BRENDA L. DERVIN

Synopsis: The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow upon the death on December 31, 2022, of Brenda L. Dervin, Professor Emeritus of Communication in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Professor Dervin received her BS from Cornell University in 1960, followed by an MA and PhD from Michigan State University in 1971. Her first academic position was in the School of Library and Information Sciences at Syracuse University, which began her lifelong work in information sciences before she moved on to the School of Communication at the University of Washington in 1977. In 1986 Professor Dervin arrived at The Ohio State University where she chaired the Department of Communication (now the School of Communication) before returning to research and teaching. Professor Dervin’s scholarship focused on the role of sense-making in dialogue and human information behavior. She was a national and international leader in developing Sense-Making Theory and Methodology, a philosophically derived approach for studying communication as communication. This methodology has been used particularly by researchers in communication and in library and information sciences. In 2000 Professor Dervin was awarded an honorary doctorate in the social sciences for her contributions by the University of Helsinki.

Serving in many disciplinary roles, Professor Dervin was recognized by both the communication and information science fields. She was an elected a Fellow of the International Communication Association and served as its first female president from 1985 to 1987. She co-edited multiple book series on paradigm dialogues and theorizing in the communication sciences. In recognition of her scholarly contributions, Professor Dervin received a Joan H. Huber fellowship from the College of Arts of Sciences at The Ohio State University in 2004; in 2006 she received the American Society for Information Science and Technology’s award for outstanding contribution to Information Behavior Research that was followed by her election as a Fellow in 2009.

Professor Dervin mentored many graduate students from several universities throughout her career. At The Ohio State University she supervised 20 doctoral dissertations and masters’ theses. She also oversaw funded research that included a million dollar grant from the Institute for Museum and Library Studies. She lectured or gave workshops on her Sense-Making Theory and Methodology to universities in 19 countries. Following Professor Dervin’s retirement in 2012 she relocated back to Seattle, Washington, but remained in contact with former students and colleagues.

On behalf of the university community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family and friends of Professor Brenda L. Dervin its deepest sympathy and sense of understanding of their loss. It is directed that this resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to her friends and family as an expression of the Board’s heartfelt sympathy.

Synopsis: The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow regarding the death on September 11, 2022 of Gordon Clark, Professor Emeritus in the Department of Integrated Systems Engineering in the College of Engineering. He was 87.

Gordon received a B.S. from The Ohio State University College of Engineering in the Department of Industrial and Systems Engineering in 1957. He then served as an engineering platoon officer in the US Marine Corps in Lebanon for 15 months and was subsequently assigned to the Barstow Supply Center and Barstow Repair Division.

After his military service, Gordon worked as a Senior Research Engineer at North American Rockwell from 1961 – 1965. He then continued his engineering education, receiving an M.S. in Industrial Engineering from Southern California University in 1965 and a Ph.D. in Industrial and Systems Engineering from The Ohio State University in 1968. He joined the faculty at The Ohio State University in the Industrial and Systems Engineering Department, where he was active in research and teaching before retiring as Professor Emeritus in 1996.

Over the course of his research and teaching career, Gordon made numerous important contributions research in the fields of simulation, system optimization and quality assurance, both in terms of basic research and the applications of his findings. As part of his research activities, he was an active member and Fellow of the American Society for Quality Assurance. And he continued his work as a consultant for a number of companies after retirement.

Gordon’s family includes his wife Sue and the two children that they raised, Karen and Scott. He was devoted to them and his grandchildren, as well as being active in the community, for example serving as a long-time teacher of adult Bible study at Worthington Presbyterian Church. Gordon was also known as an avid jogger loved who loved to run daily, including completion of several marathons. In addition, Sue and Gordon regularly played bridge with friends.

Gordon will be remembered for the spirit of comradery and intellectual exploration that he provided as a key member of the faculty in the Industrial and Systems Engineering Program. He helped shape the ISE Program into a family where new ideas and friendships blossomed for both faculty and staff. And through this same dedication and joy for life he provided an exceptional home with his wife and two children. Gordon will continue to be part of us all through the gifts he gave to his students, the ISE faculty and staff, his wife, his children, and his grandchildren.

