, it is award season here on campus, a time I love, because this is a chance I get to spread some good news. In the past few weeks, I have thoroughly enjoyed startling and surprising 15 faculty members with well deserved recognition for their superb teaching, research and service activities. I have learned, by the way, that if you give people awards and cash they typically drop the stalking charges.

I am not the only one recognizing the remarkable work of our faculty. S. Michael Camp, academic director of the Fisher College of Business' Center for Entrepreneurship, recently received the 2009 Olympus Innovation Award, one of the only three educators across the nation so honored. Dr. Camp teaches technology commercialization to business and science students, many of whom already have success stories of their own. One of his Fisher colleagues, Rene Stulz, has been named Risk Manager of the Year by the Global Association of Risk Professionals. Professor Stulz is the Everett D. Reese Chair of Banking and Monetary Economics.

Other faculty have been busy unraveling the mysteries of the ends of the earth and the far reaches of the moon and the stars. In fact, for those of us who have not updated our GPS systems in a while, we might well have something extraterritorial and extraterrestrial in store for us. Professor C.K. Shum of our earth sciences department was part of an international team that recently produced the most detailed map of the moon ever created. Their map is the first to cover the moon's surface from pole to pole with detailed measures of topography.

Ohio State astronomer Todd A. Thompson and mathematician Chiu-Yen Kao have won the prestigious Alfred P. Sloan Research Fellowships. The award recognizes early-career researchers performing cutting-edge research. And Jason E. Box, an associate professor of geography and senior research scientist at the Byrd Polar Research Center was featured last week on a NOVA/National Geographic special about the melting Arctic glaciers and ice sheets. He also was featured in the current issue of Columbus Monthly.

Although I am not quite a media star like Professor Box, I have spent a good deal of time speaking to reporters. I am convinced that it is high time for the University to shuck its Midwestern modesty. So, in leading the charge to tell our story, I have been everywhere from the New York Times to the Wooster Daily Record. I will not say, by the way, which of those conversations were jousting matches and which were more cordial exchanges. Suffice it to say that I am always pleased for an opportunity to help shine a spotlight on the exceptional work of our students, our faculty, and our staff.

Since my last report, my mission to spread the word has taken me to Florida, California, Washington, D.C., New York, as well as Cleveland, Wooster, and elsewhere around the state. At every stop, alumni and friends have demonstrated their devotion to the University in typically vibrant and enthusiastic Buckeye fashion. Here in Columbus we have made real progress on deepening our commitment to access and opportunity. In the past two months, we have announced two new major partnerships with Columbus State Community College. Our new Pipeline to Medical College program is the first of its kind in the nation. Through the program, talented young people with an interest in medicine will be identified early and supported extensively through the rigorous coursework necessary for medical school preparation. The other initiative, funded by the National Science Foundation, will encourage and support students with disabilities in their pursuit of degrees in STEM fields.

A few more bragging points before I end my remarks. I just learned yesterday that fourth-year student Stacyann Russell has been elected chair of the 30,000-member National Society of Black Engineers. Stacyann, by the way, is majoring in integrated systems engineering. The Wexner Center for the Arts' record-breaking Warhol exhibition has come down, and it is followed by another installation receiving high praise. Last Sunday's New York Times has a wonderful piece about the new William Forsythe show, a great example of teams of students and faculty from different academic areas creating something wholly unique.

A couple miles south of here, our OSU Urban Arts Space just received the Artistic Excellence Award from the Greater Columbus Arts Council for its premiere exhibition last winter. Truly, the Urban Arts Space has become a vibrant home for the arts downtown, and it is an important part of our community outreach. And we are further extending our work in the Weiland Park area through a generous grant from the Ford Motor Company. This new grant underwrites an innovative program involving our Center for Automotive Research, the Fisher College of Business, and Godman Guild. The funds will be used to purchase three electric vans to transport children from Weiland Park to Godman Guild programs. By the way, engineering students are helping to design a solar-powered carport for the vans, and business students will prepare a marketing plan and study the project's economic impact – a total concept from many of our students on this campus.

Finally, I want to note the great success of our women's basketball team. They are exciting to watch, and they and Coach Foster have snapped up just about every Big Ten honor imaginable. The team remains largely intact next year, and I am already looking forward to cheering them on in the winter of this coming year. I might even venture to say that their success should be a slam dunk.

In closing, I want to simply say that although these are uncommonly challenging days and times, this University is precisely the source for our brighter, shared future, the nucleus for change and innovation, revitalized opportunity and new direction. There is by the way, nowhere I would rather be nor any place that I would rather serve than this University at this moment. Mr. Chairman, that is my report about your remarkable University.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much President Gee. Just one comment, I do not think media star is sufficiently celestial in describing you, I think it is more something like a supernova or a gamma ray burst that would be a more accurate descriptor. I would now like to move to what is always a very energizing part of our agenda and the Board meeting. These are our student recognition awards. I am very pleased to note that one of the students being honored today is from our wonderful college of Veterinary Medicine, from which I graduated 40 years ago this spring, so it is very nice to see someone being honored, and I would like to turn to our student trustee for graduate and professional students to introduce these outstanding individuals - Jason.

STUDENT RECOGNITION AWARDS

Mr. Marion:

Thank you Mr. Chairman, today once again I do have that wonderful pleasure of being able to present two more of our great students to this Board and to our guests in the audience today. I personally enjoy this so much because these students are two shining examples of what we are here to do and what we are all about. They are part of that bright future you just referenced President Gee.

Our first student Laura Eddleman arrived at The Ohio State University from Hudson, Ohio after making two stops, one at Miami University to earn a bachelor of music in piano performance and then one to earn a master of music in music history from the University of Cincinnati's College – Conservatory of Music.

While at OSU, Laura has been a "remarkably strong student," in what Dean Alan Michaels refers to as the "most impressive class in the history of the law school." One thing that is also important to note about Laura is she is ranked third out of 234 in this year's graduating law class.

Despite being a remarkably strong student in the classroom, Laura has been very active in her discipline. She has served as the articles editor for the Ohio State Law Journal, and she has been an active participant of the National Moot Court Team and the Corporate Law Team. All of these endeavors would be impressive for any student, especially any law student, and she has done these very well representing Ohio State at state and national levels, but most impressively she has served as co-president of the International Justice Mission at Moritz, and this is a major service program in the law school that focuses its efforts on fundraising to rescue women and children from human trafficking. This only begins to explain why Dean Michaels would say, "she is one of the most genuinely nice and humble people to have ever been at Moritz."

Her institutional experience and warm demeanor have served her well. She has been able to land numerous strong positions, such as an internship with the Office of the Solicitor General in the Ohio Attorney General's office; an associate position with Squires, Sanders and Dempsey; and a judicial externship with The Honorable Thomas Moyer, Chief Justice of The Ohio Supreme Court of Ohio. She truly has had many great experiences while at OSU and she has represented OSU well.

She just completed her studies and she will be hooded with her peers from the Moritz College of Law this May. After law school, she can return to her hobbies of playing piano and long-distance running, a skill that has been said to have prepared her well for law school. In addition, beginning this August, Laura will serve as a law clerk to an OSU alumnus, Judge Jeffrey Sutton of the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit. I want to let the Board know, and I think there are a few people in the room that know this very well, law clerking for a federal judge is a very prestigious position and doing so at the Circuit Court level is really a distinction of notable honor. Laura is already applying for a clerkship with the United States Supreme Court so she can continue to advance and further her clerkship after Judge Sutton. She is a remarkable young lady, highly deserving of recognition from this Board. She is joined by Dean Michaels and her family today. Please recognize Laura.

Also we have another outstanding student, and I have no bias or geographical bias of where these students are coming from. Lisa Schriver, like Dr. Cloyd, is a soon to be graduate of our Veterinary Medicine Program. She is a senior student in that college and is first in her graduating class right now with a 3.981 grade point average, which is highly impressive, as you know, Dr. Cloyd, in a very academically challenging field. She has also been matched for a highly competitive internship at Michigan State University practicing in small animal general medicine. She has been highly successful at OSU ever since arriving here after earning a degree in biology with highest distinction from Indiana University.

During her first four years at OSU, her academic excellence has not been unnoticed. She has been rewarded with multiple scholarships including the Delaware Kennel Club, Dorothy Bliss Scholarships and this last year she was honored with the Dr. Matthew Eggert Scholarship.

Despite having excelled tremendously in the academic setting, Lisa, just like Laura truly embodies our motto – Education for Citizenship. I say this because Lisa is not known among her peers for all of her academic accomplishments. Instead she is known for her heart and her compassion for what it is that she does, and it is what she does best. Her story is quite remarkable.

After seeing the devastation in September of 2005 following Hurricane Katrina and recognizing the critical needs of the animals, Lisa and her fellow veterinary student, Katie Flood, were moved to spend a week helping rescue and care for the thousands and thousands of homeless animals in New Orleans. Lisa said then, after going there “once you volunteer and realize that you can make a difference, you make a personal commitment to return.” Since that time Lisa has made several trips on her own and as president of OSU’s Shelter Medicine Club to return to New Orleans to help ARNO (Animal Rescue New Orleans).

Recommenders for Lisa have said when she was applying to vet school she was “intuitive and compassionate” and a “standout among all the previous students they’ve ever mentored.” They were all absolutely right. From starting out helping in traditional veterinary clinics to volunteering at therapeutic horseback riding camps for special needs children, Lisa truly has been everything that OSU could want in a student. In just a few months, this young lady who graduated from Ursuline Academy in Cincinnati just several years ago will be Dr. Lisa Schriver. As a soon-to-be Dr. Schriver embarks upon a career in medicine, I am sure she will make OSU and our Board absolutely proud. Lisa is absolutely most deserving of this recognition of the Board today. She is joined today by Interim Dean Hubbell, members of her family and her boyfriend. Please recognize Lisa.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Lisa and Laura are going to join us here for a few remarks to let us know about their experiences here at The Ohio State University, and how it is preparing them for their life and any words of wisdom for our Board.

Ms. Eddleman:

First of all thank you very much. I want to thank you, the Board and also the administration at Moritz, especially Dean Michaels who is here with me today. This is a tremendous honor, and I am extremely proud to be here as a representative of the law school. Looking back at my time at Ohio State, I really am filled with nothing but gratefulness to the University, to the law school, and to the outstanding faculty members who made my time at Moritz so wonderful.

My experiences at Moritz have not only energized me to seek after my dreams, but they have given me the skills I need in order to achieve them. During my time working as a judicial extern, I got to see from the inside of a court how to be a legal writer and how best to persuade a court. In my work with the Moot Court Programs and in my child advocacy classes, I learned to be an advocate so that when the time comes one day to stand up in court, I have the confidence knowing that I have the skills to do so.

Most importantly, through my day to day interactions with the faculty, and through the community at Moritz as a whole, I saw what it means to be an excellent lawyer. I can only hope leaving from here that one day I am the same model of professionalism, integrity and service that the faculty members modeled for me. I have only been out of school since December so my time in the legal field is very short, but I can already see how Moritz has equipped me with everything that I need to face the challenges ahead. In my current post at the Ohio Solicitor General's office I have the opportunity to use the writing and advocacy skills I learned to help represent the state of Ohio in cases pending before the Ohio and U.S. Supreme Courts, and I could not be more excited about my clerkship coming up in August, where I will have the opportunity to spend a year in Judge Sutton's chambers assisting with the cases before him.

I know that none of these experiences would have been possible were it not for the encouragement and the support that I received from the faculty and administration, and regardless of where my career goes from there I will remain extremely proud and extremely grateful to be from Ohio State.

Ms. Schriver:

I would like to start by thanking the Board of Trustees for this tremendous honor today. It is really a great privilege to accept this award, and I am very excited to be here and meet you all.

My veterinary and academic community service accomplishments have been aided by the support of many people, and I would like to just acknowledge them today. My mother was the animal lover who first instilled with me the value of a life. It was my father who gave me the motto, if you are going to do something, do it right, which has helped to motivate me to strive for excellence in my endeavors. It was the veterinarians and the animals at the Louisiana Society of the Prevention of Cruelty of Animals in New Orleans who actually introduced me into veterinary medicine for the first time and the tremendous need of animals and people, and that is what inspired me to go into this career. I would also like to recognize my classmate Katie Flood, who Jason mentioned earlier, who has been my partner in crime over the past four years, in organizing and executing several veterinary community service trips to New Orleans and also here in Ohio. One of our College of Veterinary Medicine faculty members, Dr. Cliff Monahan, has also been quite a role model, and all of his efforts of improving the health of both humans, through public health, and animals here in the United States and in Ugandan.

I would also like to thank the faculty and staff of the College of Veterinary Medicine, especially those who have joined us here today, Melissa Weber, Dr. Jean Sander and Dr. Hubbell, who have provided moral and logistical support for me through my years of veterinary school and all of my endeavors.

It is my hope to represent Ohio State and the College of Veterinary Medicine well as I move on into my internship next year, and my future career. I will always cherish this day, truly, and all the great memories and knowledge I have gained as a Buckeye over the past four years. Once again I would like to thank you very much.

Dr. Cloyd:

Laura and Lisa, thank you very much. You know you are two remarkable ladies, and you already bring a real source of pride to this University through your accomplishments. Just listening to you, I am sure the pride of this University and your future contributions is just going to continue to grow, so best wishes to both of you, and congratulations.

Mr. Wexner:

I just want to say something. It struck me when you were talking about your experience in law school that it was not that many years ago that I heard those exact same sentiments expressed and almost the exact same words and it was by a man named Michael Moritz, and you should know that.

Dr. Cloyd:

We will now move to committee reports, and I would first like to call on Mr. Schottenstein to provide the report from the Audit and Compliance Committee.

-0-

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Mr. Schottenstein:

Thank you Mr. Chairman, the Audit and Compliance Committee met yesterday and we had somewhat of an abbreviated agenda, and accordingly my remarks will be relatively brief. The first item on the agenda was a review and follow up to the Deloitte and Touche management letter. The information is in the Board packets. I will simply note that the so-called material deficiencies that Deloitte noted, while they were material, none of them were truly material. Relatively an in-material list of material deficiencies if that makes sense, and I think that Mr. Shkurti and all those involved in the financial side of the University deserve a lot of credit. It is probably the shortest list of deficiencies that we have seen in some time, and a lot of efforts are being made to defer their response to the matters which are primarily in the control and process area that Deloitte deems are in need.

Next the primary audit partner on the account from Deloitte, Kris Devine, presented the audit plan for the current fiscal year and the committee was very satisfied with the comprehensive nature of the plan including the various audits of some of the affiliated entities and subsidiary entities that are involved within the massive umbrella which is Ohio State. Finally we received an update on the business plan of the Managed Healthcare affiliated entity, and it primarily related to the governance model that is being proposed, and the Committee was very comfortable with it. That concludes my report.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Schottenstein. Are there any questions or comments on the Committee report?

Mr. Schottenstein:

Mr. Chairman I should also mention, we had intended as part of our compliance charge to hear a report on athletics compliance, which due to an eleventh-hour scheduling situation, it has been postponed to one of our future meetings.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much Mr. Schottenstein. Any questions or comments?

We will then move to the report from the Committee on Trusteeship.