Norton H. Neff

Synopsis: The Board of Trustees of The Ohio State University expresses its sorrow regarding the death on September 5th, 2022, of Norton H. Neff, Professor Emeritus in the Department of Biological Chemistry and Pharmacology in the College of Medicine. He was 86 years old.

Professor Neff received his BS (1958), MS (1960), and PhD (1964) in Pharmacology/Chemistry from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science. He did his postdoctoral research under Bernard B. Brodie, Laboratory of Chemical Pharmacology, National Heart Institute (1963-1965), and Erminio Costa, Columbia University (1965-1968) in the emergent field of Neuropsychopharmacology. He then joined the Laboratory of Preclinical Pharmacology at the National Institute of Mental Health, advancing to Chief Section of Biochemical Pharmacology and Deputy Director (1968-1984). During these years, the Neff laboratory produced and published groundbreaking research on the regulation of neurotransmitters in the brain and periphery. His pioneering and highly cited research contributed to the establishment of the neurochemical basis and treatment of neuropsychiatric disorders. During his tenure he mentored and trained scores of neuropsychopharmacologists who distinguished themselves as researchers, academicians, and leaders at national and international institutions.

In 1984 he joined the OSU community to lead the Department of Pharmacology in the College of Medicine, where he was Professor of Pharmacology, Neuroscience, and Psychiatry. Professor Neff served the University with dedication for 28 years. He distinguished himself as an effective leader, excellent educator, and innovative researcher. Under his leadership the Department of Pharmacology attained national recognition, attracting strong faculty, increasing research funding, and expanding its graduate student program. Excellence mattered to Chairman Neff, and he created an environment that fostered academic and scientific success. In his 16 years as chairman, countless students and postdoctoral fellows were educated, new educational programs were developed, and important contributions to medical research were made, expanding the reputation of the College of Medicine and OSU. He deeply cared about his faculty, students, and staff and kept an open-door policy. He was a good listener, a sage and frank mentor, and a thoughtful administrator whose experience and insight were highly valued. He advocated for his faculty and was a strong proponent of policies supporting junior faculty development. He displayed strong leadership skills and did not shy away from challenges. His character and integrity as an administrator, educator, and scientist were exemplary.

Professor Neff established the Neuropsychopharmacology program in the College of Medicine with continuous NIH funding. He teamed up with his wife and longtime research partner, Professor Maria Hadjiconstantinou, and published seminal work on retina neurochemical pharmacology, neurotransmitter transporters, neurodegeneration and repair in aging and Parkinson’s Disease, and nicotine addiction. He was particularly proud of the many graduate, MD/PhD, and postdoctoral researchers trained in his laboratory, whom he considered family and kept in contact with, never forgetting birthday and holiday wishes.

In 2000, Professor Neff stepped down as chair, and dedicated his time and effort to medical and graduate student education. He served as Assistant Dean for Graduate Student Education (2004-2007), Associate Director (2004-2007) of the newly established Integrated Biomedical Science Graduate Program, and Director of Medical Student Research (2007-2010). In these capacities, he promoted graduate student education, advocated for medical student research education, and introduced programs that enriched medical student education and life. He was a wise and patient advisor and a caring teacher beloved by many. Professor Neff was an active and highly respected member of the OSU community, which he served with loyalty and enthusiasm until his retirement in 2012. Through academic committees, the OSU Foundation Board of Directors, and the University Senate he worked tirelessly to make OSU a premier learning institution.

On behalf of the entire university community, the Board of Trustees expresses to the family and loved ones of Professor Norton H. Neff its deepest sympathy and compassion for their loss. It is directed that the resolution be inscribed upon the minutes of the Board of Trustees and that a copy be tendered to his family as an expression of the board’s heartfelt sympathy and appreciation.