Mr. McFerson:

Thank you Dr. Cloyd. We also met yesterday at 12:30 pm. We covered several items. We had a presentation on the Amendments to the Bylaws of the Board for the changes to the University Hospitals and Bylaws of the Arthur G. James Cancer Hospital and Richard J. Solove Cancer Institute. A similar conversation took place in the Medical Affairs Committee and so I will defer to my colleague for the detail of that, but it was favorably considered and reviewed by the Trusteeship Committee.

We are adjusting one of our committees; Mr. Ron Ratner will serve on the Fiscal Affairs Committee. That was the only change there.

We also took a look at the reappointments to the Self-Insurance Board, and that is in the consent agenda. We then had a nice conversation with Dr. Tim Gerber on how the faculty could work more closely with the Board of Trustees, and it was a good dialogue and we will continue to have conversations along those lines at future meetings. A brief report was given by Ms. Davidson on a charge given to her and Ambassador Ong on the Charter Trustees. They have done some work in beginning to develop a list of names in that regard, and that too will come forth at a future meeting. Then as you recall at our last Board meeting we elected Mr. Wexner as our chair elect, which will take place at the end of this meeting today, but to conclude that election of officers, we also would like to put forth the names of Ms. Jo Ann Davidson and Ambassador John Ong, to serve as vice chairs, which is consistent with the Board's practice of the most senior members of the Board, if they are not serving as chair of the Board, would serve as vice chairs of the Board. The way the Board's practices have been, in the event there are two vice chairs, the one with the longest years of service would be the first vice chair, in the event that Mr. Wexner is unable to be at a meeting, but both names would be put forth as Vice Chair.

Along with that the re-election of Dr. David Frantz to serve as the Board Secretary, I will defer to you to take care of those matters, Mr. Chair, and then we went into Executive Session after which the meeting was adjourned.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much Mr. McFerson. Before we move to the election of the officers, are there any other questions or comments by Board members on this Committee's report? If not, then I would ask, are there any other nominations for vice chair from the floor?

Hearing none, we will close the nominations.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

I move we have a voice vote to accept the slate of officers from the Committee on Trusteeship for Ms. Jo Ann Davidson and Ambassador John Ong as vice chairs and David Frantz as secretary of the Board.

Upon motion of Mr. McFerson, seconded by Mr. Brass, the Board of Trustees adopted the foregoing motion by unanimous voice vote.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you, Congratulations.

Next Committee report we will have will be the Medical Affairs Committee.

Mr. Brass:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. The Medical Affairs Committee did meet yesterday afternoon, and we have ten items that I want to bring to your attention. I am going to move through them relatively quickly, and a number of these are on the consent agenda, which we will move through.

Dr. Gabbe led off our meeting discussing a number of awards, and I am not going to list them all, but we should be very proud of our faculty. They continue to make Ohio State University Medical System very proud. We talked about the economic stimulus package yesterday, and this is very important. There are three buckets in which the Medical Center and the Medical School is really looking at. One is in the research activity, one is information systems and one is in equipment and facilities. As it relates to the research, a number of our investigators have in the past put in various requests for funding, and now they are requesting that we go back and take a look at supplemental funding on some of those that have been approved in light of the fact that there is more money. In addition to that, there are challenge grants, up to $1 million that we will be looking at as it relates to each one of our faculty members. That is an important source of income as we continue to expand our research program.

As it relates to the equipment and facilities, I want to make you aware that we are feeling very good right now that we may be the recipient of some money for the three floors in our research enterprise for expansion. Those three floors are currently funded through ProjectONE and if in fact we are able to get the supplemental money through the stimulus package that would give us tremendous relief as it relates to research expansion as well.

Second thing I would like to bring to your attention, it is actually number two and number three, is that at the next meeting we will be spending a lot of time on the quality and safety reports, and on the integration of The Ohio State University physician group. I tell you that upfront because those are two strategic thrusts that we are looking at, and I will be reporting out probably over the next couple meetings on those two fronts as we continue to move into a full integrated model with those.

The fourth item I would like to tell you about is really good news. This is the time when the match takes place across the country as it relates to our medical students and residencies, both here and those locations where our medical students and residents locate. With 200 medical students that fully matched coming out of our program, 98% of them matched with their preferred choice, which is outstanding, absolutely outstanding. Forty percent of our residents are staying in the state of Ohio and 20% of those medical students are staying at our own Medical Center. So as it relates to really making sure we have a recruitment retention program, I think that speaks well for the faculty, for the leadership and for our Medical School as well. A number of residents come in from outside wanting to in fact do their specialty training at The Ohio State University Medical System. Ninety eight percent of our choices matched with us, which is the highest number ever in the history of The Ohio State University Medical System. I think we should be very proud of them.

The fifth item I would like to bring to your attention is that every one of our meetings we focus down on our scorecard. Dr. Gabbe and the rest of the executive team spend a lot of time on this. It is our early warning system, and in light of the fact that we are undertaking the largest project in the history of the Medical System, we want to make sure that all of our variables are right on-line. This is tough times for healthcare across this country. We are in a very stable mode. There are a couple of our indicators that are in yellow at this point in time. Our EBIDA, which is budgeted at 11.4%, came in at 11%, our admissions are down slightly, and our cost per day is up slightly. On the other hand, our days cash on hand, our debt service coverage and everything else is looking solid green. The only red item that we have on the scorecard which I want to make you aware of is our drug cost, and the reason for that is inside our cancer center, our increase in volume has been significant, which in fact is causing the factored drug cost to go up, so it is very justifiable, but we make no exceptions to our green, yellow, and red scorecard. It is red, it is justified, but we will continue to watch that.

Our ambulatory visits and our occupancy mostly due to our tertiary nature and acuteness of the patients are at an all-time high, so we are very strong on those factors. We are watching our costs very carefully. Dr. Gabbe and the executive team have slowed down capital expenditures, they are watching discretionary spending, and they are watching their open positions. That is very much in order in light of reimbursement, uninsured care, the employment situation, and the economic situation out there.

This leads me to my next item which is important as well, and that is our sixth item. We are tracking very carefully our macroeconomics as it relates to Project ONE. We are going to do a revised forecast over the next couple of months in light of all of the macroeconomic issues to see if anything has changed that we want to at least talk through, lining up with that are our circuit breakers which are put in place in the event that the economics do not stay. That is important for the Board to know that those things are in sync, so if we have an economic issue we also have a circuit breaker issue that will follow through. I think at the June meeting we will be in a position to take a look and see if there are any adjustments needed to the macroeconomic forecast or to the circuit breaker forecast, and I will bring that back as well. The project is moving forward. We have some projects that are starting; I want you to be aware of that. By mid-summer we will begin some demolition of some of the buildings that are programmed to be demolished. We are beginning the process of moving the electrical lines and oxygen lines, and things such as that.

Which brings me to my seventh item - we discussed what we call issues of importance at the Medical Affairs Committee, and the first one is by bringing down buildings, moving electrical lines and so on, you have a potential for disruption. We will be fencing off those areas but the Board should be aware with a project of this size we have to be very cognizant of how we do it and what we do. The second issue of importance that the Board should be aware of is there is going to be a lot of construction on Route 315, not due to our project, but due to Ohio Department of Transportation's (ODOT) schedule, and we are very sensitive to that and the Board should be made aware of that as well.

Next item I would like to bring to your attention is the Medical Affairs Committee asked the executive team and the architects to go back and take a second look at where we should locate this large chiller plant that is going to take care of the Medical Center and its expansion. The first option was to put it on the river, and the second one was to put it in a location which we refer to as the Parks Hall location. The recommendation coming forward is to put the chiller plant at the Parks Hall location. It will cost more money to do it now. It will be a total build out now with expansion capabilities verses a phase one/phase two on the river. We felt it was very important to preserve the river and to preserve the green space while not going into the flood plane, the operating efficiencies are the same, so on the consent agenda today you will see the chiller plant. It was sent on to the Fiscal Affairs Committee as well, and both Committees are endorsing that.

The ninth item I would like to bring to your attention is that at one point we were considering bringing some of the clinical buildings west of Cannon, when in fact we reviewed all the architectural planning and drawings, we decided to keep everything east of Cannon, so technically we needed to merge those budgets back together, which we took action on yesterday as well as in the Fiscal Affairs Committee.

The last thing I would like to make sure we understand is the item that the Committee on Trusteeship discussed, and endorsed as did the Medical Affairs Committee, that is the Medical Affairs Committee heard a comprehensive presentation as it relates to the structure of the Medical Center and the reorganization of the Medical Center as it relates to its bylaws. We basically are in agreement with this; we know it is consistent with President Gee's One University Program. We really do believe it is a facilitating communication. We think it is going to help us with alignment of strategy and alignment of focus. Basically what we are talking about is a creation of a Medical Center Board that will report up to the Medical Affairs Committee, which is the Board of Trustees committee. Underneath the Medical Center Board will be the Hospital Boards. So making up the Medical Center Board you will have five chairs of the Hospital Board, six other public officials to be nominated, you will have a number of ex-officio individuals, and two of them are voting ex officio members, that being our president and also Dr. Gabbe, Senior Vice President for Health Sciences. There are interlocking memberships between the Medical Affairs Committee and the Medical Center Board, specifically the Medical Affairs Committee chair will serve as a member of the Medical Center Board, and the Medical Center Board chair will serve as a member of the Medical Affairs Committee. That again enhances the communication, ensures we have no surprises and brings awareness to any sensitivities being brought forward at the appropriate time. Each Hospital Board chair will also serve on the Medical Center Board.

The last thing I would like to bring to your attention as it relates to this is bylaw 3335-95-01, will be deleted as it relates to the third sentence in its entirety. Now in order for this program to be implemented correctly, we are going to call for a very comprehensive orientation of all Boards, the Medical Affairs Committee, the Medical Center Board and the Hospital Boards to make sure that we have a very clear function delineation as to what is going to happen in each of the respective boards.

Mr. Chair that completes my report. The Medical Affairs Committee has recommended that we go forward with this bylaw change, and the other items are on the consent agenda as well. I would be happy to entertain any questions.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Brass. Any questions or comments?

President Gee:

I would just like to make one comment. That is that the realignment of our Medical Center Board is very consistent with the realignment we are doing throughout the institution. We have been taking a long look at how we make certain two things happen; one is that we have Boards that have real work and real effectiveness and secondly, we make certain that these Boards are accountable to this Board, so that we will no longer have any lack of clarity in terms of the relationship among those Boards. The Medical Center happens to be the first one to undergo this process, but we are doing this throughout the institution now, and we appreciate the leadership you have provided, Mr. Brass, in helping us move this through.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Mr. Brass:

I think it is a step in the right direction. I think it will serve our medical enterprise as we go forward very nicely.

Dr. Cloyd:

I have two questions and then a comment Mr. Brass.

Relative to this proposal on the Hospital Boards, has there been a full communication of the proposal and understanding with the existing Hospital Boards?

Mr. Brass:

Dr. Gabbe, do you want to take a stab at that. I can also answer that.

Dr. Gabbe:

Yes, we have discussed this with the leadership of those groups.

Mr. Brass:

What has not been discussed yet is to who the new Board members will be and who the chairs will be - that will happen between now and the summer.

President Gee:

We need to have this approved first, but the answer is, Dr. Gabbe and Chris Culley did a very good job at having conversations with all of the effected individuals to make certain that there was no surprise here.

Dr. Cloyd:

That was one of the things I was trying to clarify, President Gee, and maybe I would come back to Dr. Gabbe on this, because the fact we will be voting and bringing this into effect today and we have had the discussion yesterday, it is the public forum, I really want to assure that any existing Hospital Boards members hear from us and understand what the changes are and how we are going to modify our practice and some of the details we are describing here so that they do not read about it the newspaper.

President Gee:

We will have to work really fast between now and tomorrow. No, just kidding, we are in good shape with that.

Dr. Cloyd:

Good, thank you.

The question I have comes back to this Route 315 change, and I know this was talked about earlier in committee, but they showed a flyer that patients would have to help them with the ingress and the egress of the campus. The question I have, is there anything else we need to work on with ODOT, regarding electronic signage or whatever that will be helping people trying to come into the Medical Center. I assume we have a fair amount of traffic of people who are not Columbus natives that will be trying to get into the hospital and it would help them through the difficulties they are going to have now with these ramps closed down.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Mr. Brass:

You are absolutely correct, and I think those patients that are scheduled, that we know are coming in for ambulatory, inpatient and so on, that communication is being programmed. It is the ones that are unscheduled. As it relates to that we have to make sure that we have tremendous communication with the emergency support people so that they know exactly what is closed and what is opened, and what routes to take. We absolutely have to have great signage, and I think we have some work yet to do as it relates to discussions with ODOT and as it relates to what we can do together to ease up the situation. I am very concerned about the situation because we have tremendous traffic coming down 315 into the Medical Center and into the University, so I do think we have some due diligence work to do. Your sensitivity is noted and I think very appropriate.

Mr. McFerson:

It is a two year project too, northbound this summer and southbound next summer. The people will see it down then up and then down.

Dr. Cloyd:

The comment I want to make is really a thank you to Dr. Gabbe, Dr. Souba and all the people that have been involved in our academic Medical Center when we hear these statistics. I think it is remarkable progress. You are the largest stimulator of jobs in central Ohio in recent times in terms of the economic impact you provide. You have a profitable positive cash flow situation in probably what is the most difficult economic environment in the world in terms of medical health care. Your research dollars go up every year, and then we hear these kinds of reports on both the students that you have and the quality of the students coming in as well as hearing about these residencies placements. When we think across the vision and mission of this University, and highest quality of education, highest quality of research, highest quality service, and as a part of that service stimulating positive economic impact in Ohio, it is really up to President Gee to do this, but my vote would be an A+ to you and your folks. Thank you very, very much for some outstanding service.

Any other questions or comments on this report? If not we will move to the Development and Investment Committee Report.

Mr. Wexner:

I will yield first to Peter Weiler.

Mr. Weiler:

Mr. Chairman, the Committee reviewed our third quarter results of our fundraising progress both compared to our annual goal of $350 million, and compared to last year at this same time at the end of March, $241 million has been raised which represents 69% of our goal, with 75% of the year having elapsed. When we compare that number to last year it reflects a decrease in outright gifts by 19% of which most of that is gifts from foundations, and we conclude that deficit probably is a reflection in their own principle balances being severely effected by these market conditions. On the bright side, new gifts, pledges and planned gifts are all up 57% and 18% respectively. Overall we are 3% ahead of where we were last year at this same time. The Committee was informed about several new gifts of $1 million or more since our last meeting, I will just mention a few; a $7 million gift for the renovation of Sullivant Hall from the Elizabeth Ireland Graves Charitable Trust, a $4 million gift in kind of cartoon art to the University Libraries from the International Museum of Cartoon Art, a $1 million pledge to Project ONE from Cheryl Kreuger, a $3.5 million pledge for the renovations of Sullivant Hall from Jeanie Schulz, who is the widow of Charles Schulz of Peanuts fame.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Lastly, we reported to the Committee plans for raising much needed student scholarship support as part of the Student's First Initiative started by President Gee. The Students First, Students Now fundraising initiative will have a working goal of $100 million to be raised over the next two and a half years. When successful we will estimate that between 7,500 and 10,000 new students will be financially assisted each year depending upon the size of those individual awards. That concludes my report.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Mr. Weiler, any questions or comments?

It is certainly encouraging in the macroeconomic environment we have right now to hear the development report. It sounds like this virus of love you talk about, President Gee, you, Peter and others are spreading it readily and maybe you can hook up with Dr. Gabbe and we could get a further mutation of that virus so it even further loosens billfolds. That would be a good deal.

Really it is reassuring to hear that. Anything else from the Development and Investment Committee?

Mr. Hook:

Following Peter's report we turned to the long-term investment portfolio. We had two items of business with which to deal that had been presented for first reading at the February Board Meeting, and were on the agenda for approval this time. The first was the issue of combining the University endowment and the Foundation endowment into one pool with one unified payout rate, where as the two pools had separate payouts of 4.5% and 4% respectively. The request was to have a new payout of 4.25% for the combined pool. Other changes requested were to use a seven year smoothing formula for the calculation of the payout which will help to moderate fluctuations in the payout amounts year in and year out. The current use of a ceiling and a floor around increases and decreases will be eliminated, as well the five year smoothing methodology that had been used. For one year, the next fiscal year 2009-10, there will be a floor instituted so no endowment recipient will see a decline in distribution greater than 3%. Lastly, the policy will be reviewed in 12 months and should be revisited annually by the Committee and Board as a matter of good governance. The matter was discussed and approved by the Committee at that point.

The second matter to come to the Committee was the request to alter the asset allocation methodology used by the investment office to manage the long-term pool. This was also brought to the Committee for a first reading in February. The new policy allows for fewer and broader asset categories and focuses more on risk management than does the old model. The new model also allows our office to be more flexible and opportunistic which will assist us especially in financial markets such as we are experiencing today. The Committee was apprised of some of the changes that have been made to the portfolio over the last several months in both types of managers as well as the percentage shift in certain strategies. Following the terrible environment during the fall of 2008, the portfolio has been gaining traction and has been positive since December, while the markets have remained negative. While this is a very short timeframe on which to make any judgments it is at least comforting to see some positive affirmation of the efforts of our team. After an additional discussion by the Committee on these issues, the changes were approved.

Following those two business matters, Kerry Kirk from Cambridge Associates, who is one of our endowments' investment consultants made a presentation on sticking to one's strategic asset allocation plan in times of difficulty. His presentation discussed many historic results dating back to the beginning of the 1900's through the current market. The underlying conclusion of Cambridge's work was to adopt one's strategic plan and adhere to it, however allowing for some tactical deviations. This presentation was for discussion only, and after the Committee reflected upon the consultants report the meeting was adjourned.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much Mr. Hook. Any other comments or questions.

We will next go to the report on Academic Affairs and Student Life.

Ambassador Ong:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. At our meeting yesterday we heard five presentations from 1) vice president for student life, Javaune Adams Gaston; 2) interim executive dean of arts and sciences and vice provost, Joan Leitzel; 3) vice provost of graduate education and dean of the graduate school, Patrick Osmer; and 4) Professor Tim Gerber.

Dr. Adams-Gaston's first presentation dealt with residential life as part of her vision for student life on the whole. She explained the observation that had been backed by research that students who live in campus housing have a better overall collegiate experience, including higher grades and graduation rate, stronger interpersonal relationships with other students and greater attachment to the University when they become alumni. Residential facilities and residential life programming must support each other and together produce new whole student success models, especially our high ability students who are apparently looking for residential life experience and that experience they feel gives them added academic support, added opportunities for personal development and social opportunities that they expect in a top flight university. As a conclusion to her presentation, Dr. Adams-Gaston gave us a strategic overview of the current renovation of existing dormitory buildings and beds as well as the conversion into a dormitory of the recently acquired Holiday Inn on Lane Avenue.

Her second presentation dealt with a proposal which needs a little background - a proposal to create a fairly substantial student aid legal clinic. By way of background, there has been for some years a small office that has provided legal aid to students with respect to housing; it is limited to student housing and legal problems that arise as a result of that. This proposal which Dr. Adams-Gaston discussed with us would significantly increase, a little more than double the number of lawyers involved, and would significantly increase the type and variety of legal services to be offered beyond simply housing matters. We had a lively discussion of that. Two of our Committee members who are distinguished lawyers raised some questions about the definition of the scope of the services to be provided, and we agreed that we would take this recommendation under consideration, but that Dr. Adams-Gaston should return to us at a future meeting to present it for Committee action.

The next presentation was by Dr. Leitzel and had to do with the action taken a year ago to make various organizational and other changes in the pre-existing federation of the five colleges of the arts and sciences. These actions by the president and provost were aimed at the restructuring of this five college federation. Dr. Leitzel has become the interim executive dean as well as vice provost of the five colleges and has been working over the past year to begin this restructuring. She was happy to report to us that she has made significant progress. She basically has three goals for the restructuring: 1) to realign programs, units, departments, schools and centers within the five colleges; 2) see that students receive increased interdisciplinary opportunities including interdisciplinary majors and minors, and receive international experiences as the result of President Gee's – One Passport Per Student – Initiative; 3) undertake the semester conversion when it is approved, which will be a very substantial undertaking in terms of redoing the curriculum. Another goal has been to create an administrative structure that is efficient, effective and less costly than that which previously existed. Thus far, 13 college and administrative full-time equivalent positions have been reduced. There is an ongoing review of business processes and organizational design by navigator consultants and a number of the redesign actions that have already been taken or at least agreed upon are: one shared service center for all human relations and payroll activities, three regional service centers for procurement and financial transaction level activities, service improvements to eliminate duplication in non-value added steps, and the creation of some technology solutions to improve longer term efficiency of support operations. All of these should be fully in place by the end of this calendar year. Other work that is in process is continued work in the environmental sciences and life sciences to recreate departments by combinations and in some cases eliminations, measures to create more budget flexibility, and the development of a centralized budget model for the entire arts and sciences area of the University, and of course planning for the capital campaign.

Dr. Leitzel indicated that the challenges she sees are building a common culture, because the pre-existing colleges each had a separate kind of cultural background, many cases a source of strength. She feels that there needs to be some common element that will bind them more closely together - facilitating cross disciplinary research and interdisciplinary instruction, semester conversion, and then of course continuing to deal with the long-term process with inherited costs. We were very pleased by this report because it showed that simply announcing the actions a year ago was not what has been done, it has been a year of solid contribution and accomplishment and, of course, I think many would agree that this consolidation of the Arts and Sciences is not only an unprecedented step but one that has enormous potential benefits for the University.

Next we had a presentation similar to Dr. Leitzel's from Vice Provost Osmer, that being it was a one year update on an ongoing activity. That activity was the completion of the study of our existing ninety some Ph.D. programs which was presented to this Board in April of last year. This brought us up-to-date on what has been happening as a follow-up to that initial study. The study of course was a pioneering one, and Dr. Osmer was very pleased to point out that we have received a lot of national recognition for it; in particular a recent article in the Chronicle of Higher Education which I think must have been written by our public affairs department. I do not think we could have done it much better than they did.

You will recall the team that did this evaluation classified all the Ph.D. programs into six categories of very high quality and world class - we do not need to fix them just do their thing - strong, very solid programs that might need a little twitching here and there but basically we're appropriate for reinvestment; good, your average program, newly developing programs; and there were just a few of those that were so new that the investigating team really felt that they could not reach any conclusion; a number of programs, which in their view, needed to be seriously reassessed and/or restructured; and then finally in a few cases programs that they recommended be at least disinvestment if not pure elimination. Dr. Osmer reported that already as a result of the study and the differentiation among programs, there was a universal view that our stipends were not quite high enough. Substantial increases in graduate student stipends on a multi-year basis have been put into effect already. A second thing that has been looked at and is beginning to be done is to assess overall efforts of biological and life sciences on the one hand and earth and environmental sciences on the other hand. There is a lot of opportunity either for restructuring or for interdisciplinary activity there.

He was happy to report that the individual colleges have been very responsive to the plan findings and have undertaken increased attention to recruiting program quality - stipends.

The colleges are also taking action right across the board. All of the programs in that reassess or restructure category, every one of them, have a program underway to do exactly that, to see what action they can take to reassess or perhaps restructure their program. All four of those programs which were recommended for disinvestment or elimination have been acted upon, two of them have been closed, one of them has been merged into another program so that there is only one remaining, and a fourth one has been turned into a track, within another Ph.D. program.

The doctoral program review has categorized several major things, a major reorganization of the College of Biological Sciences which is ongoing at this point. A little farther down the road, or a little more in the inception stage, is a major reorganization of the College of Engineering. In Dr. Osmer's opinion both of these are outcomes of the issues raised by the study. Once again the Committee was very pleased with this report. It indicated that the study, as many studies often are, is not just a study it is a study that has become a catalyst not just for some action but a lot of action right across the entire University.

Finally we had a presentation by Professor Tim Gerber on the conversion to the semester calendar from the quarter calendar. Professor Gerber had been a member of a 15 faculty member committee that had explored this issued at great depth, and had reported out unanimously in favor of the conversion. Even though as he frankly said, he would just assume rewrite all of his courses as eat sand, but he felt that it was the right thing to do, and more than that it really represented an opportunity to make a change in the University. Because what this basically amounts to is a rewriting or reestablishment of the entire curriculum. The faculty senate voted by a very substantial majority to approve this conversion. We had a discussion about that, and at the end of the discussion it was quite clear that the Committee unanimously felt that they should present this to the Board for approval at this meeting, and we have a copy of the necessary resolution, you have that in front of you, and I would move its approval.

Dr. Cloyd:

Did you have any other aspect of your report Ambassador?

Ambassador Ong:

No, just that the provost reviewed with us a few items; I think they are items eight, nine and ten on the consent agenda.

Dr. Cloyd:

If we could I would like to hold just one moment on the vote on the resolution and see if there are any comments or questions on any of the other items that were contained in the report from Academic Affairs and Student Life.

If not, we have a resolution in front of us, the conversion to the semester calendar and we have a motion to approve this.

CONVERSION TO THE SEMESTER CALENDAR

Resolution No. 2009-65

Synopsis: Approval of the conversion from quarters to semesters is proposed.

WHEREAS the University System of Ohio's Strategic Plan for Higher Education, 2008-2017, calls for a move to a common academic calendar across all Ohio universities; and

WHEREAS The Ohio State University supports an integrated system of higher education in Ohio; and

WHEREAS a semester calendar facilitates employment opportunities for graduating students as well as student research, international study, internships, service learning, and other specialized learning experiences for undergraduate and graduate students; and

WHEREAS on March 12, 2009, the University Senate approved a resolution to adopt a semester calendar with no fewer than 65 days and, with the exception of professional colleges or academic disciplines whose accreditation standards require a longer term, no more than 70 days of instruction in each semester:

NOW THEREFORE

BE IT RESOLVED, That The Ohio State University adopt a semester calendar to take effect no earlier than Autumn 2012.

Upon motion of Amb. Ong, seconded by Mr. Fisher, the Board of Trustees adopted the foregoing resolution by unanimous roll call vote, cast by Trustees Cloyd, McFerson, Davidson, Ong, Borrer, Wexner, O'Dell, Shumate, Hicks, Fisher, Schottenstein, Brass, Marbley, and Kass.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much. I would like to make just a couple of comments on this before we move to the next Committee report. First of all I think this is an important step forward. I think if we take the report in it's entirety that Ambassador Ong has provided, Ohio State is really taking some pioneering steps when we look at the Arts and Science Federation, what is happening there. Certainly rightfully so our proactivity and courage in doing the right things around the graduate programs is very note worthy. Then being responsive and the importance of the move from quarters to semesters, which is going to create a level of challenge on the University, the administration, the faculty and some students. Change is difficult and we will get through this, it will be very challenging. I really want to thank everyone for their work to date, and in a forward sense thank all of those that I know are going to have to do some very heavy lifting in the future as we achieve a full conversion.

I also want to just thank four people who normally we do not really recognize in all of this. We look to the leadership of President Gee and Provost Alutto who have really been out there in the frontline and it is terrific and we thank you, but I do want to add a special thank you to Professor Gerber. I never want you to eat sand sir, but we really do appreciate your yeoman work. Because I think one to the things I would say about this process is that it is a significant change, and it does have an element of controversy to it, but I think in this University it has been handled in an outstanding way. There has been a full airing of views. Everyone has had an opportunity to have their points heard in the process. Three other people I want to highlight, because the students obviously have a vested interest in this that I want to highlight for the leadership they have brought are Peter Koltak, Ted Bauer and our own Jason Marion. They have brought leadership with the undergraduate students, the professional students and the graduate students. These three gentleman as they have led the leadership of the various student groups over this last year, I have had a number of people in the administration and faculty tell me, they have set the high bar for inner-student cooperation. Their approach to their work is, it is about the University, and President Gee I think when you talk about One University we have seen it exemplified here. They have looked for those problems to how we move to get to a compromise, something that meets all people's needs. The three of you are younger than me, but you are inspiring to see the kinds of leadership you have brought, and I have learned from it. For these three student leaders, I really would like the Board to give them a round of applause because they have been really helpful.

President Gee:

Mr. Chairman, could I just make an additional comment. First of all it is highly appropriate that you recognize this as a transitional moment for the University, because it is. In the nature of Universities, this is a thirty year process. This has been talked about and debated for over thirty years. In my first speech to the faculty in October of 1990, I proposed that we move to semesters. It shows how persuasive I was. I had to leave and come back and it was like Lazarus coming back from the dead again. I think the difference is this, it has been thoroughly debated, but we have great faculty leadership. Start with Dr. Gerber who did a terrific job and I thank our faculty leaders for that. There is an ironic story, Dick Gunther is not here with us today, who is the Chair of our Faculty Council, was the primary opponent to it in 1990 and became a very strong advocate for it this time around. It shows that we all make progress, I am not talking about him, and I am talking about me and this instance. Then to our students, I do appreciate their leadership. They did a great job. I of course have signed their impeachment credentials right now. There are some of our students who will get used to this as a process, but change is difficult. This is a transformative moment for this institution because it does set us on a course not only to move to semesters, but also a course to be able to in so many ways recalibrate the nature of our academic work and to modernize the University in ways I think will be very helpful, and set us in the leadership role nationally, and for that I am grateful, so I acknowledge that and I acknowledge our students.

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you very much President Gee.

Next I would like to go to the report from the Fiscal Affairs Committee.

Ms. Davidson:

Thank you Mr. Chairman. Our Committee also met late yesterday afternoon, and the first item on our agenda was a review of our finances, which we are doing on a much more regular basis because of the uncertainty of the times. I am pleased to report that our enrollment is remaining very strong and that is one of the major factors we need to think about, and the Medical Center which is one of our other major factors, as Alan has already talked about, is still positive. There are a few little troubling signs on the horizon there that we will be tracking very closely and that we will review from Alan's request that there be a total review of ProjectONE before we make any additional steps forward.

Mr. Shkurti also shared with us the continued work he and the staff are doing on actual cost savings initiatives. As you know we have a responsibility to do that under our two year budget because of the tuition freeze, but we are much exceeding what we are required to achieve in cost savings. We are doing that under strategic purchasing. We are saving some money on our benefit plan because we are striving to improve the health of our employees. We are doing well in the energy management field, and we are also streamlining the streamlining process we have done with your support. Our capital projects are saving us some money because we do not have as many steps to go through and we are able to complete them much more quickly. Some of the space consolidation is saving us money from the demolition of some buildings that we were maintaining, and the consolidation of Arts and Sciences will in the long haul save us some very precious dollars for the University.

We also had a report on the Governor's budget, which as you know is currently under consideration in the state legislature, probably not to be finalized until the end of June. As it stands right now the funding for the core programs here at The Ohio State University is going very well. As you know there will be another tuition freeze for the school year that starts in the fall, and this tuition freeze will be the first time, I think, since 1955 that the University has gone three years in a row without a tuition increase. Then because there has been an agreement reached, the tuition increase for the following year would not exceed 3.5%. We are very appreciative of the Governor's budget and protecting this core funding for the Universities across the state. We are having some cuts in our line item appropriations that have already affected, obviously, OARDC and also some of the programs in some of our counties, and those are continuing to be troubling signs, but I know we have good work being done by our staff on that issue.

There is one-time stimulus money that should be very helpful to the University in many ways, particularly in the areas of research where there will be more research grants available under the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the National Science Foundation (NSF). There will also be some money available through the Department of Defense, and one thing that we discussed at length today, also some for energy related projects to increase the efficiency or energy buildings. We are also very conscious that one time stimulus money is (in some significant portions) going towards the funding for higher education, and we need to keep that in our minds as we work toward the next budget following this, and whether or not that will be an issue we have to deal with.

There are five items on the agenda for your consideration today. The first is an amended resolution, which was distributed to you before the meeting. It deals with entering into design contracts, authorizing the hiring of a contract construction manager, and also to give the approval to move ahead with the following projects; Cunz Hall, high voltage switch and cable replacement and a facility at OARDC. The other issue here is giving your approval in resolution form for actually what we have done in looking at the budget for ProjectONE. It has been repackaged because of the changes from west of Cannon to east of Cannon and we want to be sure that we have an official Board approval on that.

The other items for approval today include the Master Plan for Ohio University, Lima Regional Campus, which was presented to us yesterday by Dr. Snyder, in which we are recommending approval. The purchase of real property, which would be the Holiday Inn, that everyone knows we have been talking about purchasing and moving very quickly to change it into student dormitory rooms. The lease of space, and this would be the last office space that is available in our Gateway project, to the James Cancer Hospital and the Comprehensive Cancer Center for their use. Then two easements, one to the City of Columbus for sewer that will accommodate our Ohio Union construction, and the other to Columbus Southern, which is an emergency need on their part, but it crosses our property out in Grove City where we have the WOSU antenna and tower. Those are the five items we are recommending for approval today.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

Dr. Cloyd:

Thank you Ms. Davidson. Any questions or comments?

We will now have a report from Agricultural Affairs Committee.

Mr. Fisher:

Thank you Mr. Chairman, and I would like to report at the prompting of the President last night, all the Committee members were on time at 7:30 am this morning, including our retiring chairman. I thought that was pretty impressive.

To elaborate on some of the budget issues as it pertains to the two line items, which were Extension and OARDC, that happens to be 85% of the operating funds for the College of Food, Agricultural and Environmental Sciences, so this is an issue we are working on and it is a very serious budget challenge. Particularly, looking at this year's current budget and the next two years that is about a 24% or over a $6 million cut projected for Extension, and a 14.5% or a $5.4 million for OARDC. It is critical in terms of Extension, which is right now at the forefront of economic development in our rural counties and leadership development for our youth particularly through our 4-H program. OARDC is on the cutting-edge of our participation in Agbiosciences and the new Agricultural Agribusiness economy. Some work to be done there and collectively, constituents and the administration are working on that.

Relative to our Agricultural Technical Institute (ATI), there is some good news. Last year we accepted the Hawks Nest Golf Course as part of our academic program and research facilities at ATI. We have had an increase in our turf grass management students and the opportunity to work there at that golf course has been a great addition to the academic program. In addition, I just want to keep you informed that the cash flow at Hawks Nest is in a positive position, and we are watching that closely. All of us were concerned about that a year ago, and it is performing very well at this point in time.

ATI has also been working very hard to deal with some financial challenges. Ninety-five percent of our resources come from student enrollment at ATI. We have had a slight increase there, and under Dean Moser's leadership, they turned a deficit situation at ATI into a positive cash flow, so that is good news as well.

As Speaker Davidson reported on the facility at OARDC, the Plant and Animal AgroSecurity Facility (PAAR), a much needed facility, it happens that we already have a very strong Food Animal Health Program in place, strong faculty in place but we are lacking facility, so this is a much needed facility. It is one of six such facilities in the country, and it really ties into our goals relative to food security, production in human health and public health preparedness for infectious diseases. We are very happy that this project is moving forward.

We had a review of the student recruitment and enrollment in the College of Food, Agricultural and Environmental Science. We are happy to report that student recruitment is resulting in increased enrollment. We have a nice increase in our financial support package for our students. We are working hard on recruiting minority students in the college. All of our students now complete an internship before graduation, and we continue the emphasis on international studies, and the number of students who have that opportunity during their time at Ohio State is increasing each and every year.

Lastly, the good thing is that even if these numbers are down a little bit because of the economy, 91% of our students, when they receive their degree, have someplace to go the next day by way of continuing education or a job. Even in this economy that is down a little bit, that is a strong number and we are happy about that.

RESOLUTIONS IN MEMORIAM

Resolution No. 2009-75

Samuel W. Bone

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on January 2, 2009, of Samuel W. Bone, Professor Emeritus in the School of Environment and Natural Resources.

Professor Bone held B.S. and M.S. degrees in agronomy from The Ohio State University. He worked as an Extension agronomist for many years, traveling throughout Ohio and collaborating with county and state specialists to develop educational programs related to soil management for improved agricultural production, as well as non-agricultural uses of lands and soils. He was particularly interested in tillage systems and was an early proponent of no-till agriculture.

Professor Bone worked with the USDA-Soil Conservation Service as a soil scientist from 1949-52 and served as a soil survey party leader with the Ohio Department of Natural Resources from 1952-55. He began his OSU career as an instructor in 1955 and retired as a professor of agronomy in 1980. He was active in many professional and technical societies, including the Soil Conservation Society of America, Epsilon Sigma Phi, Gamma Sigma Delta, the American Society of Agronomy, and other national and local professional organizations.

Professor Bone was instrumental in helping to establish the Farm Science Review, one of the largest agricultural expositions in the U.S., now held annually in London, Ohio. He developed a taxation guide for Ohio farmland based on soil productivity, and was instrumental in establishing early guidelines for tillage systems to reduce soil erosion. He was an active supporter of 4-H and frequently taught youth at various state 4-H conservation camps, including one on Kelley's Island in Lake Erie.

Professor Bone served the University community well through his participation on numerous committees, including the Farm Science Review Program and Policy Committee, the Community Resource and Development Committee of the Ohio Cooperative Extension Service, and the Ohio Extension Professors Association.

Sam was a dedicated professional, but never to the exclusion of family and friends. He will be remembered not only for his scholarship but also for his sense of humor, great kindness, love of youth, and generosity to those less fortunate.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Samuel W. Bone its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Paul A. Hickfang

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on February 6, 2009, of Paul A. Hickfang, Associate Professor Emeritus in the School of Music.

Professor Hickfang held degrees from the University of Texas at Austin and from the University of Michigan. During his tenure at OSU, Professor Hickfang occupied the positions of associate professor of Voice, director of Opera and, in the late 1960s and 1970s, served as head of the Vocal Performance Area in the Performance Division of the School of Music. In addition to his exemplary work as a teacher and mentor in the voice area, Professor Hickfang performed regularly as a bass soloist with memorable beauty.

Professor Hickfang was an active and important member of the Columbus artistic community. Of special significance was his very active leadership as a member of the board of Opera Columbus, serving for many years as the coordinator of the Irma Cooper Voice Competitions.

Professor Hickfang's life was defined by an abiding and loving concern for his family, his colleagues, and the world of music beyond vocal performance and teaching. His connection with the School of Music remained close during his 22 years after retirement from the School. His great love for The Ohio State University remained steadfast. His colleagues in the School of Music, his former students, and all of the central Ohio community will remember him for his tremendous contributions to the musical life of our community and for his legacy as a teacher. He served as an intelligent, caring example of the values and the mission of The Ohio State University.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Paul A. Hickfang its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Joseph H. Lynch

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow on the death on December 27, 2008, of Joseph H. Lynch, Distinguished University Professor in the Department of History and The Joe R. Engle Designated Chair in the History of Christianity.

Professor Lynch was born in 1943 in Springfield, Massachusetts. He graduated from Boston College as valedictorian in 1965. He received the M.A. (1966) and Ph.D. (1971) degrees from Harvard University. After teaching for one year at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, Dr. Lynch arrived at Ohio State in September 1971, received tenure in 1977 and was promoted to full professor in 1985.

Widely renowned for his skill as a teacher, Dr. Lynch taught large lecture courses, small research seminars, and classes of intermediate size. His specialty was medieval church history, but he also taught the history of Western Civilization from ancient times through the Middle Ages, as well as a popular course on the Crusades, and medieval history in general. Some of his teaching was informal. He was a devoted mentor for graduate and undergraduate students. He directed 11 students to the Ph.D. degree,

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

21 to the M.A. degree, and three undergraduate students preparing honors theses. He frequently read Latin texts with graduate students on a volunteer basis. This impressive record won him the Alumni Distinguished Teaching Award (1978), the Teaching Award of the Ohio State Alumni of Greater Cleveland (1998), and induction into the Ohio State University Academy of Teaching (1993). A singular recognition of Professor Lynch's reputation as a teacher was an invitation by the University president to deliver the Winter 2007 Commencement Address to Ohio State's graduating class.

Joseph Lynch's eminence in scholarship equaled his brilliance in teaching. His first book Simoniactal Entry in Religious Life dealt with the sale of church offices in the 11th, 12th, and 13th centuries. A second major study, Godparents and Kinship in Early Medieval Europe, appeared in 1986 and received the Ohio Academy of History Book Prize the following year. In 1998 he published Christianizing Kinship: Ritual Sponsorship in Anglo-Saxon England. In 1992 Longman's in England published his widely read book on medieval Christianity, The Medieval Church: A Brief History. A second edition of this work will be released later this year. Shortly before he died, Dr. Lynch completed Early Christianity: A Brief History. The rest of his scholarly work appeared in the form of 14 articles and 49 reviews. Among the accolades Professor Lynch received for scholarship were fellowships from the American Council of Learned Societies, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation. In 1988-89 he was a visiting fellow in the School of Historical Studies of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, New Jersey. In 2008 Dr. Lynch was elected a Fellow of the Medieval Academy.

Professor Lynch's record of professional service was also notable. He served as director of the Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies, 1978-83, and as chair of the Department of History, 1989-93. In 1993 he received both the College of Humanities Exemplary Faculty Award and the Ohio Academy of History Distinguished Service Award. In 2001-02 he served as president of the Catholic Historical Association.

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor Joseph H. Lynch its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

George S. Serif

The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on January 15, 2009, of George S. Serif, Professor Emeritus in the Department of Biochemistry.

Professor Serif held B.Sc., M. Sc., and Ph.D. degrees from McMaster University. He taught at the University of South Dakota before coming to The Ohio State University in 1962. He taught perhaps 20,000 students during his career at Ohio State and was one of the Department's most valued teachers. He demanded excellence and students profited from his high standards. His teaching was recognized by the Dean's Excellence Award in 2004.

He was promoted to full professor in 1967 and then served as chairperson of the Department of Biochemistry from 1968-80. He retired with the title of Professor Emeritus in December of 2004.

Professor Serif's research, supported both by the National Institutes of Health and the National Science Foundation, resulted in the publication of about 80 papers focused on thyroid biochemistry, the biosynthesis of L-fucose and of thioglycosides. He guided the work of numerous graduate students, a number of whom went on to high academic positions themselves.

April 3, 2009 meeting, Board of Trustees

On behalf of the University community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family of Professor George S. Serif its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It was directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the Board's heartfelt sympathy.

Professorship Fund in Ottoman and Turkish History

The Professorship Fund in Ottoman and Turkish History was established April 3, 2009, by the Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University in accordance with the guidelines approved by the Board of Directors of The Ohio State University Foundation, with gifts from an anonymous donor.

The purpose of this endowment is to support, in perpetuity, the study of Ottoman and modern Turkish history, a field taught and studied at The Ohio State University since the 1930s, and to enhance the national and international competitiveness and distinction of the University in this field. The donor intends more specifically to establish an endowment of $1,000,000, in keeping with the currently established 2006 endowment levels, to create the named professorship in Ottoman and modern Turkish history.

Until the principal of this fund reaches $1,000,000, the annual distribution shall be used first to provide research support funding for graduate students in the same field; if that cannot be done, the income from the fund shall be used to purchase books in the same field for the library.

When the principal of this fund reaches $1,000,000, the annual distribution shall be used to support a named professorship position in Ottoman and Turkish studies. Appointees to this position shall be distinguished scholar-teachers known for their positive interest in Turkish history and culture, their high standing in the international community of scholars in the field, their expertise in the history of the Turkish republic as well as of the Ottoman Empire, their broad linguistic command of the Ottoman and modern Turkish language of different periods, and the originality and impact of their historical scholarship. After a rigorous international search, appointment to the position shall be made upon the recommendation of the dean of the College of Humanities to the executive vice president and provost and approved by the OSU Board of Trustees.

In keeping with the stated purpose of this endowed fund, if the fund grows or if the principal can be increased sufficiently over time, the form in which the fund supports the field may be revised, up to and including the creation of an endowed chair at the

Alternatively, if the fund never reaches the $1,000,000 level, the distribution shall continue to be used first to provide research support funding for graduate students in the same field; if that cannot be done, the income from the fund shall be used to purchase books in the same field for the library.

The need for the fund shall not be deemed to have ceased to exist until it becomes impossible to use the distribution of the fund to support Ottoman and Turkish studies in any way whatsoever at this University.

If in any year the income of the fund is not fully used to support the stated purpose of the endowment, any such unused income will be reinvested to principal.

The investment and management of and expenditures from all endowment funds shall be in accordance with University policies and procedures as approved by the Board of Trustees. As authorized by the Board of Trustees, a fee may be assessed against the endowment portfolio for the University's costs of development and fund management.

It is the desire of the donor that this fund should benefit the University in perpetuity. The need for the fund shall not be deemed to have ceased to exist until it becomes impossible to use the distribution of the fund to support Ottoman and Turkish studies in any way whatsoever at this University. If, in the future, the need for this fund should cease to exist or so diminish as to provide unused distributions, then another use shall be designated by the Board of Trustees and Foundation Board as recommended by the dean of the College of Humanities in consultation with the chairperson of the Department of History. Any such alternate distributions shall be made in a manner as nearly aligned with the original intent of the donor as good conscience and need dictate.
